London, Nov. 14.—Headed "Should Dunraven Apologize?" the St. James Gazette publishes a leading article in which it again severely criticises his lordship. It says: "Lord Dunraven arrived in New York with the preconceived idea that the Defender people were going to play this trick upon him, and having expected it was going to be done, he found an easy way to convince himself." The article concludes: "Let Lord Dunraven return to New York and assist the New York Yacht club committee in its investigation. If he can prove it, we know the Americans well enough to believe that they will acknowledge he has been wronged. If he does not prove it, the accuser owes Mr. Iselin and others a very handsome apology. Otherwise, we are afraid that most people will think that temper and mortification betrayed him into behaving rather badly."

THIRTY CHILDREN BURNED.

Terrible Result of a Fire in a School Building in the West Indies.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 14.—A dispatch from Granada, British West Indies, says that a school building there in which were 150 children caught fire recently, and before anything could be done the whole building was ablaze. In spite of the heroic efforts of the people the building was destroyed. Thirty-one charred bodies, including that of the teacher, had been taken out when the dispatch was sent. The fire was believed to be of incendiary origin and two boys who had been severely punished by the teacher and suspended from school were believed to be the authors of the crime. They were arrested, but so far had not confessed.

ARRESTED FOR LIBEL.

Editor of a Binghamton Paper Held in $1,000 for Trial.

Binghamton, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Guy W. Beardsley, editor of the Binghamton Evening Herald, was indicted by the grand jury and arrested on a bench warrant yesterday, charged with libeling Henry C. Lines of Hallstead, Pa., on Nov. 4. Beardsley was taken before Judge Parker and pleaded not guilty to the charge, reserving the right to withdraw the plea later and enter one of guilty if deemed advisable. Judge Parker fixed the bail for Beardsley's appearance before the court of sessions at $1,000, which was furnished by two sureties.

St. Louis, Nov. 14.—A special to the Republic from Dallas, Tex., says: William A. Brady has telegraphed to Dan A. Stuart for J. J. Corbett, saying: "Corbett surrenders championship and belt to Maher, and will back him for $10,000 against Fitzsimmons." The telegram was forwarded to Stuart at El Paso, who sent the following reply to his Dallas representative: "Tell Brady that Corbett had better win that belt before he disposes of it."

SOVEREIGN'S ADDRESS

Delivered Before the K. of L. General Assembly.

He Urges an Aggressive Campaign and the Extension of the Field of Operations of the Order—His Opinion of the Status of Capital and Labor.

Washington, Nov. 14.—The question of admitting certain delegates whose rights to seats were contested on the ground that under the constitution the proper apportionment had not been observed was disposed of yesterday afternoon by the admission of Delegates De Leon of New York assembly district No. 49 and O'Brien of district assembly No. 30, Massachusetts. Both of these men are said to be anti-administration delegates and will aid in the fight to oust the administration now in power in the general assembly. This admission was a compromise. It appears, however, that the administration people have a very comfortable majority of the votes in the assembly. The report of Grand Master Workman Sovereign was endorsed as read.

Sovereign's Address.

After making an attack upon previous general officers, including the grand master workman, he said: "To-day, for the first time in many years, our order stands before the world a united whole with an unbroken front, battling for the brotherhood of man and the freedom of labor after the thraldom of greed and the so-called independent movement, which had its origin in selfishness and dishonor, had sunk behind the horizon in the industrial field to be mourned by monopolies of the country who fondly hoped it would crush forever the order of the Knights of Labor.

To Extend Operations.

"Now that this order has proven its ability to live in spite of the aggressions of organized capital, and withstand the assaults of designing persons, who sought to subordinate its usefulness to their selfish desires, I would urge that this session of the general assembly be devoted, as far as possible, to the work of extending the field of our operations.

Capital and Labor.

"Labor is now between the devil and the deep sea with the devil running down the beach and the tide flowing in. Capital has monopolized the elements of production and labor is in competition with itself for the right to live, and there can never be an exact justice to labor and a final solution to the industrial question while the competitive and wage systems continue to hamper the passions of greed and grind the faces of the poor. A money oligarchy is fast wiping out the last vestige of individual liberty. Construction by judicial authority is already given to law, placing all labor organizations in the category of criminal conspiracies.

Aggressive Campaign Urged.

"Year by year the laws become more exciting in their application to the poor and more liberal in their application to the corporations and the idle holders of idle capital. Year by year labor grows weaker and more dependent and the possibilities of resuscitation more doubtful. The industrial masses are fast being reduced to circumstances that overshadow independence and manhood with the struggle for bread and shelter. With these facts before us I take the liberty to urge upon this general assembly the necessity of preparing for an aggressive campaign against the common foe."

Treasurer Hayes' Report.

The report of Treasurer Hayes has thus far been religiously guarded. It is in the hands of a committee and there is an intimation that it may be given publicity later in the session. There has been some criticism about the disposition of the Philadelphia property of the organization and the amount derived therefrom. It is also said that the financial statement is not as prosperous as it has been in the past, and the diminution in membership is also commented upon. All of these things, however, are merely hinted at and none of the members will talk upon the subject save in the most guarded fashion.

AWFUL TRIPLE TRAGEDY

Kuntz Killed a Woman and Child and Himself.

Robbery the Motive—Mother and Daughter Lured to a Lonely Spot and Butchered in Jack-the-Ripper Style—Committed Suicide When Accused of the Crime.

Laredo, Tex., Nov. 14.—A diabolical murder of a mother and child, it is supposed for the purpose of robbery, was revealed yesterday, followed by the self-destruction of the fiend when he realized that his crime had been discovered and lynching awaited him in all probability. It is believed that the murdered woman was Mrs. Caroline Menn of Dallas, Tex. Her child was a girl of ten years. The murderer is supposed to be William, or Samuel, Kuntz of Kansas City. Kuntz stated while here that he had been a master mechanic for a railroad, and letters were found in his trunk addressed to William Kuntz, 157 Grand avenue, Kansas City.

Discovery of the Bodies.

Last Monday evening a tall, fine looking man, accompanied by a woman and pretty girl, registered at the Hotel Hamilton as C. Schuler and family. Tuesday Schuler, who was really Kuntz, hired a buggy and took the woman and girl to the depot, despite the inclement weather. At 5 o'clock he returned the vehicle and ate supper at the hotel without exciting any suspicion, retiring afterwards. During the night a sheep herder discovered two bodies lying in the brush in Chacon bottom, just beyond a small reservoir, two and a half miles from Central City. He noticed trails where the bodies had been dragged through the thorns by the murderer, and the prints of the buggy wheels were noticed on the ground. Without touching the bodies he came to the city and notified the recorder. Officers proceeded at once to the scene of the crime and removed the bodies to the city. They were identified as those of the woman and child who had gone riding with Kuntz.

The Murderer Kills Himself.

The news of the murders was known all over the city in a short time and the sequel soon came. The proprietor of the hotel knocked at Kuntz's room and asked him where his family was. Kuntz replied that he had taken them to Aztec, where they had taken the limited train for Mexico. "I think you are mistaken," said the proprietor, "your family is not in Mexico." Kuntz shut the door and drawing a revolver shot himself through the heart. On his person was found a cigar case containing over $1,600 in bank bills. On the cigar case was stamped Sam Kuntz. It is believed his brother lives in Fort Worth and he was at once notified of the tragedy. Kuntz spent most of his time while here in saloons and no doubt meditated the deed.

Identity of the Victims.

In the murdered woman's trunk was found a marriage license bearing the names of Catherine Menn and Theodore Menn. Kuntz was once chief engineer of the Heims brewery, Kansas City. A letter was found in the woman's effects dated October 4 from G. B. Brown, a Fort Worth, Tex., merchant, addressed to Mrs. Caroline Menn, Dallas, Tex., the merchant requesting her to send a check for $25. From this it is inferred the woman had a bank account. She stated that Mr. Christen, her son, kept a hotel at Forth Worth, and it is believed Kuntz stopped at this hotel, found out the woman had money, enticed her here to murder her and get her money. A telegram was received here from Fort Worth stated that Mrs. Menn's son had left that city to come here.

The Child's Death.

The wounds on the child's body and the position in which it was found indicate that she died a lingering death. She was cut slightly on the left knee as though she had fallen on a sharp stone and the left side of her head was cut as though by a glancing blow of a club. There was another wound on the top of her head, but death had come from a knife wound in the neck, severing the jugular vein and carotid artery. The body was found on its back, the little arms raised as though to ward off the murderous blow.

Jack-the-Ripper Methods.

Mrs. Menn, who was rather stout and about 40 years of age, was shot in the breast and probably struck a crushing blow on the head, breaking the skull. The fiend, in Jack-the-Ripper style, then used his knife, stabbing his victim once on the front side of the shoulder, the blow ranging downward, once in the centre of the left breast, twice in the stomach, once in the abdomen and once in the right side between the sixth and seventh ribs. The blood-stained murderer then probably killed the child with his dripping knife to make sure there would be no living witness of his deed.

PASSED THE LIE.

Quarrel Between Gov. Brown of Kentucky and a Clerk.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 14.—In the state house yesterday Gov. Brown and W. H. Newhall, a clerk in the auditor's office, quarreled and passed the lie. Bystanders prevented them from coming to blows. Newhall accused the governor of voting the republican ticket and acting the part of a traitor. The governor entered an emphatic denial.

FIVE DROWNED.

Steam Oyster Boat Capsized Near Rockaway Inlet.

New York, Nov. 14.—Five lives were lost yesterday by the capsizing of the steam oyster boat James W. Boyle near Rockaway inlet. A strong wind from the northeast was rolling up a big swell over the shores which separate the ocean and the lower bay when Capt. Robert H. Deakin of the tug-boat Mutual, returning from sea with a string of city refuse scows, saw the oyster boat headed to the eastward and making for the mouth of the inlet, which is the entrance to Jamaica bay. That was at 7 o'clock. The tide was half-ebb and the tug was struggling along, making slow headway. Half an hour later, Capt. Deakin saw the boat steaming around the bell buoy which marks the channel and heading to the northwest for the inlet. The change of course brought her into the trough of the sea and she rolled heavily. She had gone but a few lengths when a big sea was seen to sweep over her forward deck, where there was an open gangway. It lifted off the pilot house and upper deck and heeled the vessel way over. Before she righted another comber dashed itself over the luckless craft, and she disappeared from view, carrying with her the crew of five. Only the top of the pilot house was left to mark the spot where she went down.

YOUTHFUL INCENDIARIES.

Confess To Causing Several Fires in Boston and Vicinity.

Boston, Nov. 14.—A brace of youthful firebugs were before Fire Marshall Whitcomb yesterday and made confession to that official. Willie Hargraves, 12 years old, was suspected of having set many of the small fires that have alarmed the residents of Malden during the past few months and he admitted that he was the cause of some of them. The marshall thinks that several more can be traced to him. It is said that Hargraves is the son of the now famous Nellie Woods, one of the "knockout drops" women who recently figured in the Boston courts. The second lad to be brought before the marshal was Willie Barron of South Boston, who is but seven and a half years old, and who confessed to setting several fires in that district.

TO PREVENT LYNCHINGS.

A Recommendation To Be Made by Gov. O'Ferrall of Virginia.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 14.—Among other interesting recommendations which Gov. O'Ferrall will make to the new legislature which will convene here on Dec. 4, will be one to make bondsmen of deputy sheriffs liable for damages to the heirs of the victims of lynch law. The proposition is that unless it can be shown that such officials exhausted every possible effort to prevent such acts of outlawry they and their bondsmen shall be liable in proceedings for damages which may be instituted. This, it is believed, would go a long way towards stopping lynchings, as the officials and their bondsmen would then be directly interested in crushing out the first symptoms of mob violence.

KILLED BY A BOY.

Lester Armstrong Shot in Mistake for a Porcupine.

Calais, Me., Nov. 14.—Lester Armstrong, 32 years old, was shot and killed at Perry, Me., by a boy named Fred Leighton. Armstrong attended a dance and when returning home under the influence of liquor, laid down beside the road and went to sleep. Young Leighton, starting out after game, saw what he supposed was a porcupine and fired. Hearing a groan he ran home and told his brother he had shot a bear. They both returned and found Armstrong wounded in the hip and he died shortly after his removal.

PRACTICALLY HELPLESS

Sultan's Efforts To Quell Outbreaks Are in Vain.

Financial Trouble and the Extension of the Revolutionary Movement in Syria Hamper Him—Slaughter Still Going On—Report of the Massacre at Marash.

Constantinople, Nov. 14.—The porte continues its efforts to restore order in Asia Minor, and has dispatched two generals to command the Turkish troops at Erzeroum and Bitlis. The prevailing financial troubles and the extension of the revolutionary movement in Syria greatly hamper the action of the government, and, in addition to these obstacles, the Radifs or Landwehr, who have been called out, refuse to leave their homes, fearing that they will be attacked by the Druses.

Bloodshed at Malatia.

The news received from the provinces is generally bad. At Malatia, about one hundred miles from Marash, there has been some bloodshed, several Christians having been killed, including four Jesuit priests who were under French protection. The Kurds in the Dersim district have instigated trouble in Cesarea, but no details of the disturbances are as yet obtainable. The Kurds have also created a panic in Moosh.

Protection for Armenians.

The Turkish government authorities have promised the Armenians, who are in possession of the barracks at Zeitoun, that they will not be molested and will be allowed to return to their homes in safety upon the condition that they surrender the Turkish arms, ammunition and prisoners in their hands.

Missionaries' Situation.

In reply to an inquiry from United States Minister Terrell regarding the situation of the missionaries at Harput, Commissioner Darnham has replied that while they are alive and well their position is one of extreme danger.

MOSLEMS ATTACK CHRISTIANS.

Governor of Marash Paid no Heed to Requests for Protection.

Boston, Nov. 15.—Reliable correspondence received in Boston from Constantinople states that the attitude of the Moslems in Marash at the end of October was so menacing that the heads of Christian sects called together on the governor asking special measures of protection. On Friday, the governor having paid no attention to this request, the Moslems attacked the Christians, wounding quite a number and causing a general flight of all parties to their homes.

Petition for Aid.

The heads of the Christian sects then made a new petition for protection, this time in writing, and addressed separately to the Governor and the commander of the troops. Still nothing was done to check the Moslems. A general assault was then made on the Christian quarter and a large number of Christians were killed and wounded.

Reason for the Massacre.

The Armenian bishop and the Armenian Catholic bishop and the Protestant pastor sent a collective telegram, saying that the slaughter was still going on, and begging for something to be done to stop it. The Turks say that the reason of the massacre is the assassination of four police by the people of Zeitoun. The tone of remark among the staff at the sultan's palace has been all along that the Armenians shall be killed before the reforms can be executed.

NO APOSTOLIC DELEGATION.

Mgr. Averardi, Chosen To Go to Mexico, Will Remain in Rome.

Rome, Nov. 14.—The pope has suspended the creation of an apostolic delegation to Mexico, and Mgr. Nicola Averardi, who was chosen by the pope some months ago for the Mexican mission, will remain at his post in Rome. At the time that the appointment of Mgr. Averardi was announced it was stated that serious disagreements had arisen between the bishops and the Mexican government. The episcopate of Mexico, it is said, has not looked with favor upon the idea of an apostolic delegation to that country.

ADHERES TO HIS STATEMENT.

Lord Dunraven Declines To See Newspaper Representatives.

London, Nov. 14.—The Graphic today will say that Lord Dunraven declines to see any newspaper men in reference to his pamphlet regarding the international yacht races, but that he absolutely adheres to all the statements made by him in the pamphlet. He has left London, according to the Graphic, and is not expected to return until after his projected visit to Ireland.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Mrs. Grover Cleveland, accompanied by Misses Ruth and Esther Cleveland, were spectators at the matinee of Palmer Cox's Brownies in the Lafayette Square theatre yesterday afternoon. It was the first time the children had ever seen a stage performance.

Not Guilty of Murder.

Cape Charles, Va., Nov. 14.—The four men, Wm. Bloxom, Pervis Bloxom, John Zimbar and Frank Shields, accused of murdering the Hudson brothers on October 6, near the life-saving station, were acquitted last evening at Eastville, Va., by a jury which rendered a verdict without leaving their seats.

American Apples in London.

VICISSITUDES OF POLITICS.

It is not often that the demoralizing tendency of indulging to actively in modern politics is so forcibly realized as in the wrecked life of ex-Comptroller Wemple, of New York. Here is a man who had a prosperous business, an influential standing in the community, and all the emoluments that an ordinarily private citizen could desire, and yet his thrist for public office, and its attendant addition to his personal importance among the people, was so great that he indulged in methods to achieve desired ends that has resulted in a wrecked life. Business was neglected, health ruined, friends forgotten, everything made subservient to anything that might continue possible the career which he had a desire to live. His arrest and disgrace is a culmination of circumstances and acts which are peculiar phases of American political life, and which ultimately, in nine cases out of ten, prove disastrous to the person indulging in them. Mr. Wemple's case is a little blacker than the usual run, that is all.

Two Chosen Freeholders are to be elected at the coming city election.

Assemblyman Lower, of Ocean, and Assemblyman Derouse, of Camden, are among the candidates for the speakership of the Assembly.

Who wouldn't rather see a pretty girl, dressed in a stylish gown, than to see a blooded horse? That's the reason why the horse show is a misnomer.

The Kirmess cleared expenses in two days. An example of woman's hustling and persistent work. Congratulations, ladies.

Let the Jersey City police be praised. They arrested the countryman who came on to buy greengoods. He is the man who deserves punishment, even though he always gets the little end of the horn.

New Jersey Republicans are remarkably demure in their demonstrative enthusiasm over their victory, which was the biggest of any of the November landslides. Not a bonfire, not a torchlight parade, not a speech, not even a tin horn, has been heard or seen in this stronghold of G. O. Pness. Haven't they got over their surprise, or what is the why and the wherefore of their quietude?

If Mayor Gilbert does not approve or veto the electric street railway extension ordinance with his signature today, it will become a law by expiration of the ten days' limit from the time it was passed by the Common Council. There is no likelihood of his Honor vetoing it.

Thomas F. Bayard, United States Ambassador to England, addressed a meeting in Edinburgh, Tuesday, and remarked that there should be a clear understanding between England and the United States. But first of all let's have an understanding with Lord Dunraven, though the English yachtsman doesn't evince much of a disposition to look at it that way.

Bitter, sarcastic, insinuating and incisive have the Christian Citizenship Union of Newark addressed the Board of Police Commissioners of that city over the violations of the excise laws. They characterize their actions as "official sham" and write that "It may become necessary for the Union to state more precisely your subserviency to influences brought to bear upon you in this matter, and to use other means than the appeal to your consciences and manhood."

The Synod of New Jersey at its late meeting arranged to hold a Foreign Missions Congress in Trenton, November 20th and 21st. Each church in the Synod has been invited to send, at least, two delegates to the Congress. The programme has been prepared by the Permanent Committee on Foreign Missions, Rev. Henry S. Butler, D. D., Chairman. Pastors and elders, secretaries and missionaries, men and women, have places upon it.

A special meeting will be held in Salvation Army hall on Tuesday night, the 26th inst., beginning at eight o'clock, conducted by Captain March, of No. 9 Bowery Corps, New York, who is well known in this city. Her many friends will be pleased to see her again. Miss VanOrden, the banker's daughter, will also be present. Mr. Harris, of Orange, and several auxiliaries of this city are expected to attend the meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

The weekly press bulletin of the State Christian Endeavor Society has the following about Plainfield: "The executive committee recently made arrangements for the evangelistic work during the coming winter. A conference social is to be held on the 21st inst. The working committee will meet the lookout and prayer meeting committees from the societies to advise as to the best way to inaugurate and carry out the details of evangelistic work. Perfect harmony exists between the pastors and the Endeavorers in this project.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. The Understanding of a Subject.

This was a well known axiom more than 50 years ago, "If you want to understand a subject, write a book about it."

Almost identical with the drift of this saying was the answer of Dr. Whately to a friend at Oxford, who complained to him that he could not understand logic and that he must take a tutor or "coach." "Take a coach?" was Whately's reply. "Take a pupil." In both cases the meaning was the same—namely, docendo discimus.—Notes and Queries.

A BUNDLE OF NERVES

Weak, Nervous, Sleepless, Tired and Run-Down.

Effect of Weak Nerves—Loss of Nerve Power.

Regain Health, Make Yourself Strong by

The Great Restorer of Nerve Force Vigor, Power.

Dr. Green's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

Nothing is so common today as the complaint of weak nerves. You hear it on every hand. Its results confront us in every walk of life. The housewife is worn out in her daily round of duties and is "just as nervous as she can be" over every little detail; the merchant is overcome with the burdens and cares of business; is "so tired out he dosen't know what to do;" the professional man "has no interest in anything" he is so exhausted with his perplexing duties; almost everyone feels as if he or she "would fall to pieces," their nerves are so unstrung with the excitment of our modern life. Every walk and occupation is strewn with innumerable wrecks of naturally strong and robust constitutions, which are the inevitable result of weak nerves. How shall it be remedied? Nothing will so surely and safely do this as Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It is the great nerve restorer, the remedy which strengthens and invigorates brain and nerves, builds up the blood and gives strength, energy and power to the body.

It will make you well and strong as it did Mrs. Emma Blodgett, of 48 6th st., Dover, N. H. She writes as follows:

"I had a severe trouble with my nerves, and also considerable difficulty with my stomach, such as the belching of gas and the usual pain and distress of dyspepsia. I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and it proved a blessing to me. I think everything of it, and feel that I could not live without it.

"I had a friend in Brockton who had neuralgia about the heart and was confined to her bed, being unable to help herself. I recommended her to take Dr. Greene's Nervura and she sent for a bottle and commenced taking it. She was so bad she could not turn in bed without attacks of acute and distressing pain, but after using four doses of the medicine the pain left her and in two weeks she was out of bed. It was in my opinion a great victory for Dr. Greene's medicine. I always recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to sufferers wherever I meet them."

Why waste time in trying uncertain and untried remedies, when here is a physician's prescription, a discovery made by the greatest living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th St., New York City. If you take this medicine you can consider yourself under Dr. Greene's professional care, and you can consult him or write to him about your case, freely and without charge. This is a guarantee that his remedy will cure, possessed by no other medicine in the world.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

The Dunellen seniors will play the North Plainfield eleven a game of football on Saturday.

Wm. M. McCutchen expected to go to Elizabeth to play left end on the Trilby team yesterday afternoon.

The crack Alis players go to North Plainfield Saturday afternoon to meet their antagonists of last Saturday again.

Haslett Glazebrook, of Elizabeth, manager of the "Trilby" football eleven, spent Tuesday with William M. McCutchen of Rockview terrace.

The Spartan Literary and Athletic Society accepted at its meeting Tuesday evening the challenge of the Y.M.C.A. Juniors for a football game at Westfield. The game will be played on Thanksgiving Day afternoon. In the morning the Spartans play the Dunellens at Plainfield.

From present indications the first Y. M. C. A. eleven is going to have a rattling good team for Thanksgiving Day. Louis E. Waring expects to play with the team and hopes to secure the services of Samuel Hall, of the Elizabeth Athletic Club, as centre, and Charles Denise, of the same club, as quarter back. They are both Plainfield men. Wesley Abbott will be home from Yale and may fill the position of tackle. Waring will probably go behind the line. The game is with the Westfield.

The unexpected victory over the crimson has given a new life to football at Princeton. When the season opened Princeton supporters entertained little hope of winning the championship from Yale, and later, when the Harvard game was arranged, the wise ones said it was but adding another defeat to the Tigers unhappy season. That the latter contest has turned out to Princeton's credit is considerable of a revelation of the strength of the Tiger team, and now Princeton students will go up to Manhattan Field on November 23d with their souls full of hope.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

The Park Club bowling team will meet the Casinos of Roselle on the latter's alleys this evening.

The Crescent Wheelmen's team spent most of last evening in practicing for Friday's game with the Plainfield Catholic club.

The bowling team of the Y.M.C.A. turned out for practice last evening and several scrub games were rolled. No high scores were made.

The deciding game between the bowlers of the Crescent Wheelmen and those of the Westfield Club which was to have taken place at Westfield Tuesday evening, has been postponed indefinitely.

The opening games in the Standard League, bowled Tuesday night, resulted in a loss of two for the Cranford Athletic Club. The contests took place on the Westfield Club alleys, with the following scores: First game, Westfield, 744; Cranford, 735: second game, Westfield, 665; Cranford, 644.

The opening contest of the Central Journal League was bowled Tuesday night on the alleys of the New Jersey Athletic Club at Bergen Point. There was an enthusiastic gathering of bowlers and club members to witness the game, which was also the first trial of skil between the Cranfords and the Jerseys. The Jerseys won by the score of 1489 to 1477.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

The Climax Gun Club will hold a club shoot on next Thursday afternoon.

A private shoot is being held on the club grounds in Hyde's woods this afternoon.

The New Jersey Fish and Game Commission held their annual meeting in Jersey City yesterday. In view of the fact that the new fish and game law was made a political issue in Salem, Warren, Hunterdon, Morris, Sussex and Bergen counties, the discussion of strong and weak points of the law was of considerable interest. They favor the propagation of smelt, and have purchased 20,364,300 eggs, of which 3,000,000 were placed in the Hackensack river, and the balance in the Raritan. They desire the law to be made more stringent, to prevent persons from handling game out of season, by eliminating the word "unlawfully" from the present act.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Physical Director MacPhie, of the Y. M. C. A., wishes to call the attention of all business men to the gymnasium class which meets Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons of each week at 5:30.

The joint indoor games of the Xavier Athletic Club and the Twelfth Regiment, N. Y. N. G., will take place tomorrow evening. Neal Head, Alex. Muir and George Firstbrook, of this city, are entered.

Members of the Y. M. C. A. will enjoy a hare and hound chase Thanksgiving morning, starting from the building at nine o'clock. The hares will be Walter Probasco, A. B. Crane, Clarence Thorne, Garfield Pike, Herbert Martin and Burt Rockwell. There will be about fifty hounds, led by T. A. Cuming.

BASKET BALL.

All those who played basket ball at the Y. M. C. A. fair last winter will be glad to hear that the game is to be played again this winter. The first practice will be held Saturday evening at nine o'clock, and all members are invited to be present. Several practice teams will be organized and games played between them. Games have been arranged with teams from outside Y. M. C. A. clubs.

GOLF.

The South Orange Field Club will hold a club handicap golf tournament on its nine-hole course beginning Saturday, November 23d. The events will be men's singles and mixed foursomes. The greens have been put in fine condition.

It has been a matter of wonder that more of the prominent universities have not adopted the game of golf. The new links at Princeton, are as yet in anything but fine condition, the putting greens being the most defective spots. The course, however, abounds in natural and artificial hazards, and will be nothing if not "sporty."

WHIST.

The Thursday Night Whist Club meets this evening.

The Killaloo Whist Club will not meet this evening on account of the Kirmess. The meeting will be held next week at the home of Charles Hazeltine of Westervelt avenue.

—Fred Hardgraves, of Rheume's lumber yard, is soon to build a new house on Coddington avenue. John H. Kitchen has the contract.

—Honeyman's private tour to the Atlantic exposition starts today. The trip includes Asheville, Chatanooga, Luray Cave and Washington.

The Oldest Church In Europe.

The oldest building in the world that has been uninterruptedly used for church purposes is St. Martin's cathedral at Canterbury, England. The building was originally erected for a church and has been regularly used as a place for religious gatherings for more than 1,500 years. Canon Rintlege, one of the very best authorities on church history now living, is positive in his declarations that St. Martin's is the oldest church edifice in Europe. —St. Louis Republic.

Her Fear.

Pastor (to peasant girl)—Why do you weep so much?

Peasant Girl—Because my lover has gone to the army for three years.

Pastor—But those will soon be over. Then he will return.

Peasant Girl—Yes, but I'm afraid that in the meantime another man will marry me.—Pick Me Up.

Athletic Amusement.

Everything in nature indulges in amusement. The lightning plays. The wind whistles. The thunder rolls. The snow flies. The waves leap. The fields smile, even the buds shoot and the rivers run.

The members of Miantonomoh Lodge, No. 118, I. O. R. M., will adopt one and work the warrior degree on four at their meeting tomorrow evening. After the business meeting there will be a mock trial, when W. A. Westphal will be tried for lifting a basket of apples.

Lucetta Council, No. 28, D. of L., met last evening and after the regular business was transacted one candidate was initiated and four propositions were received. The final arrangements for the second reception to be held in Central Hall next Thursday evening were about completed.

—From the present prospects the attendance at the Kirmess on Friday and Saturday evenings will be very large, and those intending to go either of those nights will do well to secure their reserved seats beforehand. They may be obtained at Reynold's pharmacy.

Back Again.

Dr. E. B. Lighthill

of New York City,

whose practice in Plainfield has proved such a wonderful success has opened an office at

134 Crescent Avenue

(next door to his former residence) where he can be consulted from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., on

of each week.

DR. LIGHTHILL makes the treatment of deafness, catarrh and diseases of the throat, lungs and heart a specialty.

Piles radically and permanently cured in a few weeks without the use of the knife, ligature or cautery and without pain or detention from business. The most desperate cases yield unfailingly to Dr. Lighthill's unique method of treatment, with guaranteed success. Fistula, fissure and ulcers of the rectum are also completely and permanently cured without the knife or other surgical operation.

Diseases of the bowels, bladder and stomach, mental and nervous derangements, diseases of the skin and blood and all chronic and obstinate complaints affecting the human system, of whatever name or nature, are successfully treated.

DR. LIGHTHILL refers with pardonable pride to the remarkable cures of his former practice in Plainfield and to the reputation which he established throughout the State. He has in his possession hundreds of testimonials from well-known residents of Plainfield and vicinity, which can be seen at his office.

New York Office, No. 214 West 46th Street.

"ONLY SKIN DEEP", yet freckles, sunburn and tan don't add to one's beauty! What then, aside from the dangerous and poisonous "skin cures" so freely advertised, can we use to clear and bleach a bad complexion? Well, why not try your grandmother's cure—lemon juice? It will—and do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. Sprinkler bottles 25 cents at

REYNOLDS'S PHARMACY only, Park and North avenues. (Established 1868.)

—S. S. Swackhamer will speak on the temperance question at Reform Hall next Sunday at four o'clock. The meeting will be especially for young people.

Where Did I Get This Dreadful Cough?

No matter; the great question is, how shall I get rid of it? Use THE PINEOLA BALSAM, a soothing combination of the remedies nature has put in the pine and other balsamic trees. It cures the inflammation and tickling in the throat and if taken in time will prevent the spread of the disease to the lungs. Ely's Pineola Balsam is strongly recommended in cases of asthma. Twenty-five cents is the price. Tell the neighbors about it.

HOW TO PUBLISH A SONG.

If You Have a Reputation, You Get Paid. Otherwise You Stand the Expense.

"In publishing a song its success depends a great deal on the reputation of the composer and the title of his composition," said Louis Berge, the composer. "There is magic in a name, with all due apologies to Shakespeare, and even if a song amounts to nothing a reputation can go to make it a financial if not an artistic success."

"Do publishers pay for a good piece of new music?" I asked.

"Very rarely, and then only if the composer is a man or woman well known. In such cases from $100 to $500 are paid for a song, and the composer gets 10 per cent of the royalties."

"Do publishers take songs by unknown writers if the latter pay for the expense of printing, etc.?"

"Certainly. That is done every day in the week. If the song is not a success, the publishers lose nothing, and the composer has had some experience for his money."

"I understand that many composers of songs cannot read a note of music. Is that so?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Berge, "some of the most popular songs were written by men with no knowledge of composition. It is not absolutely necessary to be a musician in order to write a song. If you have talent enough to conceive a melody and can't write it down according to the rules of harmony, all you have to do is to go to one of the many musicians in this city who earn money by writing scores. You whistle or hum your tune to him, and he puts it in writing, ready for the publisher."

"How do you push a song in order to make it popular, if there is any popularity in it?"

"Well, before we put the song on sale we distribute nearly a thousand copies of it among singers and orchestra leaders. These people, you know, are always on the lookout for something new. If they find the melody good and catchy, they sing or play it to their audiences. The success of the song then lies with the public."

"What is the cost of publishing a song?"

"A song with three or four sheets of music and an illuminated cover costs from $15 to $20. So you see, a composer does not really risk much if his composition is a failure, and if it proves a success, he is apt to make a fortune."—New York Herald.

Milanese Literature, 1750.

Literature was not neglected by the leisured classes of Milan. They read poetry, and they wrote it. One bard penned a sonnet on each of the hundred invocations in the litany of the Virgin Mary. Another aimed a hundred sonnets at the head of a man to whom he owed 3 shillings. A third poured forth five dozen sonnets on a miser, describing them on the title page as being written by Sir Lullo, Sir Lallo and Sir Lello, annotated by Sir Lollo and dedicated by Sir Lillo. One learned society held its meetings with a child for chairman, to whom they propounded all sorts of abstruse problems, and who was instructed to answer each question with one word.

Then those solemn triflers would choose two of their number to demonstrate that the chairman's one word solved the question propounded or at least pointed straight to the right solution of it. Verse, however, was the chief business of the society, verses on births, deaths and marriages, christenings, confirmations and first communions; on a nun's taking the veil, or a nun's mother taking a new cicisbeo; on a young priest's first sermon; on a lady's pet, or a gentleman's bet, or a beauty's shifting her patches.

Two whole volumes once came forth on the death of a favorite cat, albeit the poet (to give him his due) showed himself conscious of the frivolity of this flood of rhyme he had helped to swell. One of his stanzas runs:

An Iliad written
On the death of a kitten
In rhymes that are faultless, if not very new.
May teach you musicians,
Players, poets, physicians,
To prize at its worth the verse lavished on you.

—Macmillan's Magazine.

Moorish Customs.

Moorish customs are many of them somewhat obnoxious, particularly the fasts and festivals of the Mohammedan religion. The fast of Ramadan, which lasts a month, during which no true believer may eat, drink, smoke or bathe between sunset and sunrise, falls more heavily upon him than on the stranger within his gates. But at the feast of Rams, among other scenes of cruelty and gluttony, it is nothing uncommon to see a procession of fanatics—followers of Sidi Aissa or some other saint—tearing to pieces a lamb and devouring it raw during their progress through the streets.

Weddings in Tangier are celebrated after a manner peculiar and interesting. As soon as betrothal takes place the bride is confined to her room and fattened with kuskussu or other farinaceous diet. On the evening of her wedding she is conveyed to the house of the bridegroom in a box decked with gayly colored ribbons carried by a mule or donkey. The friends follow in procession, some bearing candles and colored lanterns, others making night hideous with the firing of guns and the sound of tomtoms, flageolets and drums. At the door a small knot of female relatives welcome the bride to her new home, and the marriage is completed without the aid of religion.

Funerals are somewhat revolting. The corpse, wrapped in a shroud, is placed on an open bier borne by hired carriers, usually negroes. Before and behind walk the mourners, and the procession hurries along, chanting in monotonous tones the famous creed of Mohammedanism—"Ashadu anna la ilaha ill, Allah, wa Muhammadu rrasul Allah."—Good Words.

An Eye to Business.

Ex-Congressman Ben Cable of Illinois has a little daughter who has the making of a great financier in her. One day her father called her to him.

"My dear," said he, "a man this morning offered papa this room full of gold if he would sell little brother. Now, that means gold enough to fill this room from wall to wall and from floor to ceiling. If I sell little brother for that sum, I shall be able to buy you everything in the world you want. Shall I sell him?"

"No, papa," answered the little girl promptly, and then before her delighted father could embrace her for expressing so much unselfish affection, she went on: "Keep him till he's bigger. He'll be worth more then."—Washington Post.

A seaweed of the south Pacific often grows to be 30 or 40 inches in diameter and 1,500 to 2,000 feet in length. It has no root in the proper sense, the nourishment being absorbed from the water.

Newfoundland and Ohio are nearly of the same size, 40,000 square miles.

SHE ADMITTED HER CARELESSNESS.

Why a Well Dressed Old Charmer Had No Gloves to Wear.

She was old enough to know better, but she had brought all the devices of art to her aid in the endeavor to hide the ravages of time. She was elaborately dressed, her hat being of that conspicuous shape which was sure to attract attention to her head, with the result that the gray in her hair was plainly visible, while it could be noticed that she must have taken some time to draw the darker strands to the front so that the frizzes would not contain any of the silver. In her ears were sparkling gems, she spoke in a voice loud enough to be heard several seats away and the energetic gestures of her ungloved hands allowed the gaslight to have full play on the diamonds in the rings with which her fingers were generously encircled.

With her was a dapper old gentleman about 45—her own age. His acting showed that he was one of those precise old chaps who are very careful of detail and who consider untidiness as the greatest of besetting sins.

From her conversation it could be gleaned that they had not been acquainted very long and that she was very desirous of making a good impression on her companion. They were evidently going to the theater, for she held a lorgnette in one hand, while she talked of the various plays she had seen and gave her opinion of actors and actresses with an air intended to carry conviction.

As they arose from their seats in the crowded "L" car the old gentleman pulled from his overcoat pocket a pair of gloves which had evidently been worn but a few times.

"My! My!" exclaimed the gay old charmer as she held up her hands. "You have your gloves, haven't you, and that reminds me, I spent 15 minutes looking for a pair before you came, and do you know that although I must have at least two dozen pairs of gloves I could not find one pair and had to come away without any. It is so exasperating not to be able to find things when you want them."

Her companion looked at her quizzically for a moment, as though it was on the tip of his tongue to remind her that had she followed the old saying, "Have a place for everything and have everything in its place," she would not have been forced to make a confession which she evidently did not consider humiliating, and some of the other men near by hid their smiles behind their newspapers.—New York Herald.

ENVELOPE FLAPS.

Old Nags Said to Be Used to Make Them Adhesive.

Envelope lickers will do well to pause and ponder on the fact that a man has died in consequence of indulging in the popular but disgusting trick of moistening the adhesive envelope with the tongue. Some will say, "How can gum arabic poison any person?" Gum arabic? Are they so innocent as to believe that this article, raised to a prohibitive price by the Egyptian war and subsequent closure of the Sudan, is used on their envelopes? Do they see that ancient nag hobbling down the street? There is the parent of their gum arabic, and in a few weeks' time, when that decrepit animal has made his bow to the knocker and yielded up his hoofs to the glue boiler, perhaps they may have a lick at his remains on an envelope they are dispatching to a friend or sweetheart.

And should some taint of animal poison lurk amid that "gum" they may soon require other and black bordered envelopes to be licked for them when their mourning cards are sent out. Perhaps no more unpleasant part of a visit to a stationer's shop is when, having folded the small purchase in a flimsy envelope, the tradesman raises it to his lips, opens a hippopotamus mouth, protrudes a tongue which looks at least two sizes too large for its habitation, and then, with a smirk, hands the damp delicacy to his customer. May he, of all men, be warned by the premature departure of a fellow licker, and may all who send literary missives to their friends rest assured that the recipients of these envelopes would feel better pleased if these coverings had been closed without any exhibition of moist anatomy.—Oakland Echoes.

A Bed on the Tyrol.

Could I have a bed? The hostess stared at me. I could sit by the fire, she said, or perhaps lie down on a kind of settle, covered with harsh American cloth and not overclean, which she pointed out in the shades of the farther end. "Have you no guest chamber?" I asked. And after much consideration and a word with her husband she lighted a candle and led me carefully through an anteroom, piled up with thrashed out maize stalks, to a door, which she unlocked, and so into a room where the heavy ears of Indian corn were laid in rows along the floor, while onions and apples were heaped in the corners and bunches of small red and yellow tomatoes hung from the rafters.

There was a bedstead behind the door, and a chair, only one, stood by its side. The bed had not been used for years, she confessed, not since the opening of the railway. But she had sheets—clean sheets—at my service, adding doubtfully that perhaps if she put a pan of hot coals between the feather bed and the mattress it might not be so very damp after all by the time I had eaten my supper. Coffee? No, that was impossible, but a glass of real red Tiroler wine was at my command, as well as a share of the smoking dish of polenta which stood on the table of the common room, flanked by a large loaf of black bread. I took my seat with the rest, and when I had finished she led me again to my chamber, charging me to be very careful lest sparks from my candle fell among the litter.—Macmillan's Magazine.

Burned at the Stake In London.

We can hardly realize the fact that it has only been but little over 100 years since counterfeiters were publicly burned at the stake in London, the present boasted "center of civilization." On March 18, 1789, Christianie Murphy was executed at Newgate tower, London, for the crime of "coining." She was bound to the stake seated on a stool, the main tie being a cord around the neck. The funeral pyre was then lighted by the executioner and his deputies, one of the latter of whom finally jerked the stool from under the wretched creature, allowing the weight to fall on her neck. Within 48 minutes the body was entirely reduced to ashes and buried in a hole on the spot where the execution took place.—St. Louis Republic.

The Extempore Pianist.

"Can you tell me, professor," asked Grigsby, "what an 'extempore pianist' is? I see that the performances of such a pianist are advertised."

"Certainly," said the professor. "Ex, out of; tempo, time; an extempore pianist is one that plays out of time!"—Boston Transcript.

A CONFEDERATE BELLE

By ALFRED R. CALHOUN.

Miss Norton made no effort to conceal what she was pleased to call her "loyalty to the south." How, then, could he imagine that she planned treason to himself? That such was not her purpose I am now positive, though at the time when trouble came to the love blinded young soldier her perfidy seemed patent to every one.

She had brought down with her to Memphis a trunk full of wearing apparel for herself and mother, she said. Without applying to headquarters she and her friends knew that this trunk would not be permitted to go through the lines without inspection. "If women were to do the examining," she said, when explaining the case to the captain, "I would not mind exposing the contents, but one naturally shrinks from having one's things pawed over by a lot of rude soldiers." Captain Leland thought the matter over, and in his anxiety to help her he determined to take the box through to Corinth as his own. If he had known that that box contained a large supply of medicines, with hundreds of letters and much valuable information for the armies of Price and Van Dorn, then threatening Corinth and Yorka, he would have refused and notified headquarters, I believe.

Without going into details, I will state that Captain Leland hastened back to his command, taking with him the young lady and her trunk, and sending both to the plantation after he had reached headquarters. From the time he met Miss Norton after the fall of Corinth to the hour of his parting with her after the return from Memphis, Captain Leland never heard her speak of her cousin Tom Raymond, nor did he remind her of a man for whom for many reasons he had formed a strong dislike. But, as subsequent disclosures proved, Miss Norton was in constant communication with her cousin, and in the very night of her return from Memphis he visited her and with her examined the trunk, taking from it such papers as she indicated as of immediate value.

A few weeks after this the Union situation at Corinth was changed. The Army of the Cumberland and much of the Army of the Tennessee were off with Buell on the Kentucky campaign. Price and Van Dorn, at the head of from 40,000 to 50,000 veteran troops, marched at will through northern Mississippi. Memphis was cut off, and the handful of brave men under Rosecrans in Corinth seemed doomed.

The Confederate cavalry drove back, and the Confederate infantry occupied every important outpost. General Van Dorn's headquarters were at the Norton mansion, and his boast that before the year ended there would not be an uncaptured Yankee in Mississippi seemed about to be realized.

Excepting Lookout and Missionary Ridge, if I had to select for the purpose of graphic description the fiercest and most picturesque battle of the war, I think I should choose the Union defense of Corinth. Not even Corse's magnificent defense of the pass at Slatoma, in the Georgia campaign, equals it, for there the attacking forces, though proportionately superior, were not so continuously persistent.

Here, as on every occasion when he was brought under fire, Captain Leland's gallantry was conspicuous. In the sanguinary repulse of Van Dorn and the hot pursuit that followed it his tireless efforts won the plaudits of his superior officers, and he was recommended for promotion. But the fates had willed it that he should never wear the golden leaves of a major.

CHAPTER II.

Love, like murder, will out. Captain Leland's infatuation for the beautiful southern girl, Puss Norton, had long been the talk of every officers' mess in and about Corinth. Some believed it was a case of mutual attachment that sooner or later must result in a match, but there were not wanting those who believed that the young Yankee was being made the tool or plaything of a designing woman.

As for myself, when I come dispassionately to consider the young lady's conduct, after the lapse of all these years, I am forced to the inevitable conclusion that she loved Captain Leland, and that it was only an obstinate adherence to the cause which she and her friends had so warmly espoused that induced her to act as she did.

In the pursuit of Price and Van Dorn, after their crushing defeat at Corinth, Captain Charles Leland was wounded in the arm; otherwise he would have gone on to Memphis to join in the preparations there being made for the Vicksburg campaign. As his wound did not prevent his traveling without much discomfort he might have availed himself of it, as all his comrades would have done, to visit home on a leave of absence, but Corinth had for him too many attractions.

When Rosecrans went on to relieve Buell after the Kentucky campaign and Corinth had ceased to be a place of great military importance, the fates still held the captain there. During the time he was off duty, owing to his wound, he was a constant visitor at the Norton place. At length the wound was healed, and in a few days he was to leave for Memphis. He now felt that every minute not spent in the company of his enchantress was wasted.

One stormy evening two days before his departure he rode out to Norton's through the storm. As he had not been missing a night she should have expected him, but this evening as he neared the house he noticed that the parlor and front windows, in which lights had hitherto welcomed him, were dark. He hitched his horse under a shed and was about to turn to the house when a black man, whose voice he recognized, despite its tremor and terror, whispered:

"Am dat you, Maass Cap'n Leland?"

"Yes," was the reply. "What's up?"

"I—I t'ink, sah, dah's a man in dar."

"In where?"

"In de house."

"A soldier?"

"Yes, sah, but not of younh kind."

"What do you mean, a rebel?" And Captain Leland threw his hand back and drew the stock of his pistol within reach.

"Ye-yes, sah!" gasped the negro.

"What brought the fellow here?" And the captain hesitated and debated with himself whether to enter the house and attempt the capture alone or go back for assistance.

"Don't know, sah," replied the negro, "but he's been heah offen."

"In uniform?"

"Mos' allus not, sah."

"Who is he?"

"Maass Tom Raymond, Miss Puss' cousin," said the man.

Captain Leland started. He drew his pistol, worked the lock and sent the cylinder whirring to make sure that all was in order; then he said to the frightened negro:

"Ike, you must get me into the house without making any disturbance. Do you hear?"

"Yes, sah." The black man led him in by a side door. In the hall he pointed to a bar of light that indicated a door slightly ajar and whispered:

"Yeh'll fine 'em in dah, sah."

With his cocked pistol in his hand, Captain Leland strode forward, pushed in the door and found himself face to face with Tom Raymond and Miss Norton and her mother.

The trite illustration of lightning and a cloudless sky would be all too weak, if it had any foundation in fact, to describe the surprise of Raymond and the two women when Captain Leland confronted them. With an impulse born of the pistol carrying habit, the Confederate threw his hand back on his hip, but before he could reach his pistol Leland shouted in a voice there was no mistaking:

"Throw up your hands, sir, or you are a dead man!"

The women looked white, but did not scream, and the Confederate prudently did as he was commanded.

"Keep your hands up and turn your back to me," said Leland.

With a black scowl this command was also obeyed.

Leland now quickly advanced, and jerking the pistol from the Confederate's belt sprang back and said:

"Now, sit down, sir. You are my prisoner, and if you attempt to move I will fire."

Again Raymond obeyed. By this time Mrs. Norton, a fine but rather nervous lady, who had a genuine admiration for the Union officer, called out:

"Oh, don't harm him, Captain Leland. He is my cousin, and he came here at great risk to himself to bring me news of my poor husband, who is now dying at Jackson."

"He has made a habit of coming here," said the captain, with what the black man had told him in mind, "and he is a spy."

"Who says he has been here before?" asked Miss Norton, speaking for the first time.

"I have heard it," said the captain.

"But who told you?"

While the captain was hesitating, for he did not want to involve the black man, the prisoner called out:

"He heard it from a nigger. Of course he would rather believe his friends and associates than his enemies."

To this the captain made no response. He was not in the position to bandy bitter words with this man.

"My cousin, Major Raymond, has never been here since he left with Van Dorn's army," persisted Miss Norton, and with extended hand and an irresistible pleading in her eyes she advanced to Captain Leland.

"Throw up your hands!"

"But he is here now, here in citizen's clothes, and so a spy," said the captain.

"I am not a spy," retorted the prisoner, and his bronzed face grew ashy. "I came here armed, as you know, and this is the dress I wear fighting under my own colors. We rebels can't afford regulation uniforms like you Yankees."

"He came here," broke in Mrs. Norton as she came to her daughter's side, and so interposed her person between the captain and the prisoner, "he came here to leave me news from my dying husband and to take back my message. For the sake of your own parents, Captain Leland, for the sake of the regard in which you have professed to hold me and my daughter, for God's sake, I beg you to let this man go."

"Nobody but ourselves will know of it," added Miss Norton. "To release him will be a noble and magnanimous act. Do it for my sake, and till the day I die I shall bless you in my waking hours."

To the followers of Ulysses, Circe herself was not more distinctively fascinating than was Puss Norton to Captain Leland. He never imagined that he could be false to his flag to prove his love for her, yet as he listened he was won, though he did not propose to yield at once, lest she should underestimate his strength of character. But the young lady understood her own power quite as well as she did his weakness. She could see by the change in his expression that he was inclined to yield, so with renewed vigor she continued her pleading, the mother joining in and still opposing her person between the captain and his prisoner.

The room in which this meeting was had opened out on a wide piazza such as surrounds the better class of southern houses. As the night was stormy the windows were closed, but as they swung on hinges and were simply fastened the opening presented no serious difficulties. Watching his opportunity, the prisoner, with the bound of a tiger, sprang for the nearest window and flung it open. Captain Leland saw the act, and raising his pistol arm shouted, "Halt!"

On the instant Miss Norton threw herself on his arm, and the prisoner, with an oath of defiance, vanished into the darkness.

Outside the Confederate came upon a group of negroes and frightened them by the demand:

"Where is the Yankee's horse?"

They divined his purpose, but the habit of obedience to the white man was too strong to admit of anything but prompt obedience. Ike, the man who had told Captain Leland of Raymond's presence, was just as ready to guide the way to the horse.

If Captain Leland had followed immediately, it is doubtful if he would have overtaken and recaptured his prisoner, but that he should not do so the women were determined. They clung to him, begging him to have mercy, and while they did so, and he hesitated, Tom Raymond was making good use of his time.

As the captain stood there, with the two women between him and the window, he heard the ring of hoofs outside. An instant, and there came a challenge repeated by a score of voices:

"Halt! Halt! Halt!"

TOBACCO INSOMNIA.

It Can Be Cured Simply by Abstention From the Use of the Weed.

Many brain workers suffer from inability to sleep. This is frequently met with among those who work late at night. The sufferers complain that they feel most lively just when the time for retiring has come and that a long period of restlessness precedes a troubled slumber, from which the slightest noise awakens them. This is very often caused almost entirely by overindulgence in tobacco. They smoke just before going to bed, ignorant of the fact that not only may tobacco prevent sleep temporarily, but that it may render it less deep and consequently less refreshing.

A grave responsibility attaches to those who lightly seek to relieve a symptom which is really a warning by a recourse to a dangerous palliative. The inability to sleep is often merely the outcome of an unnatural mode of life, and if this be corrected the disability disappears of itself. Men who work late are commonly addicted to the tobacco habit. To them tobacco is not a relaxation after a day's work, but a nerve stimulant which enables them to accomplish tasks which would otherwise be difficult of accomplishment. When the mouth becomes dry, alcohol in some form or other is resorted to as a fillip to enable the smoker to tolerate still another cigar or two. Under these circumstances tobacco acts as a cerebral irritant and interferes with the vasomotor centers of the brain to such an extent that the vessels are unable to adjust themselves forthwith to the condition required for healthy and untroubled sleep.

Discretion in tobacco use would save many from this distressing condition of chronic insomnia. Smoking early in the day should be discountenanced, and it is equally undesirable within an hour or so of retiring to rest. The best remedy for the tobacco habit, short of total abstention, is to take a short walk in the open air after the last pipe. Under no circumstances should drugs be used for this form of nocturnal restlessness.—San Francisco Bulletin.

FRANCE'S DUTCH KING.

He Supports Himself by Wood Carving In a Holland Village.

There is a little house in Holland, at Teteringham, near Breda, with a brass plate on the door, bearing the name, "L. C. de Bourbon." The owner of the name claims to be heir to the throne of France, as the son of the dauphin, who was (according to this absurd legend) not murdered by ill usage in the temple, but escaped and afterward passed under the name of Naundorff, working as a watchmaker. He lived till 1845 and is buried in the cemetery at Delft. The inscription on his tomb describes him as Louis XVII, king of France and Navarre, born at Versailles on March 27, 1785, died at Delft on Aug. 10, 1845.

His son lives in a very modest fashion and passes much of his time in wood carving, whereat he is an expert. He has in his possession some relics of the Bourbons, an order of the Saint Esprit, a cross in sapphires and brilliants that belonged to Louis XVI and a musical box of Marie Antoinette. He declares himself to be neither a conspirator nor a pretender; neither does he wish to change the form of government which France has chosen for herself. He asks only one thing—that the name of his father should be respected. But none the less the Naundorff legend is brought to light once and again, just as when "Louis Charles, duc de Normandie," issued a manifesto protesting against the visit of the French ships to Kiel.

There is little chance of any heed being paid to his assertions, unless some indisputable documentary evidence is forthcoming to support them, and which the son of the famous pretender, Naundorff, in whom many persons believed some 60 years ago, notably in this country, does not seem able to produce. There are other Bourbons in Holland, at Haarlem, and at Utrecht, but they are altogether Dutch, and they make no pretensions to parentage with the royal family of France.—New York Press.

A SHORT CURE.

A Doctor's Experience With a Bad Case of Kidney Disease.

Sparagus Kidney Pills Perform a Complete Cure in a Short Time.

Symptoms of Kidney Diseases, and Why They Are Dangerous.

Dr. T. F. Joyce, of Lynn, Mass., a graduate of the N. Y. University, '83, uses Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills in his practice.

It is unusual for regular physicians to use proprietary medicines, but many use Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

They do because they know that the principal ingredient is a special extract made from the root of Asparagus, containing all its virtues in a concentrated form. They do because they know that Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless.

They do it most of all because they have found Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will cure, in cases where the drugs of the pharmacopœia have been unable to afford relief.

Dr. Joyce writes:

Lynn, Mass., Aug. 9, 1895.

Hobb's Medicine Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

When my attention was first called to Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills, and their component parts made known to me, I was forcibly impressed with the combination as being one of great value for kidney diseases and all other ailments arising therefrom.

I found in one particular case, which had baffled all my previous efforts, that they performed a remarkable and complete cure in a very short time, and ever since I have used them in my practice with the most pleasing results in all cases.

Very truly yours.
T. F. Joyce, M. D.

Bright's Disease is a dangerous disease of the kidneys. It is caused by overwork, worry, over-eating, etc., and other excesses. It is dangerous because it has few or no well-known symptoms.

You do not think you are sick until it is often too late to cure.

The symptoms of kidney disease in general are pain in the sides and back, headache, nervousness, frequent thirst, evil forebodings, shortness of breath on slight exertion, chilly sensations, sleeplessness, puffiness of the eyelids, swelling of the feet and ankles, loss of flesh, etc.

Any or all of these symptoms may be the proof of kidney disease, but they are seldom laid to their true cause.

To prevent mistakes, they should be treated, as soon as they appear, with Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

This will cure the kidneys and relieve the symptoms in a very short time.

The cure made will be permanent, and the symptoms will never come back, unless you overwork your kidneys.

Your health depends on your kidneys.

They filter your blood.

When they don't, you fall sick as a natural consequence.

Falling sick is simply the poison in your blood making itself felt.

If you can take out the poison you will be well.

This is for the kidneys to do.

They will do it if they are well.

If they are sick, you can cure them with Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

The diseases and symptoms that Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will cure, by curing the kidneys, are: Rheumatism, Gout, Anaemia, Chlorosis, Depression of Spirits, Lack of Ambition, Neuralgia, Pale and Sallow Complexion, General Muscular Weakness, and all skin diseases.

All these are caused by poorness of, or poison in, the blood.

They can only be pemanently cured with Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, prepaid, to any address, for 50 cents per box.

Write for valuable medical pamphlet, "A filter for Your Blood," mailed free on request. Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago or San Francisco.

Accommodating Landlord.

A correspondent assures us that he never knew that it was possible for an innkeeper to be too accommodating to his guests until he went down to Nova Scotia recently and put up at a pleasant little hotel in the country. The landlord of this hotel laid it down as one of his principles of action to give people a little more than they asked for—to be "extra accommodating," as he termed it.

The landlord brilliantly illustrated his adherence to this principle the very morning after our correspondent's arrival at the hotel. The guest had to go away on the 7 o'clock train that morning and asked the proprietor to call him at 6. The guest went to sleep in the calm assurance that he should be aroused at the proper hour.

He seemed hardly to have fallen into a sound sleep when he heard a terrific pounding at his door. He sprang up wide awake.

"What's the matter?" he called out.

"Four o'clock! Four o'clock!" came the landlord's voice from the other side of the door. "Two hours more to sleep!"

It is needless to say that the guest slept no more that morning. The landlord's anxiety to be "extra accommodating" failed of its mark that time.—Youth's Companion.

CRACKED THE EDITOR'S SAFE.

But Only Secured a Few Confederate Bills as Booty.

The petty depredations which have been so numerously committed in the vicinity of Dunellen of late were continued last night by the wholesale.

The depot at West Dunellen was first entered, but here nothing of value was found and just to show that they had been there threw the drinking water tanks out into the road. They proceeded up the road and stopped at the blacksmith shop of I. Stites where the windows were smashed and an entrance effected into the shop. A drill and sledge hammer was stolen from his set of tools. Their next move stamps them as amateurs or else know little of human nature, for they tackled the office of Editor Day's Dunellen Call. The tools they had purloined were used to good advantage and the safe cracked. Their reward consisted of only a few confederate bills.

The prowlers also broke into the section house and stole several picks.

TALK STILL CONTINUED.

Elizabeth Temperance People Want Excise Violators Punished.

Considerable agitation has been begun in Elizabeth over the fact that nearly all the saloons were kept open on election day contrary to law. One of the local papers has begun a crusade against the Mayor and the police for allowing the saloons to be open. Last night Mayor Rankin called at the office of the paper, and after a stormy scene ordered his paper stopped. The violations of the liquor traffic in Elizabeth have excited much comment. Friday night the Christian Citizenship Union sent a letter to the Board of Excise informing them of the continued Sunday violation of the liquor business by a certain saloonkeeper, who, it is said, keeps his saloon open Sundays and all legal holidays.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Elizabeth Local Union of Brotherhood of St. Andrew Meet in this City.

The Elizabeth Local Council of the Brotherhood of St. Adrew held a special conference at the church of the Redeemer last evening. Dean Rodman opened the meeting with prayer and then after a hymn, James W. A. Smith, of Elizabeth, president of the Council, introduced the speakers of the evening. Mr. Bonnett, of Elizabeth, who was to introduce the subject of the meeting, "Our Duties," was not present and A. T. Pendleton, of Elizabeth, was called upon to do it. Mr. Bonnett arrived late and spoke as did also Robert Pierce, and Rev. Dr. Sleeper, of Elizabeth, and Rev. Dr. Johnstone, of this city.

For Defeated as Well as Victorious.

The rally of the Christian Endeavor delegates at the First Baptist church Thursday evening, November 21st, will be a novel affair. In the basement of the church tables will be arranged to form the letters "C. E." Four delegates from each church will serve as waitresses. In view of the fact that Paterson did not get the '96 convention, her delegates have been invited to participate in the rally.

Able to Be Out.

Fred Sheppard, of Emily street, who was injured at Westfield some time ago while out riding at night, is able to be out doors again. He ran into a wagonload of wood which had been left in the road without horse or light. Sheppard has began suit against Matt Swineford, of Westfield, who owned the wagon.

Want to Become Citizens.

Charles B. Johnson and Ernest Webery, both of 444 West Third street, have applied to the Union County Court of Common Pleas for naturalization papers.

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhœa of long standing in six hours, with one small bottle of Chambertain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief. It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. R. Armstrong, Manager.

IN THE ZENITH OF SUCCESS.

KIRMESS CONTINUES TO BE THE CENTRE OF ALL ATTRACTION.

Slight Changes in the Programme Each Evening, While the Dances Are Executed With More Precision and Beauty

Although it takes considerable to thoroughly wake up Plainfield, yet when once awake they do things with a will, and so it is with the Kirmess. Last evening was certainly not a very pleasant one to be out, but the patrons of the Kirmess did not mind it, as the academy was well filled with a throng of about nine hundred people.

The dancers did not mind the storm either, and every dance was given with the usual excellence. The North Country Harvest Drnce and the favorite War and Moon Dance were not given and the harvesters and the braves and squaws walked around in civilized dress.

The programme opened with a selection by the orchestra entitled "Raymond," and then the curtain was raised and the opening tableau was disclosed to view. The hideous faces of the wily Indian chiefs were missing, but the picture was a very pretty one, however.

After the court jester had led the motley throng about the stage and all had disappeared behing the wings Miss Meredith, the solo dancer of the Tarantelle came out an rendered the vocal solo "Only Tonight," in a delightful manner. She was loudly applauded. Her companions in the Tarantelle then came dancing out and the programme was continued. W. J. O'Brien then gave a clog dance and finally responded to the tremendous applause with an encore. The well-drilled Russians went through the figures of the Military Dance without a mistake and deserved the loud applause that they always receive. The Serpentine Dance was again executed by Mrs. L. W. Serrell, Jr., in her pleasing manner and the handclapping that followed it lasted for some time. As was announced exclusively in The Daily Press, William N. Runyon, the court jester, had more verses ready, and sang them just before the closing procession and tableau.

The words, which were written by Mr. Runyon, were as follows:

I'd like to interest you all
In the very pleasant habit.
Of filling up an aching void
With a bouncing big Welsh rarebit.
We make them here so skillfully,
Digestion it is easy,
And, though it may seem strange to you,
They're good because they're "cheesy."
And after taking two or three,
If you still want something more,
We'll all be glad to furnish you
With cream and cake galore.
Take my advice and buy them all.
They're cheap as well as nice.
And the ladies all will welcome you.
If you've only got the price.

Chorus:—So go and get your neighors
To help us in our labors.
And then I think, be jabers,
We'll make the old thing go.

Now Mr. Reynolds has on tap
A source of pure delight.
His soda-water fountain plays
Both afternoon and night.
And this assurance I can give
To every lad and lass,
Drink all you want—you can't get "lit."
Although chuck full of gas.
The dolls of Venice claim a word,
And merit your attention;
Chrysanthemums, and other things
Too numerous to mention.
You see our scheme—we want your gold
Ye gentle Plainfield folk,
And all we ask is that each night
You start for home "dead broke."
Cho—So go and get your neighbors, etc.

When we are sick, as oft we are,
To cure our many ills
The gentle doctors come around
To brace us up with pills;
Their work is hard, their hours are long.
And when at home no wonder
There's nothing that they like so well
As a bedquilt to crawl under.
The French madames have thoght of this.
And in their small chateau
There hangs a quilt for that M. D.
Who can most heelers show.
Now here's your opportunity.
And this fact kindly note.
You can boom your doctor—keep him warm
At twenty-five cents a vote.
Cho—So go and get your neighbors, etc.

The applause which he received showed what a favorite Mr. Runyon is with Plainfield audiences, and it could not be checked until the orchestra struck up and the grand march, headed by the jester, began.

The soda water fountain, which is under the direction of Louis Lowry, of Reynolds' pharmacy, is still a popular place, and during the first three days of the Kirmess, over a thousand glasses of that cool beverage were sold. W. J. Stephenson, the North Avenue caterer, was in charge of the ice cream department and was kept very busy supplying the great demand for that frozen delicacy.

One of the prettiest booths that surround the hall is the Parisian Flower Stall where there is everything in the line of flowers from enormous chrysanthemums to the small and delicate carnations. Last evening the flowers were furnished by William H. Brower.

The refreshment rooms still continued to be one of the centres of attraction, as the fame of the splendid suppers, which are served there, has spread. The members of the committee who served last evening were Mrs. George E. Stillman, Mrs. John P. Mosher, Mrs. Walter McGee, Mrs. Nelson Runyon, Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry and Mrs. O. B. Leonard. The churches to furnish the waitresses were the First Baptist and the Seventh-Day Baptist churches and they were the Misses Henrietta Cuming, Helen Cuming, Lizzie Van Winkle, Nellie Heyniger, Ida Spicer, Mabel Maxson, Ernestine Smith, Maud Mosher, Grace Lewis, Lizzie West, Bertha Needham, Alice Needham, Catharine Manning, Susan Woodland, Bertha Thorn, May French, Nora Williams and Mrs. McIntyre.

J. M. Bettman presided over the turkeys and Mrs. J. M. Bettman served out the oysters and salad.

The programme for this evening is an attractive one and is as follows:

Overture—"Italians in Algiers".....Rossini
Tableau—Procession.....All Nations
Toreador Dance.....Spain
Harvest Dance.....Germany
The Tarantella.....Italy
War and Moon Dance.....American Indians
May Dance.....England
Court Minuet and the Gavotte.....France
Serpentine Dance.....
Gypsy Dance.....Hungary
Procession—Tableau.

Tomorrow's matinee is the last and, of course, the best. The programme for it is:

Overture—"Ungarish Lustspiel"....Kela Bela
Tableau—Procession. Japanese Court Dance. Carnival Dance. The Hornpipe. Dance of the Flowers and Bees. May Dance.

A HARVEST DINNER.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. McGee Entertain Friends With a Novel Repast.

A harvest dinner was the novel but very pleasant way in which Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. McGee, of Orchard place and Willow avenue, celebrated the twenty-third anniversary of their wedding last evening. The party consisted only of the near relatives of Mr. and Mrs. McGee. The dining room was appropriately decorated for the occasion with strings of dried apples, green peppers and other products of the farm. The table was made in the shape of a T, while five large jock o'lanterns, made of pumpkins, served as candelebra. The dinner cards were decorated with bunches of carrots and parsley. The event passed off very enjoyably and the bountiful repast was followed by an evening of conversation.

Those who were present at the anniversary dinner were: Rev. and Mrs. Herbert Welsh and Joseph Whiting, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ashbrook, of Philadelphia; ex-Mayor and Mrs. William H. Whiting, and Irving S. Whiting, of Bound Brook; Mr. and Mrs. James R. Joy, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Horne, Miss Elsie Horne, James McGee, Mr. and Mrs. Walter McGee, Raymond A. McGee and Donald A. McGee, of North Plainfield.

Good Time For Little Ones.

A social gathering of young people was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Carney on Craig place last evening. The affair was arranged by Addie Carney and Tiny Voehl. During the ovening John Carney entertained the young folks with comic German sayings. Refreshments were served during the evening by those who arranged the social.

FOSTER M. VOORHEES' AMBITION.

He Announces Himself as a Candidate for President of the Senate.

Senator Foster M. Voorhees is now a candidate for the Presidency of the next Republican Senate. This is official, as Mr. Voorhees informed a Newark News reporter at noon yesterday of his intention. He will not seek a re-election next year, he says, to the Senate, and he wants the crowning honor of retiring from political life as President of the Senate.

He is not a candidate for any of the positions in the gift of Governor Griggs and all talk to the contrary he declares to be false.

Mr. Voorhees said his name had been spoken of, he understood, in connection with certain offices, notably that of Chancellor Clerk, but while the latter was a fine position, and he could carry on his law practice if he held it, he was in no sense a candidate for this or any other office in the gift of the incoming Governor.

"I am afraid," remarked the Senator, laughingly, "that if I should aspire to any of these places, the people would say that Voorhees was only in politics, like others, for just what he could get out of it financially."

Continuing, the Senator said that for a time he thought he would like to take the leadership on the floor of the Senate Chamber, but he had changed his mind since then, and his sole ambition at present is to secure the presidency of that body.

LOOKING AFTER CHARITY.

District Committee of the Organized Aid Hold a Meeting.

There was a fair altendance at the meeting of the District Committee of the Citizens Organized Aid Association last night in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church.

Rev. G. Kennedy Newell presided and D. P. Hall acted as secretary.

One case of charity was discussed where the person was receiving help from several sources.

Eleven cases were reported investigated during the past three weeks and referred to the proper persons. This makes 459 cases investigated and referred since the organization was started.

The fact that the Relief Association building is quarantined, hampers in a measure the work in that department.

The balance of the evening was occupied with routine business.

The New York and New Jersey Bridge.

Secretary Swan of the New York and New Jersey Bridge Company says that work on the detail plans for the bridge are being rapidly pushed. The plans must be filed with the Secretary of War, and the bridge people are anxiously waiting for the Sinking Fund Commission to make the location of the approach in the city of New York. The location of the approaches by the commission practically decides the matter. Secretary Swan said that work on the bridge should have been begun before this. "The fog that we are having," said he, "shows the necessity for a bridge over the Hudson River; safety of the people demands it."

Why Is This?

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—As I am a resident of Plainfield and the owner of property I wish to make a few remarks. Years ago when our street was in such a condition and we had no help from the city we, at our own expense, had the street macadamized. Then when the sewerage was laid the stones that we paid for out of our pockets were taken away and now, instead of replacing the stones, they are filling up with ashes. Hoping matters will kindly be looked into East Second Street.

An Example for Plainfield.

A young ladies' gymnasium class has been formed in Elizabeth and the meeting was held on Wednesday afternoon in the Elizabeth Athletic Club's gymnasium. Over thirty young women were present, and much interest was shown.

Croup is a terror to young mothers. To post them concerning the first symptoms, and treatment is the object of this item. The first indication of croup is hoarseness. In a child who is subject to croup it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the rough cough has appeared it will prevent the attack. It has never been known to fail. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE RUNYON-ROSS MARRIAGE

HAPPY NUPTIAL EVENT CELEBRATED ON LAGRANDE AVENUE.

The Ceremony Performed by Dr. Richards, After Which an Informal Reception Was Held and the Couple Left.

The marriage of Miss Carrie Ross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ross, of East Sixth street and Franklin place, to Frank Runyon, of Stelton, was performed yesterday afternoon at two o'clock at the home of the bride's parents by Rev. Dr. Richards.

The bride and groom were attended by the bride's cousin, Miss Margery Ross, who acted as flower girl The bride was becoming in a brown traveling gown and carried white roses. The flower girl wore a gown of pink and carried red roses.

A short informal reception was held after the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Runyon left on the 3:12 train for New York. From there they will go south for two weeks.

They departed amidst a shower of rice and good wishes.

Many handsome presents were received by the bride and groom.

On their return they will reside at Stelton.

Among those present were: Mr. Runyon, father of the groom, of Stelton; Jeptha Runyon and family, of Newark; Ephriam Runyon and family, of Jersey City; Runyon Walker, grandfather of the bride, of New Market; Louis Ross and family, Arthur Runyon and family, Mr. and Mrs. Burr, Mr. and Mrs. John Ross, Mifford Giles and others.

A WOMAN BEFORE HIS HONOR.

An Inebriated Woman Amuses West Fourth Street Residents.

The police net this morning only had one victim in its meshes and that one was a woman. Word was received yesterday afternoon by Chief Grant that there was a disturbance on Liberty street, and the Chief and Sergeant Kiely took a carriage at once for the scene of the trouble. On the doorstep of a house on West Fourth street, near Liberty, the found rather a slight built woman amusing a crowd by her drunken antics. She followed the officers without resistance and was lodged in the lockup. She had nohing tto say this morning and paid $10 in preference to a stay of thirty days in the county jail.

IMPROVED PHONOGRAPH.

The Power to be Furnished by a Coiled Spring Instead of a Motor.

J. Van Eps, of Park avenue, has just completed a new phonograph which has several improvements on any one previously constructed. The power, instead of being furnished from an electric motor, is given by a large coiled steel spring. The phonogragh is a very fine one, its tone being especially clear and perfect, the usual scratching and rattling being absent.

Among the other novel features are a special index for speed, and adjustible arrangement for regulating the volume of the tone.

For Music Lovers.

George Jenkins deserves the support of the music loving public in providing such a good entertainment as that of last Thursday night. The banjo work of Dore, Farmer and Dore, was well worth the price of admission. They bring real music out of that instrument which many musicians regard as having no capacity for sweet sounds. The Metropolitan Quartette of male voices rendered some excellent music and Josh Daly was an entertainment in himself. Altogether the concert was a success and the hall was crowded despite the rain pour. — Somerville Unionist-Gazette.

A Successful Building Association.

The State Mutual Building and Loan Association of New Jersey, in its report sent to this office, shows loans amounting to $517,950 and a yearly profit of over 12 per cent apportioned to its 39,569 shares. This is one of the largest building associations in New Jersey, the State Bureau of Statistics showing it to stand first in number of shares and third in assets, among 306 associations.

A LITERARY MAN.

A Sound Thinker Was Lost in the Death of A. D. Mellick, Jr.

The Somerville Unionist-Gazette of yesterday contains a three-column review of the life, character and literary work of the late Andrew D. Mellick, Jr., of this city, from the pen of A. V. D. Honeyman, of North Plainfield, a former editor of that enterprising journal. The following, as showing Mr. Mellick's range of reading and as expressive of his rare character, is extracted:

"Mr. Mellick was an omnivorous reader. There was nothing in the general range of human knowledge about which he did not possess some information. He liked philosophy. He cared little for poetry; he was too practical. Historical works were his chief delight. After American history, English and French had the greater charms. The twelve large volumes of Froude's History of England had been read through aloud to him during the past year, and he expressed the highest appreciation of the literary merit, though fully conscious of the prejudices of the author. With works of fiction by noted authors, he was also fully acquainted, though this class of reading was only a pastime; he reserved his more serious moments for deeper works.

"His was a case where intellect and strength of will triumphed over disease and achieved a greater victory than has death. During a decade and a half of years of bodily suffering, at innumerable times most intense, he invariably carried in his soul and on his face the sweet, calm, conquering philosophy of those best of ancient Athenians who held with Socrates: 'There can no evil befall a good man, whether he be alive or dead, nor are his affairs uncared for by the gods.' We hear of men like him, who in a more public way, in the ages of chivalry, have stirred up the devotion of friends and the regard of foes by great physical bravery, but he had more than this; he had not only the heroism to endure pain without murmuring, but he exhibited daily the tender and infinite patience which we usually associate only with the lives of angelic women."

Health Board Finds a Nuisance.

The Board of Health of Union township blames the Union county Board of Freeholders for a nuisance at Aldene and threatens to sue the board if the nuisance is not abated. It is caused by the stopping of an old water course that flowed under the country road at this point. The Freeholders built a bridge across the road and over the stream, and a wall at the end of the bridge has blocked the flow of water and caused a big cesspool to form alongside the county road.

Miss Moran Resigns to Marry.

Miss Julia Moran, who for the past three or four years has been the faithful assistant operator at the Western Union telegraph office in this city, will resign her position tomorrow. On Wednesday, November 27th, Miss Moran will be married to Robert De-Vine, a New York operator, living in Elizabeth. The ceremony will take place at Elizabeth.

Delicate Operation.

A delicate and skillful operation has been performed on Mrs. Robert Rushmore, of Grant avenue, by Dr. Tuttle, of New York, and Dr. Murray, of this city. The operation was successful and Mrs. Rushmore is improving nicely.

Bridge Finished.

The contractors have completed the building of the Clinton Avenue line bridge over Green brook, and the Boards of Freeholders of this and Somerset counties have the satisfaction of knowing that they have a good substantial structure.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. MINISTER TERRELL ACTS

Demands that Americans in Turkey Be Protected.

He Will Hold the Sultan Responsible for Any Injury Inflicted—Fresh Massacres at Van and Sivas—Assembling of the Fleets of the Powers at Constantinople.

Constantinople, Nov. 15.—The representative of the United Press in this city learns that on Nov. 12 M. A. Jewett, United States consul at Sivas, telegraphed to United States Minister Terrell informing him that massacres of Christians by Moslems had begun at that place. As soon as he received the dispatch Mr. Terrell hastened to the foreign office, where he personally saw Tewfik Pacha, minister of foreign affairs, and demanded that adequate protection be afforded to American citizens at Sivas, at the same time warning in the name of the United States that Turkey would be held responsible if even a hair upon the head of an American should be touched.

Massacre at Sivas.

Consul Jewett advised Mr. Terrell yesterday that there had been a terrible massacre of Christians at Sivas, but that foreigners had received full protection by the authorities and order had been partially restored. While the massacre at Marash was in progress the foreign missionaries were guarded by troops in pursuance of orders received from the porte.

Reserves Ordered Out.

The porte has written notes to the six protecting powers in reply to the notes of the latter demanding to know what steps are being taken to restore order in the disturbed districts of Armenia, stating that 80,000 reserves have been ordered to proceed to Armenia at once. The governors of the various provinces, the porte adds, report that the disturbed region is rapidly becoming tranquil and that the destitute are being housed and fed at the expense of the government.

Disgust and Indignation.

The massacres and pillage throughout Asia Minor absorb the attention of everybody to the exclusion of all other matters. The horrible state of affairs existing in Armenia is the topic of conversation in every circle, and disgust and indignation are expressed everywhere, even by Mohammedans, who are not expected to bestow any great degree of sympathy upon Christians.

The Sultan Alarmed.

A feeling of disquiet and uncertainty prevails throughout the city. The sultan and his ministers are alarmed at the situation which confronts them. Matters have reached that stage that they are genuinely fearful that the powers may forcibly intervene—a movement which would inevitably lead to the extinction of the Turkish empire in Europe. Until quite recently, it is believed, the porte had no serious notion that the powers would take any action beyond making diplomatic representations, which could be staved off or satisfied with promises.

Number of Victims Large.

Fresh massacres are reported to have occurred in Van, but no details have been received. Enough is known, however, to show that the disturbances are spread over the entire province as well as the city of Van, and that the number of victims of the fanatical Turks and fierce Kurds is very large.

Christian Uprising Expected.

A Vienna dispatch says that a secret Armenian committee at Bitlis is sending delegates to the Christian communities in Asia Minor to persuade them to join in a general uprising in the spring. The committee relies upon having 200,000 insurgents ready to resist the government at that time.

The Trouble in Syria.

Advices have reached here from Beysout showing that the situation in Syria and Lebanon is causing much anxiety, and conflicts are feared at any moment. The inhabitants of Damascus are in a state of panic. The Mussulman populace are equally incensed against the government and the Christians. The local officials are powerless owing to the contradictory orders that they have received.

Assembling of the Fleets.

It is stated here that five Russian warships have been ordered to start immediately for Turkey. Greece has requested the powers to permit her to take part in any demonstration that may be made against Turkey. Italy, in addition to the ships of war already sent, has ordered two more vessels here, making a total of six.

THE SULTAN'S GENEROSITY.

Sufferers from the Riots To Be Fed at the Public's Expense.

Washington, Nov. 15.—The Turkish legation has received from the sublime porte the following telegram under date of yesterday: "His imperial majesty, the sultan, in his high sentiments of generosity, has issued orders to the effect that all those of his Mussulman and Christian subjects who sustained any damage during the recent riots in certain provinces of the empire, shall be nourished and sheltered at the expense of the state. The valis of the provinces have been informed of the above."

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 15.—William Bridges attempted to kill his wife, Walter Hastings and himself yesterday. A pistol was used and all were wounded, but not fatally. Bridges found his wife and Hastings conversing on the street and then began shooting.

Gov. Matthews' Son Dead.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 15.—Renick S. Matthews, son of Gov. Claude Matthews of Indiana, died here yesterday. His father is on his way here. Young Matthews had been sick for several weeks.

Treasury Gold Reserve.

Washington, Nov. 15.—The treasury gold reserve stands at $91,654,170.

THE CUBAN REBELLION.

Important Engagement Between Spaniards and Rebels Expected.

Madrid, Nov. 15.—Dispatches received here from Havana say that the insurgent leader Roloff is at Sigunca, province of Santa Clara, awaiting Maximo Gomez, who recently entered the province at the head of a force of insurgents with the intention of advancing upon the city of Santa Clara, the headquarters of Capt.-Gen. Campos, now preparing to give battle to the combined rebel forces. Campos is now on his way to Sigunca, and a very important engagement is expected. Gomez recently changed his tactics of attempting to tire out the Spanish troops, owing to the decision of the Cuban revolutionary assembly in New York, which is understood to consider it urgent that the insurgents bring about a decisive engagement with the Spanish troops so that the revolutionists may hope to obtain recognition by the United States as belligerents. Four new gunboats have arrived in Cuban waters to take part in the blockade of the coast of that island.

SERIOUS FIRE IN BOSTON.

Empire Distilling Co.'s Building Burned—Panic Among Girls.

Boston, Nov. 15.—Four alarms of fire called the entire Boston fire department yesterday afternoon to the six-story building at Nos. 200-202 Congress street, occupied by the Empire Distilling company. The flames gained great headway and the building was entirely destroyed with its contents. The loss is $125,000, of which $50,000 is on the building. There were about thirty employes in the building when the fire broke out. All of them escaped. The Lowney Chocolate company's store is next to the burned building. More than 400 girls were in the diningrooms there when the flames burst from the windows of the burning structure. A panic ensued and the girls rushed for the doors. In the scramble several fainted and fell, and were trodden upon. Alice Fay sustained a broken arm by falling down stairs.

MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

Important Matters Before the Meeting at Denver.

Denver, Nov. 15.—The formal sessions of the general missionary conference of the Methodist Episcopal church began yesterday in the Trinity church, which is known as the largest and finest Methodist church edifice in the world. Bishop Joyce called the meeting to order and Dr. S. F. Upham read a chapter from the Bible and offered the opening prayer. The roll call showed a full attendance. The day's business was the serious problem of how much to appropriate for missions; how to divide the sum and how to provide for the debt, now amounting to $250,000. It was decided to appropriate $1,000,000 for missions next year, 45 per cent. for home and 55 per cent. for foreign missions. To divide the sum for home missions a general rule was established to scale down the appropriations.

THE INJURY TO THE TEXAS.

Constructor Bowles Submits His Report to the Navy Department.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Constructor Bowles at the New York navy yard has furnished the additional report called for by the navy department upon the recent straining of the battleship Texas in dry dock. It is but an amplification of the data already given as to the particular frames and brackets buckled. The constructor recommends that no attempt be made at present to straighten the bent iron work, but that the ship be floated again and the cracked cement replaced, which will cost about $300. He also suggests certain precautions that should be adopted when the vessel is docked again, mainly in the provision of additional shores under the ship.

MURDERED FIVE PEOPLE.

Insane Frenchman Kills His Wife, Mother and Three Strangers.

Marseilles, Nov. 15.—A wine merchant named Domergue of Montpelier, who suddenly became insane, shot his wife and mother and then opened fire upon people in the street, killing three of them and wounding several others. The madman then barricaded himself in his house and fired upon the gendarmes who surrounded the building. The fire department was called and by playing a stream of water upon him he was seized and secured.

THE POPE'S HEALTH.

Sovereign Pontiff Suffering from a Slight Cold.

London, Nov. 15.—A dispatch to the Central News from Rome says that the pope has a slight cold and has suspended the giving of audiences. His illness is not serious. The dispatch further says that his holiness has promised to contribute substantially to the development of the Irish seminary in Rome.

THE LAURADA INCIDENT

Likely To Lead to International Complications.

Captain of the Vessel Landed a Party of Forty-five Filibusterers in Cuba—His Whereabouts Unknown—Owners and Agents Disclaim All Responsibility.

New York, Nov. 15.—According to the results of the inquiry made into the Laurada incident the event may become a matter of international importance. The following are the facts elicited: On the 21st of October last the American steamship Laurada left this city for the West Indies. It was reported from Kingston, Jamaica, that her appearance and papers were not in accord. There, under British law, she should have reported all the passengers carried previous to making the port of Kingston. She reported but a single passenger. At that time the Laurada was under charter to a West Indian firm doing business in this city and in the West Indies.

Failed To Report the Cubans.

Her clearance papers in October were in due form and order, as far as clearing from an American port was concerned, but her captain, it is alleged, failed to report the Cuban rebel Cespedes and his band of forty-five followers, with their arms and ammunition. Cespedes and his men were landed on the east coast of Cuba, between the fruit port of Baracoa and the port of Guantanamo, a part of the coast on which there are very few residences and from which the rebels could easily reach the mountains of the interior.

Statements Substantiated.

These statements made have been substantiated by several witnesses. The full details are in possession of the local authorities, and a warrant will issue, or has issued, for the arrest of the captain of the Laurada, Samuel Hughes. It is alleged that he has been engaged in similar practices, a violation of the neutrality laws.

Responsibility Disclaimed.

Agents and owners have disclaimed all responsibility, the known agents of the steamer stating that they do not represent the owners, and the alleged owner, in Philadelphia, stating that he was not her owner. The Laurada is now near Philadelphia, but the location of her captain is unknown.

AN IMPORTANT TEST.

To Ascertain What Can Be Expected of Turrets Under Fire.

Washington, Nov. 15.—The bureau of ordnance, navy department, is preparing for an important and what promises to be a very interesting test—that of a structure representing a turret of the battleship Massachusetts. The framework of the turret has been shipped from the Cramps' shipyards to the Indian Head proving ground, and the plates which will cover it will soon be ready. It is the purpose of ordnance officers to fire at the turret until it has been demolished, the purpose being to ascertain what may be expected of like structures when under fire. No data of this character have been secured by the navy department, and the test, which is expected to demonstrate the strength of the turrets now in use, is looked forward to with much interest.

TWO MEN KILLED.

Fatal Result of the Caving in of a Sewer Trench at Woonsocket.

Woonsocket, R. I., Nov. 15.—Two men were killed by the caving in of a sewer trench yesterday. Their names are Alexander Aubin and Joseph Lavellee. The trench was six and one-half feet deep and the sides were not shored up. A section of the bank about two feet wide and ten feet in length tumbled into the trench, burying the two men who were at work just at that point. Aubin was dead when taken out, and Lavallee lived only a few minutes after being removed.

COLONIZATION SOCIETIES.

Matters Before the Annual Meeting in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Nov. 15.—The Pennsylvania Colonization society held an adjourned annual meeting yesterday. It was a more than usually interesting meeting, for the reason that two letters of importance were read, one from United States Minister Heard at Liberia, and the other from the secretary of the International Migration society of Alabama, that bore testimony to the value of the work that is now being prosecuted by the American Colonization society and the Pennsylvania society.

MEXICAN ANTIQUITIES.

Congress May Permit Marshal Saville To Make Excavations.

City of Mexico, Nov. 15.—Congress has sent to the proper committee the bill introduced empowering Marshal Saville, the agent of the American Museum of Natural History in New York to make archeological excavations here. Half of the objects, the bill provides, shall go to the museum. The bill seems certain to pass, as it has the approval of President Diaz, who desires that New York city shall have a comprehensive collection of Mexican antiquities.

SOCIALIST REPRESSION.

Herr Liebknecht Sentenced to Four Months' Imprisonment.

Breslau, Nov. 15.—Herr Liebknecht, the socialist leader and editor, was sentenced to four months' imprisonment, having been convicted of lese majeste for remarks which he made in his speech at the opening of the socialist congress here on October 7, when he predicted the collapse of the German empire and the triumph of socialism.

WIDESPREAD DAMAGE

The Annual Storm on the New Jersey Coast.

Cape May City, Atlantic City, Barnegat, Ocean Grove and Asbury Park Among the Sufferers—Life Saving Patrols Doubled—Ex-President Harrison's Property Injured.

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 15.—The annual northeast storm swept the New Jersey coast yesterday. Along Cape May and Atlantic City the tide was so high that trains to and from Philadelphia were seriously interfered with. At Cape May City the water was carried far inshore by the wind and tide.

Trains Delayed.

Atlantic City felt the full force of the gale. The wind registered from thirty to forty miles and the variation was not great. The surf was high and the meadow back of the city was flooded so that Atlantic City appeared to be an island. Trains leaving and arriving were all behind time, as they had to run slowly over the submerged meadows. At times the train hands were obliged to get out and remove floating stuff from in front of the engine.

High Sea at Barnegat.

Barnegat saw about as high a sea as is remembered along that section in years. Further north, along the coast, the same story was told. Ocean Grove saw the board walk in danger, and a force of men employed by the Camp Meeting association was put at work strengthening the weak places. The bluff at Ocean Grove suffered several small inroads, but none of them had become serious up to to-day. Much the same condition, although not to so great an extent, prevailed at Ocean Grove's twin, Asbury Park. The most severe damage was done in front of the Atlantic hotel and at the foot of Chelsea avenue.

Beach Washed Away.

Near the Atlantic hotel there is a section of Ocean avenue which was washed out to sea some years ago. The sand that went to sea was replaced, but it never became as hard as the rest of the bluff, and yesterday the water washing through the bulkhead carried away chunks of sand.

Life Saving Patrol Doubled.

It is feared the morning tide will do damage in front of the United States hotel. In front of that place a great sea pus has formed and the water is constantly churned to foam. From Long Branch to Seabright high water and driving seas are reported, although the damage is as yet small as compared with what has been effected by previous storms. The life saving stations were yesterday notified to be on the lookout constantly for vessels in distress. Last night at the most dangerous points the patrols were doubled.

Death in a Wreck.

A large white sloop was seen to capsize about a mile off Rockaway Beach yesterday. Four men were counted clinging to her keel, but they were soon washed away by the heavy seas. There was only one boat at hand, and owing to the heavy sea those on shore could give the drowning men no assistance.

STORM DAMAGE AT CAPE MAY.

Railway Washed Away—Harrison's Property Damaged.

Cape May, N. J., Nov. 15.—About 250 feet of the Beach Front railway was washed away yesterday by the heavy tides caused by the northeast gale. At Cape May Point the breastwork in front of ex-President Harrison's cottage was badly damaged.

WRIGHT'S LAST WORDS.

"Two Out!" He Said, and Then Passed Away.

New York, Nov. 15.—Last evening the decision of the National Baseball league, in session here, on the Harry Wright memorial was given out. The secretary read a letter from the late chief umpire's lawyer setting out that Mr. Wright had by a codicil to his will bequeathed all the medals, mementoes and relics of his baseball career to the National league and they were accepted. The last words of the deceased showed his love for the game of his lifetime: "Two out!" he said, and then he died.

NOTORIOUS OUTLAW JAILED.

Ames Davis Wanted for High Crimes and Misdemeanors.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 15.—Ames Davis, one of the most notorious outlaws and bail jumpers of the southwest, was lodged in the penitentiary yesterday. He was indicted by the federal court last April for selling whiskey without a license, and the courts of Ashley county have indictments against him for murder, while bench warrants are out against him in Bradley county for various misdemeanors. A large reward was hanging over his head.

FOR THE OREGON'S TURRET.

Bethlehem Iron Co. Send Six Plates to San Francisco.

Bethlehem, Pa., Nov. 15.—The Bethlehem Iron company yesterday shipped six turret plates for the battleship Oregon to the United States navy yard at San Francisco. They weighed 164 tons. A shipment of 7-inch and 10-inch gun material was also made to the Watervliet arsenal at West Troy, N. Y., weighing 60 tons.

Strike in Chicago.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Nearly 100 union men employed in the construction of the Studebaker building, at Harrison street and Wabash avenue, were ordered out on strike yesterday by the Building Trades' council because laborers were employed to do carpentry work.

Commissioner Chester Resigns.

Albany, Nov. 15.—Alden Chester, the republican supreme court justice-elect in this district has resigned as a member of the commission appointed by the governor to prepare a uniform charter for cities of the second class.

Machine Company Incorporated.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 15.—The Avonmore Foundry & Machine company, capital $100,000, of Avonmore, Westmoreland county, was chartered yesterday.

THOUSANDS WAITED.

But Schlatter, the Healer, Had Gone, No One Knew Where.

Denver, Nov. 15.—Thousands of people, poor and afflicted, waited patiently under the lowering skies and chill wind yesterday for the appearance of Francis Schlatter, the healer. When he failed to appear a bitter murmur arose and the disappointment was keen. Then rumors were passed from one mouth to the other and the whole city was lost in conjecture. Some had it he was seen near Greeley; others claimed he was walking hatless and shivering over the fields near Golden; that he took the night train to Chicago. Conflicting reports were rife. All that was positively known was that he left the Fox home in the night, taking all his gifts of warm clothing and leaving behind this brief note: "Mr. Fox: My mission is finished. Father takes me away. Good-bye." The crowd was at first inclined to make trouble but they withdrew after demolishing the fence for souvenirs. Many touched the boards on which Schlatter had stood and thus carried away his mystic influence. A report this morning locates Schlatter afoot, heading for Gray's Peak, where, amid snows, at an altitude of 14,000 feet, he will confer with the prophets and return refreshed in three days.

ALABAMA ROLLING MILLS.

Not a Day Lost Since Resuming a Year Ago.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 15.—All the rolling mills here are running on full time and have not lost a day since resuming operations almost a year ago. The bar iron department of the Birmingham Rolling mill has been closed temporarily and the men transferred to other departments. This was done on account of other departments being crowded with orders. Two idle iron furnaces have been blown in the past ten days, making twenty now in operation in the district. A week ago some trouble existed between the Birmingham Rolling Mill company and its employes and a shutdown on that account was threatened, but the differences were amicably settled and a shutdown avoided.

THE CARAQUET RAILWAY.

New York Contractors Make Large Purchases in New Brunswick.

St. John, N. B., Nov. 15.—Adams & Co. of New York have bought all the New Brunswick property of the St. Lawrence Lumber company, the Bathurst mill and property from the English bondholders and the stores, tugboats and other plant from the liquidators. The Burnsville mill and property have been purchased from the Merchants' bank of Halifax. Men have been sent into the woods on both properties and from 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 logs will be cut this winter. Adams & Co. will construct the extension of the Caraquet railway to Lacadie for which subsidies have already been granted.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

Senator Lodge Gives His Views to a London Newspaper.

London, Nov. 15.—The Chronicle today publishes an interview with Henry Cabot Lodge in which the senator defines and comments upon the Monroe doctrine. Mr. Lodge expresses the belief that the next congress will formally declare by resolution of both houses that the doctrine is an integral part of the policy of the United States which will be maintained at all hazards. He thinks that the position of the United States in regard to the American continent is recognized by Europe as being reasonable and proper.

FOR STOKES' EXECUTION.

Congo Free State To Pay $30,000 as an Indemnity.

Brussels, Nov. 15.—The Independance Belge says that the Congo Free State admits that there was irregular procedure in the execution in Africa by Capt. Lothaire of Stokes, the English trader, and will offer to pay Great Britian an indemnity of 150,000 francs ($30,000). It was stated recently that Great Britain demanded that Capt. Lothaire be tried by a court martial on the charge of murder and that an indemnity of 1,000,000 francs ($200,000) be paid to Stokes' family.

HURLED THIRTY-FIVE FEET.

A Steam Fitter's Chest Crushed and His Arms Cooked.

Pittsburg, Nov. 15.—James Graham, a steam fitter, aged 30 years, was yesterday probably fatally injured while fitting a vent cap to a steam pipe at the Moorhead-McLean iron works. While stooping over the cap, taking measurements, the steam pressure forced the plate loose. Graham was hurled thirty-five feet into the air and fell back upon a pile of metal. His breast was crushed and the face and arms were literally cooked. He was removed to the Homeopathic hospital.

SOUTHERN HOMŒOPATHS.

Closing Session Devoted to Installation of Officers.

St. Louis, Nov. 15.—The closing session of the Southern Homoeopathic association was devoted to reading deferred papers and the installation of officers. Drs. William Onne of Georgia; H. B. Stout of Florida, and E. P. Price of Maryland were appointed a committee on legislation and instructed to secure recoguition for homoeopaths from state boards of health. At 4 p. m. the association adjourned sine die.

Benjamin Payne Will Recover.

Elmira, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The condition of Benjamin N. Payne, the well known engine manufacturer of this city, who was injured in a runaway accident, is very much improved and after a consultation of physicians it is given out that Mr. Payne will undoubtedly recover.

New Swimming Record.

"PENNSYLVANIA DAY"

Keystone State in Possession at Atlanta.

Gov. Hastings' Address Makes a Fine Impression on the Southerners—"King Iron and Queen Cotton"—A Reception Tendered to Three Chief Executives.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 15.—The Pennsylvanians had possession of the exposition yesterday. Gov. Hastings and staff, the justices of the supreme court, the Manufacturers' club of Philadelphia and the Pittsburg Press cadets came in on special trains early in the morning. There were 200 in the Manufacturers' club party. During the forenoon the governor and his staff were escorted to the exposition by the governor's horse guards of Atlanta. The speeches were delivered at Pennsylvania's handsome building. Judge Green of the supreme court presided. The state school commissioner spoke for Georgia, representing Gov. Atkinson. Gov. Hastings responded.

Some of the Speakers.

His address made a fine impression on the southerners and he was loudly and frequently applauded. Gov. Hastings was followed by Mayor King of Atlanta; Lieut.-Gov. Lyon of Pennsylvania; H. S. Cabannia of Atlanta, and Judge Williams of Pennsylvania's supreme bench. The Mexican band gave selections between the speeches. After the speaking the Pennsylvanians were given a luncheon at the Piedmont club.

"King Iron and Queen Cotton."

Lieut.-Gov. Lyon in replying for the Pennsylvania legislature spoke in part as follows: "One hundred years ago the invention of the cotton gin revolutionized the cotton industry of the south, and from being the producer of but a few bales the cotton states became the cotton producers of the world. The cry for years was 'Cotton is king.' We, of Pennsylvania, cry 'Iron is king.' King Cotton is dethroned. And a queen has taken the throne—'Queen Cotton.' Let us cry: 'Long live King Iron and Queen Cotton.'"

Reception to Three Governors.

Gov. Atkinson gave a reception last night at the executive mansion to Gov. Hastings of Pennsylvania; Gov. Greenhalge of Massachusetts, and Gov. Lippitt of Rhode Island.

H. B. MARTIN ARRESTED.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

There may be feather-headed people who think that, because woman suffrage has been defeated in Massachusetts, there will be an end to the uproar over it. Why, on the same day that it was rejected there, it was adopted in Utah; and, when Utah shall become a State of the Union, a month or two hence, it will have a Constitution which guarantees the right of suffrage to the women of the State, it will be the third of the States in which woman have the full suffrage, and the thirtieth of them in which they enjoy the suffrage, limited.

The Massachusetts defeat has not given the woman advocates a moment's pause in their campaign. We have to report their meetings all the time. They held a State Convention in Newburg last week, right on the heels of the November elections. They have invaded the South, aroused Georgia from its slumbers, and raised their voices at Atlanta. They say they will make this winter the busiest yet. The soul of woman is marching on. What is the meaning of yesterday's coronation of the octogenarian, Mrs. Stanton?

Oh, no. We have not heard the last of woman suffrage. Connecticut may be dry in the cause; Massachusetts may be dryer yet; the skies over New York may be like brass. These are but incidents in a war which will go on until the cause is won, or the women are tired of it, all tired out in the vain struggle.—New York Sun.

New Jersey has 59,010 colored population.

A Citizens' ticket is talked of in the approaching city election.

Unlike other great cities New York never seems to care for political conventions.

The Daily Press is informed that the bicyclists have fully decided to put a ticket with nominees favorable to their interests and rights in the approaching municipal election.

A writer in The North American Review says that the tides of the North and East Rivers produce power enough to generate all the electricity to light New York and Brooklyn, to do all the mechanical work in the factories and machine shops, and to run all the railroad lines in the city and suburbs. This power is wasted, as formerly all of the power of Niagara was allowed to expend itself in a profitless way. All that is required is to store this immense power and turn it into profitable use. The problem presented differs somewhat from that at Niagara. The tides are periodic, and not constant, and the power would have to be collected at the times of its greatest exertion and stored for later use.

The Daily Press was in error yesterday in stating that the street railway extension ordinance would become a law today if it was not approved or vetoed by Mayor Gilbert yesterday. The time limit of ten days expires tomorrow. It is understood that even now the ordinance is found to be defective in not protecting the city's interest as stringently as some of the officials think it should, and there is a possibility of its enactment into a law being still further delayed to remedy the possible difficulty in the future. The defect is with reference to the power of the city to cancel the charter if the various lines of the railway are not steadily operated. The Mayor will act on the ordinance by tomorrow night.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. THEATRICAL.

"Peck's Bad Boy," the groceryman's terror, brings with him to Music Hall next Thursday night a fresh lot of jokes and tricks that are calculated to make the lives of the wretched victims more miserable than ever before. No dull moments will be allowed in the presentation of the piece, because it has been improved in nearly every scene, and now takes rank among the foremost comedies of the day. New songs and dances have been introduced, as well as many new tricks and and schemes.

In M'lle Polaire, the piquant Parisian, Billie Barlow, the bonnie Briton and Maud Raymond, the nervy New Yorker, the audience at Proctor's Theatre, Twenty-third street, New York, find three contrasting types of music hall singers, each quite representative in her way. Le Claire and Leslie, very happy at travesty work, depict "Trilby up to Date.," Lydia Dreame in her odd ventriloquial entertainment; Foreman and West, the graceful dancers; Little Carrie in musical melange; Ward and Curran, the "Two Clippers;" Scanlon and Stevens, comedy duo; Mildred Connors, soubrette and Loisset's trained storks, dogs and monkeys, whose pantomime, suggested by the funeral of a marionette, is very interesting to ladies and children. Special attention is now given to the early morning performances, specialty acts replacing orchestral numbers. The transfer system between Mr. Proctor's two houses has proved exceedingly successful. Any patron before 1:30 at either house receives a transfer good at the other theatre, next day, up to the same time.

It has been known for many years that David Belasco was a play wright of ability. His work while connected with the Madison Square Theatre demonstrated this, but it remained for the production of "The Heart of Maryland" to place him among the foremost of our dramatic writers. His theatric art is superior to Bronson Howard's, and he has shown by the clear and forceful writing of his new play that he is not behindhand from a literary point. The new play now being performed at the Herald Square Theatre is beautifully mounted, has a cast of unusual merit, and Mrs. Leslie Carter's acting is a revolation.

—The case on contract of W. L. Gavett & Co. against Wiegand, is returnable in Justice Mattison's court Nov. 18th.

GOLF.

The three-day tournament of the Lakewood Golf Club began today with the play for the Laurel House cup, match play, eighteen holes. The club cup, a handicap, medal play, eighteen holes, will be decided Saturday. A number of prominent golfers are among the entries.

And now, truly, is golf a success. The New York street Arab has decided that it is "bully," and over in the tenement district of the west side is playing it busily and excitedly. To be sure, the game, as played by the gamin, would hardly be recognized as the sport in which the fashionable club people find so much recreation, but the small boy says that his game is golf, and he ought to know. As played in the tenement district, the outfit required for the game is simple. Any costume will do, though one made from the old clothes of the player's father is generally worn. No "brassies" or "eleeks" are used; in place of these and the other kinds of golf sticks is an old broom handle. As a substitute for the golf ball, the small boy uses an old spool or a small block of wood.—Evening World.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

William Cleveland Spoons.

William Cleveland, grandfather of President Grover Cleveland, was a silversmith in Norwich Town, among the hills of eastern Connecticut, and deacon for more than a quarter of a century in the village Congregational church. The "deacon," as he was always addressed, was an expert workman, and his goods were always in demand. As a consequence, the country families about Norwich Town have Cleveland silver spoons in abundance, coming down by inheritance from old time ancestors. A Norwich Town woman's legacy of two of the spoons—exquisitely wrought specimens of painstaking work—was recently presented to Ruth Cleveland, and in return, a personal letter of thanks was received from her distinguished father.—Hartford Post.

No matter; the great question is, how shall I get rid of it? Use THE PINEOLA BALSAM, a soothing combination of the remedies nature has put in the pine and other balsamic trees. It cures the inflammation and tickling in the throat and if taken in time will prevent the spread of the disease to the lungs. Ely's Pineola Balsam is strongly recommended in cases of asthma. Twenty-five cents is the price. Tell the neighbors about it.

Dr. E. B. Lighthill

of New York City,

whose practice in Plainfield has proved such a wonderful success has opened an office at

134 Crescent Avenue

(next door to his former residence) where he can be consulted from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., on

of each week.

DR. LIGHTHILL makes the treatment of deafness, catarrh and diseases of the throat, lungs and heart a specialty.

Piles radically and permanently cured in a few weeks without the use of the knife, ligature or cautery and without pain or detention from business. The most desperate cases yield unfailingly to Dr. Lighthill's unique method of treatment, with guaranteed success. Fistula, fissure and ulcers of the rectum are also completely and permanently cured without the knife or other surgical operation.

Diseases of the bowels, bladder and stomach, mental and nervous derangements, diseases of the skin and blood and all chronic and obstinate complaints affecting the human system, of whatever name or nature, are successfully treated.

DR. LIGHTHILL refers with pardonable pride to the remarkable cures of his former practice in Plainfield and to the reputation which he established throughout the State. He has in his possession hundreds of testimonials from well-known residents of Plainfield and vicinity, which can be seen at his office.

ONCE UPON A TIME.

Once upon a time—a cat
Might be a princess then,
And thistles growing in the field
Could turn to armed men.
They dared not stoop to pluck a flower
When walking in the wood
For fear in taking it they'd rob
Some fairy of her hood.

Once upon a time—a bean
Could grow so high and far,
That when they clambered up the vine
'Twould lead them to a star.
And when they planted apple trees—
You need not to be told—
Why, just as likely then as not,
The fruit would be of gold.
—Harriet F. Blodgett in St. Nicholas.

CURIOUS EXCISE LAWS.

No Alcoholic Beverages Sold at Retail In Norway or Sweden.

"Excise laws in Norway and Sweden are curious," said a returned traveler.

"My first experience with them was in a little town called Dronthein or Trondjem—I've heard it pronounced a dozen different ways. I reached there late in the afternoon and dined in the hotel with two American artists whom I had met on the steamer.

"We called for a pony of brandy apiece with our coffee, and the waiter, who, curiously enough, was a Frenchman, stared at us with speechless and sorrowful amazement for a moment and then replied:

"'If I served you with what you ask for, I would have to spend six months in prison, and if I filled your glasses a second time—mon Dieu! I don't know when I would ever see France again.'

"It seems that some years ago the Norwegian government recognized the fact that its citizens were becoming the most drunken in Europe. The result was that a law was passed prohibiting the sale at retail of all alcoholic beverages, no matter where or in what sort of an establishment.

"The smallest quantity which was allowed to be sold at retail was a liter, or a trifle less than a quart. The hardy Norwegian dipsomaniac, therefore, buys his liter of brandy or other hard liquors, and tucking it under his coat hurries home.

"Once within his own four walls he may get as drunk as he chooses, but he must keep his door strictly closed, and if he so much as shows his drunken face at the window he is at once arrested and spends several months in jail. The man who sold him the liquor, moreover, is heavily fined and has to pay all the judicial costs."—New York World.

Demand For the Humblebee.

Some years ago I paid a visit to my nephew's vicarage in Buckinghamshire. He informed me that a new industry had sprung up in his parish—there was a demand for humblebees, which could be sold for fourpence a head. He could not inform me what led to this demand, nor could the villagers who had sold the bees do so. On inquiring who took the bees and paid the money, I was referred to the beemaster of a neighboring village. I found him out on the next day, when he informed me that the growing of red clover in New Zealand had failed for want of a native insect capable of fertilizing the plant. As the humblebee fertilized the red clover in England, it was proposed to send a colony of humblebees over to New Zealand, which he did, but the first lot perished, as was supposed, from excess of heat in crossing the equator. A second colony was more fortunate. It took kindly to the islands and performed the function required of it successfully.

The case is well put by an entomologist: "Many of our English flowers are capable of being fertilized by only one kind of insect. The common red clover is visited by the humblebee, the petals are fused together, forming a narrow tube, surrounding the honey glands and the organs that form the pollen; the long proboscis of the humblebee can reach the honey, but the hive bee's tongue is shorter and cannot do so. When clover was first grown in Australia it never seeded, because the tongues of the native bees were too short to reach the pollen."—Notes and Queries.

Getting Two For One.

It is a fact not generally known that naval officers and crews in Chinese and Japanese waters on the Asiatic station receive their pay in Mexican dollars. "Mexicans" is the term applied to them by the naval officers. The paymaster of a ship makes a draft on a banking establishment and receives "Mexicans" for the amount, which he locks in his safe to make his payments. In the Mediterranean French money is used almost exclusively. In South America it is usually American and English gold.

In Europe some years ago American gold was looked upon with some disfavor, but English gold was always popular. Now American gold and even paper money pass without difficulty. On the Asiatic station the "Mexicans" are purchased by the paymaster at their bullion value and are paid to the officers and crew at the same rate, usually being $2 for every one due the men. The money usually being expended in those countries, the men want the kind that circulates and "Mexicans" are the favorite, especially with the Chinese. Officers who do not use their money while on the station generally prefer New York drafts.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

He Was Truly Polite.

A visiting young man in town recently ate the ribbons that were tied around the sandwiches served him at a card party. He was very polite and didn't like to ask what the ribbons were for, so he ate them. As he had at least four sandwiches it is estimated that he ate fully three yards of ribbon. We have had occasion so often to point out the blunders made by visiting Topeka people that we charitably refrain from saying where this unfortunate young man was from.—Atchison Globe.

Swords and Beards.

At one time in England all "gentlemen" wore swords as well as beards, and their habit of drawing these weapons to settle the most trivial disputes is said to have had much to do with the cut and styles in beards. During this sword wearing period all "bluffers" wore their beards cut and hacked in most outlandish shapes, trying to convey the impression that they were bad men who had been in many terrific sword combats.—St. Louis Republic.

Would He Have Yielded?

"I wonder," said Tommy, who had been reading the poem about the Arab who refused a purse of gold for his beloved steed, "I wonder what he would have did if they had offered to trade 'im a bysickle."—Indianapolis Journal.

Big pumpkins and squashes are in some cases raised literally by feeding them upon milk. An injection of milk is poured into the vines once or twice a day.

The surface of a man's lungs is estimated at 150 feet, ten times more than the entire external surface of the body.

DINING IN PALESTINE.

How Meals Are Served and Eaten In the Holy Land.

A man just back from the Holy Land tells a very interesting story of dining in Palestine. A very large circular tray of tinned copper, placed on a coarse wooden stool about a foot high, served as a table. In the center of this stood another big tray, with a mountain of pilaff, composed of rice boiled and buttered, with small pieces of meat strewn through and upon it. This was the chief dish, though there were other smaller dishes, both meat and vegetable. Ten persons sat around the table, or rather squatted on the carpet, with their knees drawn up close to their bodies. Each had before him a plate of tinned copper and a wooden spoon, which some used without the plate. Most, however, preferred to use the fingers of the left hand, several dipping their hands together into the dish, as the disciples did at the last supper.

As soon as any one had finished he rose and went into another room to have water poured over his hands to wash them, and the vacant place at the table was instantly filled by a newcomer. The bread was laid on the mat under the tray, so as to be easily reached, and a jar of water, the only beverage used during the meal, stood within reach. Besides rice, stews of beans or cracked wheat, with thick soup or sauce poured over them in the great central bowl, are also in fashion.

Spoons, though sometimes provided, are often wanting—pieces of thin bread, doubled, serving instead. Knives and forks are unknown, and as there is no special dining room, there is no furniture suited for one; hence, tables and chairs are never seen. So far indeed are orientals from thinking it strange to dip their fingers into the common dish that it is a special act of politeness to grope in it for the visitor and lay nice morsels before him, or even to insist on putting them into his mouth.—Boston Advertiser.

ETIQUETTE OF TWO NATIONS.

There Is a Vast Difference Between France and England.

There is as much difference between the English and the French as there is between the English and Japanese—even more between the English and the Bretons. Blancmange as a term for "cornflower shape" and encore a sign that you wish for more of an execrably sung song are unknown to the French, and in certain other matters the English and French are diametrically opposed. For instance, while an Englishman accuses another of taking French leave, one Frenchman says to another, "Il s'en va a l'Anglais." When an Englishman walks with a lady in the street, he gives her the inside of the pavement, next to the wall. The Frenchman gives her the outside, next to the gutter. The walls in France have more disagreeables for a lady's skirt than in England.

In England one carriage passes another on the left; in France on the right. In England a hostess at a dinner party is the last to go into the dining room; in France she leads the way. In England when a lady meets a gentleman who does not know her well, it is her place to bow first, not his to take off his hat. In France the reverse is etiquette. In France it is not the resident who calls on the visitor, but the visitor who calls on the resident, more especially if the resident should be French and the visitor English. In Havre even the English newcomers call on the English residents—and Havre is very fashionable, as the president of the republic has his summer home there. In France the vicar or rector of a parish is called a cure, and the curates are called vicaries.

An Estimate of Wellington.

The place I should be inclined to assign to Wellington as a general would be one in the very first rank, equal, if not superior, to that given to Napoleon. In estimating the comparative merits of these illustrious rivals it may be conceded that the schemes of the French emperor were more comprehensive, his genius more dazzling and his imagination more vivid than Wellington's. On the other hand, the latter excelled in that coolness of judgment which Napoleon himself described as "the foremost quality in a general." It must also be remembered that as soon as Napoleon had attained supreme power in France the whole resources of that country and of a great part of the continent were at his disposal.

He could raise enormous armies, incur vast expenditure and sacrifice large numbers of troops in carrying out his plans. Moreover, he was absolutely unfettered in his selection of the best qualified officers for commands and staff appointments. Developing a system of tactics which proved extremely effective against his continental enemies, and until his last campaign only opposed by second rate generals, Napoleon gained victories so decisive and overwhelming that for a time he was believed to be invincible. His presence on the field of battle was regarded as equivalent to a force of 40,000 men.—Lord Roberts.

Felling Trees With Gun Cotton.

The lumbermen of Sweden, Norway, Russia and several other countries across the waters, as well as those of British Columbia, Canada, Montana, Wyoming, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan have a way of felling forest giants which beats anything that can be done with an ax in the hands of the most experienced woodman. It is one of the most simple operations imaginable and consists of binding a series of compressed cakes of gun cotton around the tree trunk with a small copper wire. To this wire a battery of sufficient strength is attached and at the proper moment a current of electricity is turned on, which explodes the gun cotton. The force of such an explosion has the effect of felling the tree instantly, the severed portions of the trunk being almost as smoothly divided as though the work had been done by a saw.—St. Louis Republic.

Could Do Without It.

Tammas had a friend stopping with him during the holidays and took him up to the hill of B to have a look round. Arriving at the seat, they sat down, when his friend remarked, "Here we have come up to view the beauties of nature and I have come away without a glass (telescope)," to which Tammas made answer, "Dinna fash yersel' aboot a gless, 'cause I 'an just as weel tak' a sook oot o' the bottle."—Dundee News.

Information Sought.

Now and then people make queer inquiries of bystanders down town, but the queerest was put to me as I stood on Robert street yesterday. A woman stepped up and asked:

"Please, sir, will you tell me where I can find the office of Mr. Burlington of the Burlington railroad?"

If she had inquired for Mr. Bicycle, I should not have been more astonished.—St. Paul Dispatch.

A CONFEDERATE BELLE

By ALFRED R. CALHOUN.

[Copyright, 1895, by the Author.]

Still the pounding of hoofs, then a rattle of arms, a cry from the darkness, and the horse had ceased his galloping.

The women turned deathly pale and held their breath. What could it mean? The captain recalled that there had been a vedette post about two miles down the road. It must be that Raymond, in his effort at escape, had run into the relief and been fired on.

But all doubts were soon set at rest. Outside there were heard hoarse voices and the tramping of men. The steps rang on the piazza. One of the negroes shouted, "Fetch a light!" and other negroes echoed it. Torches flashed below the windows. Captain Leland, much puzzled at this, was about to step through the still open window by which the Confederate had escaped when he found himself face to face with the provost marshal, whom he knew very well.

"What is up?" asked Leland.

"You should know," was the reply.

"What do you mean, sir?" asked the indignant captain.

"I mean that you are my prisoner."

"Your prisoner? I don't understand."

In reply the provost stepped to the window and motioned into the darkness. A sergeant and four men entered and brought their arms to "order."

"Sergeant Ford, take this man to the guardhouse and then report to Colonel Fletcher that I want an ambulance sent out here." Then, turning to Leland, "Captain Leland, you must give up any arms you may have on your person."

"This is an outrage. I protest," said the captain as he laid on the table his own pistol and the one he had taken from the Confederate.

"I hope it is," replied the provost, "but you must protest to somebody else. I am simply doing my duty, and a very unpleasant one it is."

Mrs. Norton and her daughter were unable to speak. Both looked weak and faint; both wanted to ask what the firing meant, but they did not dare to. They let Captain Leland go out without saying a word to him. It may be that they realized his position even more than he did himself and did not wish to manifest a solicitude that might complicate matters.

While the captain was being marched through the mire and darkness over to Corinth, a number of soldiers, one of them leading a saddled horse and four of them carrying a body on an extemporized stretcher, made with a blanket and two muskets, came to the front of the house. The stretcher was placed on the floor, and when Mrs. Norton and her daughter heard the men, ignoring the command of the provost to consider themselves his prisoners, they ran out. By the light of a dozen torches, held in the hands of as many negroes, the mother and daughter saw the ashy face of Major Tom Raymond. Excepting for a slight crimson from about the lips, there was no sign of a wound, but nearly two years' familiarity with the more horrible phases of war had given the women a better knowledge of death symptoms than many surgeons had when the trouble began. It needed no second glance to convince them that their late visitor "was called"—to use the expressive phraseology of the front.

In about an hour the ambulance, drawn by four smoking mules, halted in front of the house. As tenderly as if he had been a friend instead of a spy and an enemy, the wounded man was lifted in. The women asked to accompany him, and, as they were regarded as prisoners, the officer in charge was more than willing to consent.

The provost marshal, with a half dozen men, remained back, and as soon as the ambulance had left began a careful search of the whole house, from damp cellar to cobwebbed attic.

For a long time the Union authorities in Corinth had suspected that Mrs. Norton and her daughter were in communication with the enemy, and that Captain Leland was either in their secret or was being used as an unconscious tool. This search tended to confirm every suspicion. A small bag containing letters dated at Jackson a few days before and addressed to southern sympathizers inside the Union lines was found, and it required no powers of penetration to infer that this had been brought in by Raymond on his last visit.

For some time Captain Leland had been receiving packages from Louisville intended for Miss Norton, but addressed to himself. He had agreed to this arrangement, believing that these packages contained only articles belonging to women, but the search that night disclosed the fact that, either knowingly or unknowingly, he had permitted himself to be used as an intermediary between the Confederates within and without our lines.

All these evidences were gathered up and taken into Corinth the next morning, and when the "find" became known all were agreed that the case against Captain Charles Leland looked very black indeed. Among the unfortunate young soldier's friends in Corinth at that time was a cadet surgeon named Whipple. This gentleman visited the guardhouse the following morning to see the prisoner whose arrest was the talk of the garrison and the surprise of all, even of the few wise ones who claimed that sooner or later this must be the result.

"Mighty sorry for this, captain," said Dr. Whipple as he held the prisoner's hand and added, "For one, I don't believe it, and I won't believe it if I'm the only one in Corinth."

"What do you mean?" gasped the prisoner.

"Then you haven't heard the charges?"

"Charges! What charges?"

"Of giving aid and comfort to the enemy. I forgot that the charges are not fully formulated, but it is said, and you might as well be prepared for the worst, that the charges will be of a kind that would have been preferred against Benedict Arnold had he been captured after Andre's last visit to West Point."

"My God!" cried Leland. "Who dares call me a traitor?"

"Not I, for one, but there are others who will. Now sit down and calm yourself, while I state the case."

Dr. Whipple and Leland sat down side by side, and the former went on to tell of the gossip and suspicion that had been increasing for some time in bitterness against the captain because of his visits to the Norton place.

"Of course no manly man has thought the worse of you because of your attentions to a beautiful girl who needed protection, but through our secret service organization it has been known for some time that Miss Norton has been, from our first coming here, in communication with the enemy. This in itself, as you well know, would not have been so serious an offense had it not been carried on under our protection. As soon as suspicion ripened into certainty, and it was known that this man Raymond was in the habit of coming here and had been inside our lines just before the last battle, why, a watch was set on the house, and last night he walked into the trap we had set, but unfortunately you walked in too. On the face of it it would now seem—mark you, I don't believe it—that you went to the Norton place last night to meet this Confederate spy, and that after your conference in the house you permitted him to ride away on your own horse."

Captain Leland was lawyer enough to see that on the face of it there was a strong case of circumstantial evidence against him. He told of his meeting the night before with the Confederate, and he concluded by saying:

"This man Raymond, if there is a spark of manhood left in him, will bear me out in this. Why, the pistol I took from him I turned over to the provost."

"The Confederate is dead. Died not an hour ago. But even if alive and inclined to corroborate you, his evidence would do you far more harm than good. With his last breath he cursed you and implored Miss Norton, who was with him at the time, never to marry you, if she must marry a Yankee."

"Then the man is dead?"

"Yes, captain. The guard halted him, and as he did not obey a bullet through his right breast brought him from the saddle. Fine looking fellow, and a typical fire eater, but back of all the swagger which stuck to him to the last he was a brave fellow," said the doctor.

"Where are Mrs. Norton and her daughter?"

"At the hotel, I believe."

"And what do they say?"

"I do not know, but what can they say?"

"They can exonerate me," said Leland.

"I am afraid not."

"But why not?"

"Because they will find it impossible to exonerate themselves. The Norton house was searched last night, and proof collected that shows they have kept an exchange postoffice and general information bureau for their friends, north and south, and that you have been helping them."

"I helping them?" cried the captain.

"So it would seem."

"In the name of heaven, in what way?"

"Last summer you brought through, as your own, from Memphis, a trunk belonging to Miss Norton."

"That is true, but it was filled with her wearing apparel," interrupted the captain.

"Did you see the contents?"

"No, but she told me, and I believed her, and I believe her still. Miss Norton is incapable of deceit," said the captain.

"Then," continued the doctor, "it would seem that you have been receiving for her and sending away for her parcels under your own name."

"From her friends—our friends in Louisville—yes."

"A private mark on the parcels you received told you they were for her. Is not that true?"

"It is."

"Yet you never saw the contents of one of those parcels"—

"I never asked to—did not want to."

"Because of your faith?"

"Yes, because of my faith."

"Well, I regret to say that your faith was misplaced. One of those parcels that reached here addressed to you from Louisville yesterday afternoon is now in the hands of the provost marshal. It was opened and found to contain information from secessionists in Louisville for the rebel leaders. This man Raymond expected those letters and came on to get them last night. You went out to meet him. But before going you asked at the express office for a parcel. That is the case. Can't you see, my dear fellow, that you are in the toils; that even your dearest friends feel that it will be difficult for you to clear your skirts?" said the doctor.

Captain Leland saw the case, with all its attendant horrors. He clasped his hands, and with such pallor on his handsome face as would not have come to it had he been suddenly called to death he cried out in agony:

"Before heaven, Whipple, I am innocent of any wrong. No man ever wore the blue who has been truer to the cause than myself."

"I believe you and others believe you, but you must be prepared for the worst!" And the doctor shook the prisoner's hand and left.

It is unnecessary here to go into details. Captain Charles Leland was tried for treason. The records of this case are among the most interesting on file in the archives of the war department in Washington. Of the more serious charge he was acquitted, but on counts that told against his character "as a soldier and a gentleman" he was convicted and sentenced to be dismissed in disgrace from the army of the United States. A broken hearted man, he went west under an assumed name and was killed in the Sioux uprising in Minnesota. Miss Norton and her mother, after being detained in Corinth for about a month, were sent through the lines to their friends, and I have been unable to learn anything of their subsequent career.

THE END.

NO CONSUMPTIVE WILL DIE

So Long as He Can Digest and Assimilate Food.

All physicians admit this. Yet here the difficulty begins. How can we build up the consumptive's body as fast as the disease tears it down? Let us consider.

Cough mixtures must be avoided because they frequently contain opiates which arrest the digestion. Their only effect on the cough is by stupefying the nerves. Let them alone.

All foods that are hard to digest must be avoided, especially fats and oils. Only those foods that are easily digested and assimilated should be eaten. Foods not thus accepted by nature do no good; they do harm. Not what is merely eaten but what is digested and assimilated gives flesh and strength.

Consumption is starvation, slow or rapid, as may be. The first symptom is, not necessarily a cough, but a tendency to lose flesh, to grow thin. Stop this tendency now. Don't wait for obvious lung trouble. That's only a later development—only a minor point.

Stop the wasting and you master the disease,—even though it may have made some slight inroads already. Increase the flesh and the danger is past.

What is needed is an especially-prepared food,—a nutriment in itself and a digester of other foods.

Such an article is the Shaker Digestive Cordial, made by the Shaker Community, of Mt. Lebanon, N. Y. It creates a natural appetite and insures the digestion of what is eaten with it. It overcomes the wasting which is fatal in the consumptive process.

A man may lose money and not die a bankrupt. One may have consumdtion and not die of it. This is science and sense. The success of this new remedy proves it.

CENTURY FOR THE COMING YEAR.

The Century Magazine celebrates its quarter-centennial in its November issue with an "Anniversary Number." In honor of the occasion it dons a new dress of type, with new headings, etc., and it appears in a new and artistic cover. Although The Century has reached an age that is unusual among American magazines, it continues to show ihe youthful vigor and enterprise that have always characterized it. The programme that has been arranged for the coming year contains a number of interesting features. Much has already been written concerning Mrs. Humphry Ward's new novel, "Sir George Tressady," which has been secured for its pages. There was a very spirited bidding for this novel on the part of several prominent publishers, with the result that the author will probably realize from the serial and book rights of it one of the largest sums that has yet been given for a work of fiction in the English language. It will be the leading feature in fiction for the coming twelve months, other and shorter novels being contributed by W. D. Howells, F. Hopkinson Smith, Mary Hallock Foote, and Amelia E. Barr. There will also be contributions from Mark Twain and Rudyard Kipling (the latter furnishing to the Christmas Century one of the most powerful stories he has ever written); a series of articles on the great naval engagements of Nelson, by Captain Alfred T. Mahan, author of "Influence of Sea Power upon History"; three brilliant articles on Rome, contributed by Marion Crawford, and superbly illustrated by Castaign, who made the famous World's Fair pictures in The Century; a series of articles by George Kennan, author of "Siberia and the Exile System," on the Mountains and the Mountaineers of the Eastern Caucasus, describing a little-known people; articles by Henry M. Stanley and the late E. J. Glave on Africa; a series of papers on "The Administration of the Cities of the United States," by Dr. Albert Shaw. The Century will also contain during the year a great number of papers on art subjects, richly illustrated.

Prof Sloane's "Life of Napoleon," with its wealth of illustration, will reach its most interesting part,—the rise of the conquerer to the height of his power, and his final overthrow and exile. In order that new subscribers may obtain the whole of this monumental work, the publishers have made a rate of $5.00, for which one can have a year's subscription from November, '95, and all of the numbers for the past twelve months, from the beginning of Prof. Sloane's history.

ST. NICHOLAS IN 1896.

For almost quarter of a century—for twenty-two years, to be exact—St. Nicholas Magazine has been bearing its welcome messages each month to the young people of the land. It began existence in 1873, consolidating with it in its early years all of the leading children's periodicals of that day, "The Little Corporal," "Children's Hour," "The School-Day Magazine," and "Our Young Folks" among them. The last children's magazine to be merged in St. Nicholas was "Wide Awake" which was purchased and consolidated with it only a few years ago. It has been fortunate in securing contributions for its pages from the leading writers and artists of the language, while it has given to its readers many works that have become imperishable classics in juvenile literature. St. Nicholas has had for many years a large circulation in Europe, and it is said to be read by many royal children. When the children of the Prince of Wales' family were young the Prince took six copies for his household, and the present Crown Prince of Italy grew up a constant reader of St. Nicholas.

The magazine is a help to those that have the care and up-bringing of children, in that it is full of brightness and interest and tends to cultivate high asperations, without being "preachy" and prosy and lugging in too apparent moralizing. Its readers are always loyal to it, and they will be glad to learn what has been provided for their delectation during the coming year. The leading feature will be a delightful series of letters written to young people from Samoa by Robert Louis Stevenson. These describe the picturesque life of the lamented romancer in his island home, and give interesting portraits of his native retainers. Rudyard Kipling, whose first Jungle Stories appeared in St. Nicholas, will write for it in 1896, and James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet, will contribute a delightful poem, "The Dream March of the Children," to the Christmas number. The serial stories represent several favorite names. "The Swordmaker's Son" is a story of boy-life in Palestine at the time of the founding of Christianity. It is written by W. O. Stoddard, whose careful study of the history of the times and whose travels over the scenes of the story have enabled him to present vividly the local coloring. "The Prize Cup" is one of J. T. Trowbridge's best stories. Albert Stearns, whose "Chris and the Wonderful Lamp" was one of the greatest success of the past year, has written another story that promises much. In "Sindbad, Smith & Co.," he has again gone "The Arabian Nights" for inspiration. An American boy enters into partnership with that greatest of sea-faring adventurers, Sindbad, and the fun and the complications that this brings about can be imagined. These are but a few of the features. During the coming year $1,000 will be given in prizes. Full particulars concerning it will be found in the November number.

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR

IN HONOR OF CUPID'S EVENT.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gray Happily Surprised Last Evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gray, of La Grande avenue, were given a complete surprise at their home last evening in honor of their recent marriage. The affair was arranged by A. Moore and J. Tait, and was a great success. When the surprisers arrived, Mr. and Mrs. Gray were speechless, as they had heard nothing of the event.

The jolly party brought their own music and soon all were enjoying themselves with dancing. During the evening a vocal duett was rendered by David McInnes and William Hicking, and Miss Kittie Dickson favored the guests with a vocal solo, as did also Miss McInnes.

Those in the party included the Misses Radie and Etta Johnson, Tiny McInnes, Caroline Thompson, Kittie Dickson, Reta McInnes, Fanny Hayolen, Nora Churchill, Agnes Head, Lavina and Emma Rushton, Nellie Crook, Mr. and Mrs. A. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. William Crook, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rushton, Mr. and Mrs. William Gray, Fred Robinson, David McInnes, Thomas Scully, Herbert Davis, John Coster, Thomas Gilmore, John Lindstrom, Hugh J. Gray, William Hickings, Joseph Moore and Fred Crook.

Attention, Mr. Thief.

One of the most contemptible thefts committed in this city in some time occurred last night when two yellow and white chrysanthemum plants were taken from the front piazza of Mrs. W. C. Baker's house on West Seventh street. The plants had been donated to the Muhlenberg hospital and were to have been taken to that institution to day. If there is such a thing as "honor among thieves," the person who took these flowers will will send them to the hospital as soon he learns that they were the property of that institution.

Good Time to Make Connections.

John Siddall, who has the contract with the city to put in the house connections with the sewers, has a large gang of men at work in different parts of the city, as most people prefer to have their door yard dug up at this season of the year rather than in the spring. If you intend connecting your house with the sewer, and all will be compelled to do it before long, drop a postal to Mr. Siddall, No. 171 North avenue, and he or his collector, Charles Van Winkle, will call and take your order.

Entertained at Whist.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McClintock, of East Fifth street, entertained a number of their friends very pleasantly with progressive whist last evening. Mrs. H. W. Marshall and Mrs. J. E. McClintock tied for first feminine prize and Mrs. Marshall won on the cut. F. S. Cutter was highest among the men. Mrs. B. D. Newell and Mr. Caldwell won the consolation prizes. After the game, refreshments were served and the rest of the evening was spent in conversation and music.

A Fair Planned.

About sixteen members of the Queen Esther Band of Grace M. E. church met at the home of Mrs. Powell on Grandview avenue yesterday afternoon, and planned to hold a fair at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Valiant on Craig place, during the week before Christmas. Last year in a similar effort the band made $65. The proceeds this year will be devoted to missionary interests.

Slight Runaway.

A horse belonging to Rogers, the seafood man, ran away from his place of business on West Second street last night about 5 o'clock. The horse ran down West Front street, through Grant avenue to South Plainfield, where he was caught by two boys who returned him to the owner. Neither the horse or wagon was damaged.

Minstrels To Be Discussed.

A meeting of the committee of the Crescent Wheelmen to look up the question of a minstrel show will be held this afternoon. No action has yet been taken as the town is too full of the Kirmess to think of anything else.

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhœa of long standing in six hours, with one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief. It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. R. Armstrong, Manager.

THE KIRMESS POPULARITY.

THE GREAT EVENT COMES TO AN END THIS EVENING.

The Ladies and Their Assistants Have Worked Hard and Their Efforts Will Be Crowned With Success—Closing Events.

And still they come, for the attendance at the Kirmess last evening was a record-breaker as far as numbers were concerned, fully fifteen hundred people being present according to the estimate of those in charge. Every available seat was filled and it was only by great exertions that the ushers, firemen and policemen kept the throng from blocking up the aisles, but they did it.

The public is usually a good critic and there are few defects which escape its watchful eye, but, judging from the opinions that were expressed all over the academy, there is no doubt but that the Kirmess is a grand and glorious success, socially as well as financially.

The dancers have all become veterans at the art now and never think of making a mistake. The pleasant change in the weather made everybody happy and so the dances went off with a snap and vigor that has been lacking on previous nights.

'Italians in Algiers" was the opening selection by Rogers' orchestra. Then followed the tableau and procession and the dances, the Russian Military dance, the Highland reel and the clog dance being omitted. The Harvest dance, especially the duett of Miss Helen Taylor and Charles Faber, seemed to catch the public eye and was loudly applauded. They were all well received for that matter, the Tarantelle, the May dance, and all the rest were given their quota of applanse. After the Minuet, Miss Meredith, the soloist in the Tarantelle, repeated her song of Thursday night, "Only Tonight," and won both the hearts and applause of her listeners with the sweet rich tones of her clear voice.

Next came the Serpentine dance by Mrs. Serrell, but a great change was made in it. In her hair and on the rods, that she uses so gracefully, were fourteen little one and one-half candle power electric lights of various colors. They were so manipulated that the light rose and fell as the different colors from the calcium light changed. The effect was most beautiful and the crowd would not be satisfied until Mrs. L. W. Serrell had twice made her re-appearance and bowed to the delighted audience.

The Gypsies whirled on and off the stage and then the crowd heard the well-known tum-tum of the Indians and on they came. The appplause that was accorded them on their appearance and disappearance showed them to still be up in the top notch of public favor. When the noise had died away to some degree, that mighty warrior, George O. Stevens, crossed the stage with an immense bouquet of sixty pink Marshal Neil roses. Following him came two other braves leading Miss Stewart between them. She tried to escape, but the wily warriors were too much and soon brought their captive to the centre of the stage.

"Miss Stewart," said the chief as the little streams of perspiration trickled down his face. "It is with a great deal of warmth that I present to you a floral tribute from our little band of North American Indians. I am not ashamed to say, on this occasion, that we have, indeed, acted like savages. We are civilized, however, so that if we have acted wildly, it is only the wildness of delight at the success of the Kirmess." And then the crowd went wild also.

The court jester, William N. Runyon, was the next to appear on the stage. His entrance was the signal for a burst of applause that made the building shake, and the more he sang the more his listeners wanted. It was only after giving two encores that he was allowed to depart. Before going, however, he was presented with a large bunch of orchids. Besides giving several of the stanzes already published in the Daily Press, he had two new ones for the occasion. The words were:

When a man gets up to sing a song
  And misses all his points
It tends to mix him sadly up
  And give him shaky joints.
For the people in the audience
  It may be fun perhaps,
But as for me I'm not in love
  With a silly old collapse.
I don't mind dressing like a clown
  And kicking up my heels,
But save me from the sad disgrace
  Of a head that's full of wheels.
While trying to sing that "doctor" verse
  I little thought me then
That I so soon should have a chance
  To call on Doctor Ben.

Just one more word and I am through.
  I hope that by no chance
You'll e'er forget to spend five cents
  To help your favorite dance.
So blow your boodle cheerfully.
  And whether you win or not Remember you that charity gets
  The nickels in the slot.
The Indian Dance is just superb,
  The Minuet as well.
And very few things on earth can touch
  The sprightly Tarentelle.
But if to win the highest vote
  You're making earnest bids,
You needs must spend a large amount
  To beat the little kids.

Mr. Runyon is going to sing again this evening, and promises to have at least one new stanza with which to please his hearers.

Then came the final march and tableau, and after the dancers were in position waiting for the curtain to be raised Miss Stewart was led out and presented with another handsome bouquet from some of her young friends.

And when the dances were concluded, there was a general rush for the "Summer Garden" and the refreshment rooms. The supper was patronized by an unusually large number and the gaily decorated rooms were filled with the lively chatter of those who came to enjoy the good things. The supper is obtaining quite a reputation and this evening promises to be the record night for this department. The members of the committee who were on duty yesterday were Mrs. O. T. Waring, Mrs. G. W. Van Boskerck, Mrs. A. T. Slausen, Mrs. Josiah Broune, Mrs. D. Moore, Mrs. Gilford Mayer, Mrs. Craig A. Marsh, Mrs. George Endicott Mrs. Jesse V. A. Craighead, Mrs. George Goddard, Mrs. Utzinger, Mr. and Mrs. John Bettman, Mrs. Nelson Runyon, and Miss Mary Tweedy. The waitresses were from the Crescent Avenue church. They were the Misses Sutphen, Madge Sutphen, May Cahoone, Helen Martin, Ada Marsh, Margaret Yerkes, Laura Lovell, Elsie Jobes, Brunson Harriet Halloway, Helen Phillips, Anna Sheelein, Lizzie Sheelein, Kathryn Blimm and Sadie Blimm.

Among all the workers at the Kirmess, the ushers have one of the most thankless jobs of any. Besides performing their regular duty of seating the patrons they had the aisles to keep clear.

Lemuel F. Kimball acted as head usher and it was through his indefatagable efforts that order was kept in the large throng looking for seats. He was ably assisted during the week by the following: Frances A. Cokefair, J. Everett Kimball, Fred G. Smith, Edward J. Patterson, Wm. B. Gilbert, Evarts Tracy, James M. Leonard, Sherwood West, James E. Murray, Walter F. Murray, George Clay, F. L. C. Martin, Leander Lovell, E. H. Ladd, Jr., Edward M. Van-Buren, Roy C. James, Richard Williams, and Lewis E. Waring.

While Will Runyon is one of the great favorites with the Kirmess audiences, there is another Runyon that has played a very important, although unseen part in the Kirmess, and he is Charles W. Runyon. As stage manager he is a great success, and the smooth manner in which the Kirmess passed off is due greatly to his efforts. He was assisted at the curtain by Fred Barber, while Roy C. James was in charge of the electric lights.

Tonight promises to be the crowning success of a week, the like of which Plainfield has never seen before. The dancers are now accustomed to their share in the programe and the orchestra is doing excellently. All the dances will be given tonight, from the lively Highland reel to the stately French minuet. The popular Indians have promised a surprise, so look out for them. The clog dance, the Serpentine dance, with its novel electric effects, and more singing hy the court jester, are among the attractions.

The programme is:

Overture—"Maritana"	Flotow
Tableau—Procession	All Nations
North Country Harvest Dance	Germany
Gypsy Dance	Hungary
May Dance	England
The Tarantella	Italy
Military Dance	Russia
Court Minuet and the Gavotte	France
Highland Reel	Scotland
Serpentine Dance
Toreador Dance	Spain
Clog Dance—W. J. O'Brien
War and Moon Dance	American Indians

The remaining seats in the boxes, which have not been rented, will be sold for twenty-five cents extra in the afternoon and seventy-five cents extra in the evening.

Assisting Mrs. Lapsley, has been Miss Sarah Drayton, who has had charge of the waitresses in the ice cream booth at the Kirmess

A KIRMESS SOLILOQUY.

A Plainfield Woman's Idea of the Great Event.

A Plainfield woman writing to an out-of-town friend says: "Plainfield is steeped in the Kirmess. The all-absorbing, soul-engrossing theme is Kirmess, morning, noon and night. Time, thought, talent, money and people go to Kirmess. It is the catchiest thing you ever saw. Like going to Europe, if you go once you are bound to go again. There is no use trying to tell about it. It is like describing witchery and painting sunbeams. Come and see it. I would go a long distance to see it. What is more, I would go again, or I would stay Whether the hospital is going to be large enough to hold all the common people, or whether the audience is going to have any money left, doesn't matter. It's a grand success and I have learned that folks are not often killed by what they like to do. If they are, they don't admit it.

KIRMESS FANCIES.

THE SERPENTINE DANCE.

Up and down in rhythmic measures,
  Floating lightly here and there.
Like a ray of summer sunshine.
  And a thousand times more fair:
In a revelry of color.
  Blue and yellow, red and green,
Flits the white-robed little dancer
  In the mazy Serpentine.

Winged in tint and light and shadow,
  Like a merry butterfly,
Trips she hither, thither, yonder,
  Once again to flutter by:
Ah! thou fair-faced little dancer,
  In the robes of pearly sheen,
What a world of grace you bring us
  In the mazy Serpentine!

Down The Horse Went.

The condition of West Fourth street, near New street, is very bad. Yesterday afteroon Ephraim Compton, of J. Fred Mac Donald's grocery, drove up to a house at that point to deliver groceries, when he was surprised to see the horse sink in mud above his knees. He was obliged to secure two large planks before he could get out of his difficulty. Mr. Compton says the ground at that place is very deceiving and should be remedied.

Helpful to Men.

The men's meeting for prayer in the lecture room of the Trinity Reformed church last evening, was a very helpful one to all who attended, and nearly every person present took part either by prayer or testimony, and all felt that they had been blessed and strengthened for more agressive work the coming month. The meeting was in charge of W. A. Crawford, president of the Christian Endeavor Society.

Concert for Children's Home.

There is no charitable institution in the city that is more deserving than the Children's Home and the concert to be given by the Crescent Avenue church at the Casino on Thursday, November 21st, will doubtless receive a liberal patronage. The music will be of a high order.

Designed by a Plainfielder.

The Kirmess cut which was printed on the title page of the Kirmess programme, and which was also printed in The Press of Wednesday, was designed and made by W. B. Gilbert, of Crescent avenue. It was presented by him to the Kirmess managers.

Croup is a terror to young mothers. To post them concerning the first symptoms, and treatment is the object of this item. The first indication of croup is hoarseness. In a child who is subject to croup it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the rough cough has appeared it will prevent the attack. A PLAINFIELD ARCHITECT.

A COSTLY OFFICE BUILDING IN NEW YORK DESIGNED BY G. A. AUDSLEY.

Not Only an Architect but an Author of Wide Fame—Sketch from His Biography Written by Hall Caine, the Novelist.

The current issue of "Architecture and Building" has an illustration and full description of the magnificent commercial palace now in course of construction in Bowling Green, New York, and many Plainfielders will be gratified to learn that the architect of this important structure is their fellow-townsman, G. Ashdown Audsley.

This gentleman is an architect and author of world-wide fame, whose biography has been written by the distinguished novelist, Hall Caine, and others; and whose name occupies an honorable place in "The Century Dictionary" and other works of the class. One biographer says: "It may be worth while to point out, as a proof of Mr. G. A. Audsley's standing and wide reputation, that he appears to be the only living architect whose name is given in 'List of Authors Quoted,' and the only living English architect mentioned in the 'Biographical Dictionary of Noteworthy Persons,' appended to 'Webster's International Dictionary.'"

In his biography, Hall Caine remarks:

Mr. Audsley's life and work promises an enduring confutation of the dictum of old Thomas Fuller, that he who sips of many arts drinks of none. Although primarily and above all else an architect, he is in varying degrees an author, an artist (in the pictorial limitation of the term), an art-workman, and an illuminator—not to speak of his claim to distinction as an antiquary, a social reformer, and a lexicographer. As to the general principle of what Fuller says, it may be doubted if there is much to justify the old-time assertion that no man can thoroughly master more than one art or science. It may be true that biography points to but few careers going far to disturb the received impression, but surely the possibilities of achievement are not to be measured by the limitations of experience. * * * * In Mr. Audsley's case art has found multiform expression, and we can not but believe that so much enduring work would not have been done if so many of the arts had not been brought into requisition.

"Mr. Audsley," continues this eminent writer, "has an art-manner that cannot be mistaken, and notwithstanding the variety displayed in the works that have come from his hand, he has made no feeble or futile effort to escape from that which is so natural to him. To define his manner might perhaps present difficulties, and possibly it were easier to convey a sense of the impression it produces. Nathaniel Hawthorne says that if cities were built to the sound of music, then some edifices would appear to be constructed by grave, solemn tones, and others to have danced forth to light fantastic airs. The buildings which came from Mr. Audsley's generative instinct are scarcely embraced by either facet of the illustration. Painting would furnish a fitter illustrative medium than music, for Mr. Audsley's worth is characterized by an insistency of positive and concrete aim, which the latter never fully realizes, and by a glow which the former attains more completely than its sister arts."

It is only necessary to add that Mr. Audsley is the author of twelve standard works on architecture and ornamental art. The American edition of his "Ornamental Arts of Japan" now sells at $600 and $300 per copy.

The style of architecture which has been carried consistently throughout the design of the building is Hellenic Renaissance, a free but pure treatment of ancient Greek architecture, in which the spirit rather than the letter of that refined school of art is carried out. There can be no doubt but that Bowling Green offices will be the greatest work carried out in the style. The Broadway facade will probably be the finest specimen of modern free Greek architecture in the world. The only other example of "Hellenic Renaissance" in this country is the Layton Art Gallery at Milwaukee, Wis., erected in 1888.

G. A. Audsley is in partnership with his brother, W. I. Audsley.

A number of friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mrs. Fowler Vail, on North avenue, Wednesday evening, and gave her a birthday surprise party which was arranged by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. A. Vail and granddaughter, Miss Lulu Vail, Mr. and Mrs. Snyder, Mr. and Mrs. Vliet, Mr. and Mrs. H. Vail, Mrs. Leach, Mr. and Mrs. Whyhusky, Mr. and Mrs. A. Vail and son, William, Fred Giddis, Fred Vail, Charles Vail and Miss Edna Vail.

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

WHEELMEN TALKING POLITICS.

The Political Cyclists Will Meet And Talk This Evening.

There promises to be some lively times at the city election next month. The present ordinances regarding cycling do not appear to suit the wheelmen of the city and there is considerable talk of placing a wheelmen's ticket in the field. A meeting to discuss the advisability of the plan will be held this evening. Many of the aspirants for city offices are taking to the wheel.

The Turkey Question.

In Europe the turkey question is a political one, here it is a gastronomic one; of course every housewife is anxious to get a good Thanksgiving turkey, and goes to a reliable poulterers for it. She ought to be just as particular in the selection of her eye glasses, and not go to a peddler, notion or knick-knack store for them, but to Collier's, 103 Park avenue, where only reliable goods are kept, and where the same are scientifically adjusted and the eye permanently benefited.

Artists in Their Line.

Of the concert held at Chickering Hall, March 5th, the New York Herald said:

"There were thunders of applause after the playing of Brooks, Denton and Ossman, and it was a toss-up between the trio and the Dore, Farmer and Dore aggregation as to which won the honors, as one of the enthusiastic listeners put it, they both played double sixes. Some would have to play double sevens to beat them."

They will appear in Jenkins' concert in Music Hall, Thursday evening, November 26th.

Won a Dinner.

F. H. Hodges, of New York, came to Plainfield yesterday and was given a wine dinner by Frank Cullen, the West End groceryman, as the result of an election bet. The dinner was given at McVey's and was an excellent one in every particular. The New York man was highly delighted.

Warrant for False Arrest.

Jacob J. Goldstein this afternoon swore out a warrant for the arrest of Fredenfall, the New York clothier, on the charge of false arrest. The warrant was issued by Justice Mosher.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. BOSTON'S MERCHANTS

Immense Gathering at the Annual Banquet.

Distinguished Citizens of the City, State and Nation Meet To Discuss the "General Improvement of Boston Harbor"—Col. Mansfield's Speech—List of Speakers.

Boston, Nov. 16.—The annual dinner of the Boston Merchants' association, the banquet par excellence of the season in this city, was held last evening in the hotel Vendome. The subject for discussion, "The General Improvement of Boston Harbor," served to draw together as large a gathering as the immense dining hall of the Vendome could accommodate of the solid men not only of Boston, but of Massachusetts. Prior to the banquet a half hour's reception was held in the hotel parlors, during which many members of the association seized the opportunity of meeting the distinguished guests of the evening.

Dining Room Decorations.

During the reception and the dinner an orchestra entertained the gathering. At 6 o'clock the procession proceeded to the dining hall, which was elaborately decorated with the national emblem. At the principal table sat the president of the association, J. R. Leeson, of the executive council.

The Guests.

On either side were the guests of the evening: Lieut.-Gov. Wolcott, Senators Frye, Platt, Hoar, Gallinger; Congressmen Grout, Walker, McCall, Atwood, Barrett, Knox, Morse and Fitzgerald; Collector Warren, sub-Treasurer O'Neill, Postmaster Coveny, chairman Alpheus Sanford of the board of aldermen, vice-president T. C. Shaughnessy of the Canadian Pacific railroad, Clinton White, secretary of the dock commission; Hon. Jonathan A. Lane, ex-president of the association; Hon. Alden Spear, president of the associated board of trade; Col. S. M. Mansfield, U. S. A., Woodward Emery, chairman of the dock commission; William H. Lincoln of the Lloyd steamship line, O. H. Sampson and E. L. Corthrell.

Lieut.-Gov. Wolcott's Address.

After the elaborate menu had been sufficienely analyzed, Hon. J. R. Leeson opened the speaking with a few introductory remarks and introduced Lieut.-Gov. Wolcott as the next governor of Massachusetts. Mr. Wolcott was received with rising cheers. He spoke briefly but happily, welcoming the guests in behalf of the commonwealth and dwelling upon the necessity and importance of the subject to be discussed.

List of Speakers.

In the absence of Secretary Herbert, who had been expected, Collector Warren was asked to say a few words for the administration, and responded with statistics showing the extent of Boston's foreign and domestic commerce. He was followed by Woodward Emery. Following Mr. Emery came Mr. Mansfield, William H. Lincoln, Hon. Alden Spear, Senator Frye, Senator Platt of Connecticut and Senator Hoar.

Col. Manfield's Speech.

Col. Mansfield spoke on "The General Improvement of Boston Harbor," in part as follows: "The efforts of the general government in the improvement of your harbor have been directed, first, to its preservation by protecting the islands and headlands; and, second, to its improvement by widening and deepening the channels. A study of the chart of the survey led to the development of a plan for increased facilities for the port. A project for opening a free and unobstructed channel 1,000 feet wide and 30 feet deep from your wharves to the bay was submitted with an estimate of cost (amounting to $1,500,000) to the authorities in Washington. It seems to me that the needs of Boston harbor can be most readily met and at a cost insignificant as compared to the advantages to be derived therefrom. The Mystic and Charles rivers and Chelsea creek, extending like fingers into the territory naturally adapted to manufacture of all kinds, afford commercial facilities unsurpassed by any harbor in this country. Gentlemen, you have a harbor of which you may well feel proud, and in your wisdom and energy I am sure that its preservation is secure and that it will be developed to meet the greatest possible requirements, and so far as a harbor is concerned, the possibility of the city of Boston becoming one of the greatest of commercial centers of the world is assured."

TO EXAMINE THE TEXAS.

Naval Inspection Board To Determine How the Ship Was Injured.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The regular naval inspection board, of which Capt. Picking is president, will be directed to proceed to the Brooklyn navy yard and examine into the manner in which the battleship Texas was docked. The board will also be directed to inquire into and report upon the advisability of making certain changes in the interior arrangement of the vessel, such as the distribution of weights. These changes were recommended by Capt. Henry Glass, commander of the Texas, but there is a difference from his opinions expressed by other officers and the board is expected to determine what should be done in the matter. A telegram received at the navy department from Commodore Sicard, the commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard, stated that the Texas would not be ready for her official trial before December 1. As the Texas is a government built ship there will be no speed test, but merely a trial of the machinery, which was constructed under private contract. The vessel will be redocked, according to a recent telegram, and the dock trial of the machinery will take place on the 23d inst.

TO EXPEDITE THE MAILS.

Scheme To Save a Day in Distribution of Foreign Matter.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The plan of Second Assistant Postmaster General Neilson to convey mails to this country from quarantine to the railroad stations for points outside of New York city by means of government transports is in a very fair way to be consummated. While in New York city he met representatives of the various steamship lines and advised them as to the wishes of the post-office department in the matter and referred them to Postmaster Dayton of New York regarding the quantity of mail matter to be handled and for other information. The adoption of this improvement will allow the transfer of this mail to the different railroad stations, thereby saving from six to twenty-four hours in its transmission to the various cities.

OVERDOSE OF MORPHINE.

Death of Marjorie Bonner in a New York Boarding House.

New York, Nov. 16.—Catherine F. Goodwin, a sister of the late Myra Goodwin, the actress, was found dead in a theatrical boarding house at No. 253 West Thirty-seventh street yesterday. She also was an actress, and was known on the stage as Marjorie Bonner. She had been boarding for four weeks at the place of her death. When Miss Bonner was found she was half undressed, and apparently had had convulsions. Coroner O'Meagher and Dr. O'Hanlon, after a superficial examination, said that Miss Bonner had died from an overdose of morphine. The drug was found in bulk and in pills in her room.

NOT A FORTUNE HUNTER.

Marlborough Says He Won the Girl He Loved.

New York, Nov. 15.—The Duke of Marlborough sails to-day with his wife for Italy. When asked to express his opinion of America and Americans the duke said: "It is with pleasure that I am enabled to speak kindly only of those who have spoken kindly of me. Mind you, I do not complain of the lack of chivalry shown, for I am more than cognizant of the manner in which you view me. But, all the same, it is entirely within my province to say that you are mistaken. I did not seek money. I sought the girl I loved. I won her fairly, honorably, and, I may say, without ostentation."

During the same period the valuation on real and personal estate increased but 68 per cent., the increase in population being 42 per cent.

TO SEIZE THE LAURADA

Orders Issued to Customs Collectors on the Coast.

Spanish Minister Formally Protests Against the Vessel's Violation of the Neutrality Laws—An Interesting Question—Owner of the Ship Located—Warrant for the Captain.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The Spanish minister, Senor Dupuy de Lome, has called the attention of the state department to the rumor that the American steamer Laurada had violated the neutrality laws of the United States in landing an armed force on Cuban soil to aid the insurgents there. Secretary Olney has transmitted Senor de Lome's protest to the treasury department and Secretary Carlisle has telegraphed collectors of customs along the Atlantic coast to look out for the Laurada and seize her wherever found. The department of justice had also been advised of Minister de Lome's communication and the United States marshals have been instructed to co-operate with the treasury officials in detaining the vessel when found.

Secretary Carlisle's Orders.

Secretary Carlisle is very much impressed with the evidence that has been submitted to him by the Spanish minister regarding the Laurada and is using every means in his power to find the alleged filibustering vessel. While it cannot be asserted positively, it is understood that he has instructed Capt. Shoemaker, chief of the revenue marine service, treasury department, to dispatch revenue cutters in search of her. The nearest cutter to where the Laurada is supposed to be anchored is the Alexander Hamilton, stationed at Philadelphia.

Interesting Question.

If reports be true that the Laurada is sixteen miles off the coast of Delaware, the interesting question is presented, it is said, for the first time of attempting to seize an American vessel on the high seas for violation of American laws committed within the marine jurisdiction of the United States. Secretary Carlisle is said to have no doubt of the power of the United States to make such a seizure. Should the vessel be found the question of the legality whether she was really engaged in a filibustering expedition against Cuba in violation of the neutrality laws of the United States will have to be decided by the courts in this country before the vessel is held liable and her owners and captain punished.

Her Owner Located.

A dispatch from New York says: Inquiry at the custom house has developed the fact that William W. Kerr of Philadelphia is the sole owner of the Laurada. On the 2d of November the Laurada was entered inward as from Kingston, Montego bay, St. Ann's bay and Port Maria, all ports in the island of Jamaica, B. W. I. Her cargo largely consisted of fruit, the bulk of which was consigned to J. E. Kerr & Co. of this city. She brought two passengers. All of her papers on her last trip to this port were regular. The present agitation hinges solely on her October trip to the south. It is said that her very hasty departure from this port this week was due to fear of her being libelled on a complaint made by the Spanish government. It is also said that her owner surrendered her register with a view of escaping the penalties to which her captain is liable. When her register was surrendered a temporary license was given.

Warrant for Capt. Hughes.

It is said that the warrant for the arrest of Capt. Hughes is very clear and concise and that it charges him with preparing an armed expedition against a country with which the United States is at peace. The warrant, it is said, is based on sworn evidence of witnesses of the embarking of Cespedes with his men and their ammunition; also of their disembarking near Baracoa, Cuba.

Other Penalties.

Apart from her violation of the neutrality laws of the United States it is reported that when the Laurada again calls at a port of Jamaica severe penalties will be enforced against the captain and ship for violating the laws of a British port. The law prescribes a heavy fine for the captain and a per capita fine on very passenger not shown on the ship's papers when she reported to the British custom house in Jamaica.

CAR DRIVER KILLED.

Fell Over the Dash Board During an Epileptic Fit.

New York, Nov. 16.—Edward Deboy, a Second avenue car driver, fell over the dash board of his car and was run over and instantly killed. Coroner's Physician O'Hanlon, who happened to be passing in the street at the time, viewed the body and said that the driver's fall was probably due to an epileptic fit.

BLAME THE ARMENIANS

Turkish Story of the Massacres at Van and Sivas.

Bloody Conflicts Between Mussulmans and Christians at Iknepinar. Rioters Repulsed — Discovery of Bombs — Sultan Preparing for a European War—Uprising Feared.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The Turkish legation here has received the following telegram from the sublime porte: "The Armenian revolutionists of Sivas, after taking out of their shops all merchandise, attacked the Mussulmans. They fired from the windows of their homes and severely wounded one soldier. A pistol shot broke the window of the room occupied by the governor general. They also attacked the village of Mordjilik, killed many Mussulmans and engaged in plunder. The authorities of Arabguir discovered forty of the bombs which the Armenian agitators had prepared in order to blow up public buildings such as the barracks, the palace of the governor, the military store house and the like. The fire that broke out in the city originated from bombs prepared for that purpose.

Armenian Rioters Repulsed.

"The Turkish population of Arabguir, being attacked by 1,500 rioters, perfectly armed and equipped, telegraphed to the imperial government for protection. The provincial authorities neglect altogether, nothing to preserve peace. The Armenian rioters of Crzindjar fired on the Mussulmans and attacked the palace of the governor, the military station and other buildings. They were repulsed, however, by the military. The Armenian revolutionists of Arabguir, having attacked the Mussulmans quarter of Iknepinar, a bloody conflict ensued between Mussulmans and Armenians. Another conflict took place near the village of Saroy (Van) between Armenian brigands and gendarmes. The brigands fled to the village of Rozazkean, but they were dispersed. Many gendarmes were killed or wounded.

Bombs Discovered.

"The Armenian rioters of Sivas, after secretly taking out of their shops all merchandise and after closing their shops, attacked the Mussulmans. A conflict took place. The authorities, however, took necessary measures for the preservation of order. The authorities at Arabguir discovered in the houses of Tarngadji Oglon Serkis and other Armenians many bombs prepared for incendiary purposes. Explosive bombs were also found. The agitators Kircor and Kevork of the village of Kemer (Sivas) who fired shots and in whose houses ammunition and cartridges were discovered, were arrested. More than five thousand Armenian revolutionists are at Tchonkmerzeo (Adana) and are preparing themselves to committ aggressions."

Mohammedan Uprising Feared.

A dispatch received here from London says: "It is asserted by persons in a position to obtain the very best and most reliable information that the terms of the convention signed by the six powers agreeing upon joint action in the matter of compelling the immediate application of reforms in Armenia and other disturbed districts have been kept strictly secret, in order to avoid an uprising of the Mohammedan populace.

European War Expected.

"It is asserted that the reserves recently called out by the Turkish government ostensibly for the purpose of restoring order in Asia Minor are really being prepared for participation in the European war which the sultan and his ministers believe to be inevitable."

Queer Way To Procure Peace.

A dispatch from Constantinople says that the police and gendarmes, acting under orders from the porte, are arresting every unemployed Armenian in the capital and shipping them daily to Asia Minor. The Armenians arrested are mostly inoffensive, and are not charged with any wrongdoing. An order has been issued for the removal of the military school at Puacaldi to Scutari.

More Reserves Ordered Out.

An official communication issued in Constantinople this morning announces that, with the object of ending the troubles in Anatolia and ensuring order and peace, the government has summoned 128 battalions of reserves, apart from the contingents of the Fourth and Fifth army corps. It has also reinstructed the valis and military commanders in peremptory language to assure just and equal treatment to all subjects of the sultan irrespective of race or religion.

PREPARING HIS DEFENSE

Captain of Revenue Cutter Bear Laughs at Charges Against Him.

San Francisco, Nov. 16.—Capt. Healy of the United States revenue boat Bear is preparing his defense against the charges filed in Washington by several officers who formed part of the Behring sea patrol this year. While the captain is not disposed to make public any details of the trouble he spoke lightly of the affair. He denied that he ever arrested an officer and then ordered that no entry be made of it in the log. He also denied that he insulted an American officer while on board the British ship Pheasant.

Ten months ended Oct. 31, 1895, $644,944,706; 1894, $660,271,397. In October last the exports exceeded the imports by $11,960,928. In October, 1895, the exports of gold exceeded the imports by $86,121, and during the ten months ended Oct. 31, 1895, the excess of exports over imports was $44,436,464. The excess of exports of silver over imports during the ten months ended Oct. 31, 1895, was $33,953,266.

SHIPBUILDERS' STRIKE.

Prospects of a Settlement on the Clyde Grow More Remote.

London, Nov. 16.—The prospects of a settlement of the strike of shipbuilders on the Clyde grow more remote. The employers refuse to submit the dispute to mediation, and will only treat with delegates from the men. The government recently appointed Gerald Balfour, chief secretary for Ireland, to use his good offices to secure a settlement of the strike, it being stated that his selection was due to the desire of the admiralty that there be no delay in existing contracts for the building of warships or vessels that could be used as auxiliary cruisers. It was also stated that Mr. Balfour would compel the shipbuilding firms, not only on the Clyde, but at Belfast, to concede the demands of the men. From the above dispatch, however, it appears that the employers do not propose to submit to any government interference, and will settle the dispute on terms to be decided upon after conference with the representatives of the strikers.

ATLANTA'S EXPOSITION.

Govs. Hastings and Lippitt Address Georgia's Legislature.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 16.—By special invitation of the general assembly of Georgia, Gov. Hastings of Pennsylvania with Lieut.-Gov. Lyon, the speaker of the house and members of the supreme bench of that state, and Gov. Lippitt of Rhode Island, visited the capitol and addressed the houses in joint session. The speakers gave happy expression to the fraternal sentiments of the occasion and the two houses passed a resolution of thanks for utterances of so patriotic and non-sectional a character. In the afternoon, at the exposition grounds, the Massachusetts state commissioners tendered to hundreds of invited guests a reception and luncheon. Attendance at the exposition this week has broken all records and Georgia day, next Tuesday, bids fair to double the largest day heretofore.

FIRST TIME IN THEIR HISTORY.

Philadelphia, Nov. 16.—For the first time in the history of the two universities the freshmen football teams of Harvard and Pennsylvania will line up against each other on Franklin field this afternoon. Considerable interest is felt here in the outcome of the game, and if the day is fair a big crowd will likely turn out to watch the youngsters scrimmage in the mud.

CHINA FAVORS GERMANY.

Said to Have Given Her a Coaling Station Near Amoy.

London, Nov. 16.—A special dispatch from Shangai says that it is positively stated that China has agreed that Germany shall occupy one of the islands near Amoy for the purpose of establishing a naval yard and a coal depot. It is added that it is feared this step will be followed by international complications, as France and Russia are certain to seek similar privileges.

WELLS-FARGO ROBBERY.

Belief of the Denver Police that $55,000 Was Stolen.

Denver, Nov. 16.—It is believed at police headquarters that the amount of money stolen from the Wells-Fargo Express company at Colorado Springs was $55,000 instead of $20,000, as given out at the time of the robbery. The officials of the company are extremely reticent. So far as known no tangible clue to the thieves has been discovered.

WHAT OVERWORK DOES

The Evil Effect of Too Much Mental or Bodily Work.

Where It Is Felt, How It is Felt and How It Can Be Cured.

Overworked Kidneys, Their Symptoms and How to Help Them.

Overwork does more than tire you.
It exhausts you.
Enough work is good, but overwork is not good.
Work makes your blood circulate and perspiration flow. It clears out your blood vessels and the pores of your skin, helps to throw off waste matter, brings fresh blood to weak places, and renews your energy and vitality.
Overwork makes your organs work too hard, eats up your vitality, exhausts your energy.
The organ that works the most feels it the most.
But the kidneys feel it always, whatever organ may be overworked.
And this is because your kidneys filter your blood.
All the blood to nourish your different organs has to pass through your kidneys. If any organ is overworked and needs more blood than usual, your kidneys have just so much more work to do.
After a certain limit of strain is reached, or after the kidneys have been so much overworked that they fall sick, they let the blood pass without filtering it; or sometimes they even filter out the good matter and leave in the bad.
So that the worst of overwork is, that it hurts your kidneys.
This applies to mental overwork, bodily overwork, overeating, dissipation, youthful excesses, etc., etc.
The way to cure the effects of overwork is, not to take stimulants, but to cure your kidneys with Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.
As soon as your kidneys are well, they will supply pure, fresh, strengthening blood or nourishment to your overworked organs, and they will get well too.
You may be broken down in health from overwork or excesses. You may feel that you are losing your mental or nervous power and physial capacity for work.
It is because your kidneys need looking into, that they shall filter your blood and give you fresh life and energy.
Or you may suffer from some of the symptoms of kidney disease, such as backache, sideache, headache nervovsness, frequent thirst, sleeplessness, swelling of the feet and ankles.
Of these too, Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will cure you. They are tonic and strengthening to the kidneys, and cure all their diseases and injuries.
Blood diseases, naturally, are caused by sick kidneys. That is, diseases which are caused by impure, poisonous badly filtered blood.
Of these may be mentioned rheumatism, gout, anaemia, chlorosis, pale and sallow complexion, lack of ambition, dizziness, hysteria, neuralgia, etc.
Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will cure these by curing the kidneys.
Pure blood means health. Healthy kidneys make pure blood.
Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills are for sale by all druggists, or will be sent prepaid to any address for 50c per box
Write for valuable medical pamphlet, "A Filter for Your Blood," free on request. Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago or San Francisco.

New Brunswick affords a rich field for the man of pills. She has 172 cases of measles.

Governor-elect Griggs would evince more common sense if he wouldn't indulge in the silly sarcasm of talking about conferring with the editor of the Trenton True American and the New Jersey editor of the New York World in making his appointments.

One of the most important duties devolving upon the incoming National Senate is the election of a President pro tem to succeed Senator Harris. Though Senator Harris has been re-elected to represent Tennessee in that body for another term, the expiration of his present term compels a new election.

THEATRICAL.

The Atkinson Comedy Company will present that famous piece of American humor, "Peck's Bad Boy," next Thursday night at Music Hall. The bad boy is always a welcome visitor. Next week he will be especially so for the reason that he has surrounded himself with a large assortment of novel and entertaining ideas in the way of songs, dances and witticisms. "All the latest and best" is the standard for which the organization strives. The company is not only rich in specialty talent, but it is competent to make excellent character pictures of those interesting and well-known personages, the bad boy's pa, his girl, the corner grocer, and all the rest of the types of everyday human nature that the Milwaukee humorist wove into his sketches. Every reader of the newspapers knows them all and feels an interest in them. There is always a fund of hearty laughter in their adventure.

BEST KNOWN OF AMERICA'S WRITERS.

M. Quad, the Detroit Free Press Man, Made Well by Paine's Celery Compound.

Mr. Charles B. Lewis is more familiarly known to the thousands whose life he has cheered as M. Quad. It must be more than a score of years since the country was laughing over the sayings of his honor and Bijah, chronicled by Mr. Lewis to the Detroit Free Press. From that time until now M. Quad has delighted the public with unnumbered quaint sketches of character, overflowing with a humor that appealed to readers all the more strongly because they recognized the fidelity to life under the fun.

Among Mr. Lewis' recent creations the Bowsers, Brother Gardner, Mrs. Gallup's Tribulations, Possum Sketches, and the Arizona Kicker are destined to long life. Mr. Lewis' admirers will be surprised to learn that, like Walter Scott, Mark Twain and other highly gifted authors, he has produced work of rare quality while tormented by pain.

Mr. Lewis suffered intensely from rheumatism. "It made my days and nights miserable," he says, "and, of course, the agony was greater in bad weather. At the same time my nerves were weak, and I was in worse than I hope ever to be again. Yes, I took advice by the yard and medicine by the quart with no success. I was broken in spirit and bent almost double in the body, when somebody suggested Paine's celery compound for the nervousness. That remedy made short work of the nervousness and of the rheumatism, too. A few doses made me feel much better, and today I am well: a happy change that attribute to the use of Paine's celery compound. It gives me sincere pleasure to bear witness on the merits of the compound. I know at least a dozen authors and journalists who have found it a remedy for the same complaints."

Rheumatism attacks the body when it is tired out, and when its functions begin to act sluggishly. Disordered nerves, faulty digestion, and a slow, incomplete nutrition of the body invite rheumatism, just as they do neuralgie and nervous debility. There is no surer starting point for rheumatism than a "run-down" nerveless condition.

Paine's celery compound increases the appetite by giving a healthy tone to the stomach: it makes sure that the entire nervous system gets completely nourished. It regulates the bowels and the kidneys and encourages them to get rid of harmful and poisonous matter that the sluggish system has allowed to lodge in the blood, thus causing rheumatism and kindred disorders.

You cannot cure rheumatism by outward applications. The disease is due to internal disorder and must be constitutionally attacked and got rid of. Paine's celery compound has done for thousands of other people exactly what it did for Mr. Lewis. They were sufferers as he was, and the compound has made them well.

The warmest praises of Paine's celery compound are from men and women of high character and keen intelligence. They know they are doing a work of humanity and mercy in commending to all persons out of health this certain and speedy means of getting strong and well.

A Talk on Wheels.

The attention of the boys is called to the fact that the boys service at the Y. M. C. A., Sunday, will begin at four o'clock instead of 4:15 as heretofore. Assistant-Secretary John C. Whiting will give a talk on "Wheels," illustrated by many actual wheels and by the blackboard. Louis S. Bond will sing a tenor solo.

—The Misses McGie, after a thirty-six years residence at 752 East Front street, moved today to 52 Westervelt avenue.

Where Did I Get This Dreadful Cough?

No matter; the great question is, how shall I get rid of it? Use THE PINEOLA BALSAM, a soothing combination of the remedies nature has put in the pine and other balsamic trees. It cures the inflammation and tickling in the throat and if taken in time will prevent the spread of the disease to the lungs. Ely's Pineola Balsam is strongly recommended in cases of asthma. Twenty-five cents is the price. Tell the neighbors about it.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

CYCLING COMMENT.

When the cycle factory devotes its talent exclusively during the year to the perfection of details of this character, surprising results in easing the running qualities of the wheels are sure to ensue, and ease of propulsion with the least possible expenditure of physical strength is the ideal cycling condition. Running gear is attracting the attention of the leading makers at present, and many improvements in that all-important feature may be expected soon.

James Hansen, of Liberty street, an employe of the Walter Scott Printing Machine Co., rides his wheel back and forth from work. Yesterday noon he was riding home to dinner and when in front of Charles Potter's residence on West Seventh street a spirited team of horses attached to a wagon came down the street at a rapid gait. The rig crowded Mr. Hansen into the gutter. His wheel struck the curb, throwing the rider over the handlebars. He struck his head, bruising it considerably and breaking the flesh in several places. Mr. Hansen's wheel was a total wreck, but he succeeded in getting home with it where he had his wounds dressed. He will feel the effects of his shakeup for some time.

GOLF.

There has been considerable controversy among golfers as to the merits and demerits of sloping putting greens. The general opinion seems to prevail that the average putting green is difficult enough in itself and should be as smooth and as level as nature and art can make it. On a number of links in this country are to be found greens with a decided incline, and holing out upon such is a most vexatious undertaking. "Willie" Dunn has been known to comment favorably on these greens and considers them thoroughly "sporty," while most of the prominent amateurs take a decidedly different opinion.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The New Jersey Association of Cycling clubs will have a whist tournament among the members of the association beginning the last of this month. Teams of two men each will contest from the Montclair Wheelmen, Union County Roadsters, Atlanta Wheelmen, Elizabeth Wheelmen, Tourist Wheelmen, of Paterson, and the Bloomfield Wheelmen. The association is also arranging for a pool handicap tournament. The bowling committee of the association will report a schedule for the winter games the first of next week.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Daniel Smalley, of Somerset street, leaves today for a hunting trip in the south. He will be absent a month.

J. J. Goff and a party of local sportsmen left early yesterday morning for Monmouth county, where they are hunting game. They will return late this evening.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

The second Y. M. C. A. eleven will meet for practice Monday afternoon at half-past three on the Park avenue grounds.

The regular football team of the Elizabeth Athletic Club will go to Brooklyn this afternoon and line up against the Crescents of that city at Eastern Park. The second eleven will meet the team from Pennington Seminary this afternoon on the Elizabeth grounds.

Thomas Cuming, of the Y. M. C. A. team, will fill the position of end or tackle for the Westfield eleven in their game with the Jefferson Parks of Elizabeth, at Westfield this afternoon. Cuming will remain on that team as long as it does not interfere with his playing on the Y. M. C. A. team. He will play half back for the second Y. M. C. A. team, Wednesday afternoon.

WHIST.

The Fortnightly Whist Club will meet at the residence of L. B. Woolston, of Fairview avenue, on Thursday evening.

WHEN THIEVES FALL OUT

Mystery of Barrett's Dual Life Being Solved.

Quarrels Between the Notorious Burglar and His Partner, Chaffey, Aiding the Police—The Former's Crimes Procured Him $500,000 in Twenty Years—His Career.

New York, Nov. 16.—Day by day the police of New York and Boston are clearing away the mystery of the dual life of William Barrett, who, for nearly twenty years, supported his wife in luxury in this city upon the proceeds of crimes committed in Massacusetts. Barret is to-day a convicted murderer in a Massachusetts prison, while his alleged accomplice, James S. Chaffey, is held by the Boston police in $25,000 bail. According to the police Barrett came to this country from England about sixteen years ago.

His First Burglary.

It is now definitely known that his first burglary was the famous Ames case. His next theft was that of the Kidder stamp collection, together with a lot of valuables in Kidder's house. He is also said to be connected with the Simmonds burglaries in Fitchburg in 1887. He is supposed to have stolen during his career property valued at over $500,000.

"When Thieves Fall Out."

James S. Chaffey, who is now under arrest in Boston as an accomplice of Barrett, was at first thought to be Barrett's brother. This is not so, however. Although usually reticent, Chaffey emphatically denied his guilt yesterday. He says that he did not know the goods he received from Barrett were stolen. Barrett, who has been interviewed in prison, says that this is a lie, and that Chaffey had complete knowledge of how the property was secured.

Barrett's Extensive Operations.

Barrett generally represented himself as a horse dealer and explained his absence from his New York home by telling friends that he was compelled to make frequent trips into the country to purchase animals. To others he claimed to be a dealer in old gold and silver. The police, it is claimed, have found wholesale jewelers in both this city and Boston who admit having regularly purchased ingots of gold and silver from Barrett. Some of these purchases averaged $2,000 a month.

Identifying Stolen Goods.

Boston police headquarters was visited all day yesterday and to-day by scores of wealthy people whose houses have been burglarized during the last ten years. They were trying to identify the property seized by the police at Chaffey's home in Roxbury, Mass. Barrett is also known to have turned over $120,000 worth of stocks to Chaffey. Chaffey does not deny this, but says that he burned the papers on the morning of his arrest.

CARLISLE INDIAN SCHOOL

Sixteenth Annual Report Shows It To Be in Fine Condition.

Carlisle, Pa., Nov. 16.—The sixteenth annual report of the condition of the Indian training school in this city was last night sent to the commissioner of Indian affairs at Washington. The report is very long and contains many important facts for congress to consider at the coming session in reference to the care of the Indians. There are 632 pupils in the school—368 males and 254 females—representing fifty tribes of Indians. The report refers to the money earned by the Indian students during the outing season, and how judiciously they spend it. The school is in a flourishing condition.

WANT THE BIBLE READ.

60,000 Signatures to a Petition to Chicago's Board of Education.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—Sixty thousand men and women who believe the Bible should be read in the public schools in a non-sectarian manner have signed a petition to that effect which will soon be presented to the board of education. Signatures are still being obtained. It is proposed to have a committee representing the various churches prepare selections from the scriptures to be read.

MYSTERY OF THE SEA.

Hastily Constructed Raft Washed Ashore at Cape May.

Cape May, N. J., Nov. 16.—A raft, ten by thirty feet, apparently hastily made of odd planks and fastened by ropes, was washed ashore near this city by the heavy sea last night. It looks as though it had been required in the emergency of a shipwreck.

PERILOUS VENTURE AT SEA.

Bravery of Six Sailors In Rescuing a Would Be Suicide.

Much imperiling of life is demanded in the midocean rescue of a drowning man, and such an incident always furnishes intense dramatic interest for a spectator. The Baron de Malortie, in a recent interesting work, recalls an exciting scene he witnessed years ago while crossing the Atlantic. The ship was several days out when one afternoon he was idly lounging around on the upper deck. "Suddenly," he says, "I saw a man approach the bulwark. He threw overboard some objects—we learned afterward that they were his Bible and a rosary—and followed them with a header into the foaming sea.

"'Man overboard!' I cried, but the storm covered my voice, and I rushed up the bridge to call the attention of the officer on duty to the accident. Stop! Half speed astern, and orders for the lowering of the boat were the affairs of a minute or two.

"'Volunteers to man the boat!' shouted a young midshipman, cutting a lifeboat from the davits.

"Ten men came forward for every one wanted, and selecting four of the most powerful tars the middy was lowering the boat, when a young doctor, quickly pocketing a flask of brandy for a restorative, let himself down one of the ropes and reached the boat as a monumental wave was dashing over it.

"The men pulled with a will, and the gallant little nutshell fought bravely up and down the mountains of angry waters. As to the suicide, he was far astern, and only from time to time could we see something like a human form emerge on the top of a white crested wave.

"Oh, the anxiety with which we watched both the boat and its goal! Disappearing altogether at moments, when we feared we had seen the last of these noble fellows, another gigantic wave would toss them up again like a cork. It was exciting in the extreme. But the boat was gaining. Nearer and nearer it came, while we were slowly following in its wake.

"There! The doctor throws a life belt! They are only some yards off now. But, no; a cruel wave has tossed them past the object of their tremendous efforts. There! They are throwing round her nose; they are tacking; the middy has passed the rudder to an old quartermaster, and armed with boathooks he and the doctor stand ready for action.

"Another second, and the life belt is hooked; the man is grasping it desperately, but he has no strength left. There he slips—all is lost just at the critical moment!

"But who is that jumping overboard? Three cheers for the brave man—it's the doctor! But he, too, disappears. Are there to be two victims instead of one? And there—hurrah!—there is the doctor, his precious burden before him.

"The men pull like mad to reach the two ere they sink again. The gallant young middy is watching for the right moment. More life belts are thrown. They help the doctor to keep above water; another pull and the boathook has done its duty, and while two of the men stick to the oars the others are busy dragging rescuer and rescued on board.

"The long cold bath, the fright and the proximity of death had wonderfully sobered the would be suicide, whom remorse for a drunken spree had driven to this mad freak. It did not require many restoratives to bring him to, and two hours later he had an opportunity of recapitulating his adventure in dire solitude, having been condemned to be kept in irons for the rest of the voyage, a well deserved punishment for exposing the lives of six heroes indeed in this perilous venture."

A TERRIBLE EXPERIMENT.

How a Husband Tried to Cure His Wife's Fear of Pythons.

Concerning pythons the following is a true story: A young lady in this country for a long time resisted her lover's entreaties to go out to India with him as his wife. She had a horror of the wi l animals she believed she might encounter there, especially serpents. At length, however, after he had issued a sort of ultimatum, she consented to accompany him. She did not, however, leave her fears behind her and lived in constant terror of some day meeting what she so intensely feared. Her husband did his best to laugh her fears way, but without avail. Then he resolved to try more drastic means.

A huge python was killed in the neighborhood of his bungalow. Without telling his wife anything about it, he ordered the reptile to be brought into the drawing room and coiled up as if asleep on the hearth rug. Then he went out and called his wife, telling her to go into the drawing room, and that he would join her in a few minutes. Soon after he heard a dreadful scream. "That will cure her of her fear of serpents," he smiled to himself and purposely delayed his entry. When at last he went into the drawing room, he saw his wife lying dead on the floor, and coiled around her was another huge python, the mate to the one that lay dead on the hearth rug.—Realm.

A Good Old Game.

"Beats me," said the man with the high standing collar, "that they call the monkey business they engage in nowadays baseball"—

"It has reached the pinnacle of science," shouted the modern rooter.

"Science! You call that scientific playing?"

"Certainly."

"Never saw—but of course you didn't, you weren't old enough—the old Whirlwinds play"—

"No, sir!"

"Thought not! Four to one! Two to nothing! One to three! Fudge! Why, the last match game the Whirlwinds played (it was with the Tornadias) we made 237 runs"—

"And you call that playing?"

"Playing! I should say it was playing. Even the club we beat (the Tornadias) made 194 runs, in spite of our skilled battery. One to three! Four to nothing! And men are fools enough to pay for such playing at ball playing! Oh, for a good old game of real baseball!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Play—Is It Worth Sixpence?

Why do I go to the theater? I think I go because, on the whole, I like it, and I certainly think, as things go, I get my money's worth there. A stall costs me 10s.; well, I get a nice, pretty, comfortable place to sit in, say a shilling for that; music, another shilling; acting that is always fair and often very good indeed, 5s.; pretty scenery, a shilling; extra display of feminine loveliness, costume and general fascinations, a shilling; the pleasing illusion that I am in the habit of calling dukes by the diminutives of their Christian names, that's worth 6d. at least. I say that only leave 6d. for the play! Oh, take it all round, it's cheap.—Nineteenth Century.

If?

If you want to preserve apples, don't cause a break in the skin. The germs of decay thrive rapidly there. So the germs of consumption find good soil for work when the lining of the throat and lungs is bruised, made raw, or injured by colds and coughs. Scott's Emulsion, with hypophosphites, will heal inflamed mucus membranes. THE AUTUMN FAIRIES.

Little fairy feet that prance
On the breezes cold—
Little feet that gayly dance
On the streets of gold.

Little wings that rob the sun
Of his choicest beams,
Fluttering in the meadows dim,
Laving in the streams.

Cheering flash of light divine,
Softly peeping through
All the gilded charms that twine
In the morning dew.

Painting thus a springing weed
Mortal feet have trod,
Till the glad expanse of mead
Gleams with goldenrod.

A NOTED OLD HOUSE.

A Residence In Georgetown and Something About Its History.

There is a house in Georgetown which from its foundation had a foreign influence about it. It is a large, substantial, though unpretentious mansion, minus low windows, turrets and other accessories which mark the modern dwelling. It stands at the corner of Twenty-ninth and N streets. It was planned by the owner, a man of fine attainments, literary tastes and a great linguist. He held office under the government, and not having a surplus of the "needful" was compelled to mortgage the house. The money was loaned from the estate of the celebrated Polish patriot, General Thaddeus Kosciusko, by Colonel George Bomford, the owner at that time of beautiful Kalorama.

The owner did not live long to enjoy his comfortable home, and his widow was compelled to rent it in order to pay off the mortgage. The first foreign tenant was Count Napoleon Bonaparte. His wife was Victoria, daughter of General Gratiot. The count was a charming man and most agreeable in all his business dealings with her, whom he termed his "amiable landlady."

The minister from Mexico was the next foreign tenant, but he died shortly after taking the house.

Baron Geroit lived eight years in the house and was so pleased with it that he made a proposition to purchase it. The Chevalier de Potestad of the Spanish legation, whose wife was the beautiful Miss Chapman, granddaughter of the celebrated Dr. Chapman of Philadelphia, was a tenant during the war, and when there was a scare here on account of the southern troops being near the capital promised to hoist the Spanish flag should the place be invaded.

The house did not lack for distinguished American tenants. R. Barnwell Rhett of South Carolina, a noted secessionist, succeeded Count Montholon and purchased from him his elegant Parisian furniture; Mr. Allen, an editor from St. Louis; Governor Fulton, senator from Arkansas; Colonel Charles Ellet, the great engineer; Mr. Worthington, a gentleman of wealth, whose daughter married Colonel William H. Philip, a lawyer of note in Washington, and others.—Washington Star.

"Maryland, My Maryland."

True merit in a song is a passport which no sentry will question, and long before peace had been declared James R. Randall's "Maryland, My Maryland," that fiery bit of rhymed eloquence, had crossed the enemy's lines and exacted its meed of praise from the literary circles at the north. Oliver Wendell Holmes says of it, "It was the best poem produced on either side during the war." And the poet himself writes, "Soon after its appearance abundant evidence was borne to me that, whatever the fate of the Confederacy might be, my song would survive it."

It crossed the ocean, and when it came out in England Mr. Randall received an autograph letter from a member of Lord Byron's family, filled with expressions of admiration of it, and containing a request for a manuscript copy, and an invitation to the author to visit his correspondent in London. About this time Mr. John R. Thompson, for so many years connected with The Southern Literary Messenger, happened to be abroad, and upon his return he said to Mr. Randall:

"I envy you above all men."

"Why?" asked the poet.

"Because," said Mr. Thompson, "when I was in London I met in a drawing room one of the most beautiful and charming of women, who asked if I would not like to hear a song of my southern country. When I replied in the affirmative, she went to the piano and sang 'Maryland, My Maryland.' After she had finished she turned to me and said:

"'When you see the friend who wrote that tell him that you heard it sung by a Russian girl who lives at Archangel, north of Siberia, and learned to sing it there.'"—Philadelphia Times.

The Joke Was on Him.

I think the maid up at the B.'s must be an altogether remarkable person, if half they tell of her is true. A young man went to call on Miss B. one evening. Miss B. was not at home, but she had left word with the maid that anybody who called was to wait her return. Accordingly this young man was shown into the dimly lighted drawing room, and found himself a comfortable chair in a corner. He was weary. In fact, the man who told me the story said he had been bathing, whatever that may be. At any rate, he fell into a doze. When he awoke, Miss B. was still absent. There was the same dim light in the room. He looked at his watch. It was 4 o'clock. There was only one thing to do, of course. He took his shoes off and slipped out the front door. This is a true story, and this is all there is of it, except that he has never dared to look Miss B. in the face again, for he can't make out whether she knows it or not.—Washington Post.

In His Way.

Elder George Champlin was a colored preacher who exercised his calling for many years in Rhode Island. He was a man of excellent common sense and no little wit. At one time some of his hearers complained that he had been rather too personal and severe in one of his sermons.

"When I am preaching," responded the elder, with a shrewd glance from his sharp eyes at the remonstrants, "when I am preaching, I try to shoot right at the devil every time, but if any one gets between me and the devil, why, of course, brethren, he will be liable to get hurt."—Youth's Companion.

A Shocking Example.

An Arkansas City woman used concentrated lye instead of baking powder in her biscuits. Her husband ate of them, and none of his friends has been able to put any dependence in what he said since.—Topeka Journal.

Rhetoric is nothing but reason well dressed and argument put in order.—Jeremy Collier.

NO MORE RHEUMATISM

Sheriff Howe Cured of Rheumatism by Dr. Greene's Nervura.

No One Need Longer Suffer From Rheumatism or Neuralgia---Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy Always Cures.

SHERIFF E. W. HOWE.

Half the world suffers from pain and aches when there is not the slightest reason for so doing. Headache is alarmingly frequent and leads to serious results. Backache is most common and keeps thousands in misery. Neuralgic pains of side and chest torment myriads of victims. All this suffering is caused by a weakness, irritation or diseased condition of the nerves and blood, is entirely unnecessary, and can easily be cured.

Sheriff E. W. Howe, of Northfield, Vt., advises you in all such cases to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. He tells the great good this remarkable medicine did him, and to show the high esteem in which he is held by his townspeople and that you can trust implicitly in every word he says, it is only necessary to state that Sheriff Howe has been Sheriff and Deputy Sheriff of Northfield for 23 years; is Town Trustee, Street Commissioner of Northfield. Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, Town Grand Juror and School Committee, besides being a prominent business man well-known throughout the State of Vermont. The word of a man so highly trusted and honored should be taken and his advice followed by all.

"I was sick five months which left me with asthma and rheumatism. The asthma would take me most anytime, especially nights, when I was obliged to get up and open windows and doors to breathe. It took me once on my way home so bad that I was obliged to have help to get home. I suffered greatly with this trouble. My rheumatism at this time was very bad being so that for six weeks I did not leave the room and for five months I did not do a day's work.

"I saw Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy advertised and the cures effected by its use, and thought it might hit my case, and it did. The asthma is greatly improved, in fact, it is nearly cured, and the rheumatism is greatly helped. I think very highly of this remedy for its good. I would recommend anybody to use Dr. Greene's Nervury blood and nerve remedy for asthma or rheumatism, for it is a good medicine. I deem it simple justice to a great remedy to write this letter. I never expected to do any more work when I was sick, but the Nervura did me a great deal of good and I am now able to work again."

It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City. He has the largest practice in the world, and this grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., MONDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR

ENDED IN A BLAZE OF GLORY.

THE HOSPITAL ENRICHED SEVERAL THOUSAND DOLLARS.

It Was the Biggest Charitable Success Plainfield Has Ever Had—Presentations to Miss Stewart—Closing Scenes.

The Kirmess is over and only the pleasant memories and the greatly increased treasury of Muhlenburg Hospital remain. Plainfield will soon settle back to its regular routine of life until the firemen's fair comes to stir up the people of this city again. Never has Plainfield entered so fully into a similar scheme.

While the entire city is deserving of great credit for its generous support of the Kirmess, the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary Board of the Muhlenburg Hospital should be given special mention for their energy and good judgement in the management of the affair. For weeks before it began they were hard at work and their labors have continued down to today, for it is still necessary to close up the accounts. Mrs. D. T. VanBuren, president of the Board, as head of the entire movement, filled her difficult position in a way which added greatly to the succes of the Kirmess. During the past week she has been constantly on the scene, from early morning until late at night, directing or assisting as was necessary.

And to Miss Lila Agnew Stewart, too much credit cannot be given. It was she that planned out the entire Kirmess, arranged the position of the booths, suggested the design foreach, taught the dancers and did a multitude of other things. Her patience and kindness to all made her a great favorite, while the immense amount of work that she accomplished won for her the admiration of everyone.

As The Daily Press predicted, the attendance on Saturday was by far the greatest of any day during the week. In the afternoon fully fifteen hundred people witnessed the matinee, while in the evening twenty-five hundred spectators viewed the dances, while five hundred more were turned away as the academy was already crowded to its greatest capacity. All the dances were given and everything passed off without a hitch. To give a list of the best performances would merely be to name all the dances, and all those who took part are certainly deserving of much credit. The Highland Reel and the Military Dance were given after a rest of one night and the rest seemed to improve the dances, if that were possible. The Tarantelle and the Minuet still claimed their share of the applause while Mrs. L. W. Serrell, Jr., in the Serpentine Dance and W. J. O'Brien were more popular than ever. William N. Runyon was there, and had three new stanzas which completely brought down the house. The applause which was given him lasted several minutes and could not be quelled until the next dance was begun. The new words were as follows:

Now Plainfield folks, the week is o'er,
The fair is nearly through:
For what you've done in our behalf
We're thankful unto you.
You've spent your money lavishly,
And we are glad to find
We've several thousand now to spend
For the sick and halt and blind.
The Board of Lady Governors
Deserves unstinted praise,
For the way in which they've managed things
Throughout these last six days.
They surely are entitled to Eternal, lasting fame:
It takes the ladies every time
To play a winning game.

We've never half-way realized,
Until this grand Kirmess,
That Plainfield is so justly famed
For female loveliness.
All Jersey knows that for its girls
This town of ours is chief,
But that each one should be a queen
Is most beyond belief.
Each Gypsy, Scotch and Spanish lass
Looks nice enough to eat:
While the ladies of the May-pole dance
Can simply not be beat.
If you think you've seen as many queens
In another town this size,
You'd better go to Dr. Ard
And let him treat your eyes.

And now dear friends there still remains
But one more thing to do,
And that's to render thanks to her
Ho's put this Kirmess through.
She's labored with us faithfully
For many a weary day,
And whether she's done well or not
I leave to you to say.
All hail to her! A grand success
Will e'er be her's, I ween,
And we of Plainfield will unite
To keep her memory green.
In years to come, when politics
Is woman's natural bent,
We'll pick Miss Stewart from them all
And make her President.

The War and Moon Dance concluded the programme and was repeated after the Shadow Dance by Miss Genevieve Daniel, and the curtain was drawn forever on the picturesque braves and squaws as they kneeled and reclined about the stage in a closing tableau.

The different dancers did not fail to remember their teacher and friend, and Miss Stewart was called out time after time to receive their tokens most of which came in the shape of beautiful flowers. The dancers of the Tarantelle presented her with a handsome tortoise shell and silver comb. She also received a beautiful star-shaped pin of gold, set with pearls, from the women of the Auxiliary Board.

The court jester, the soloists and many of the other dancers also received flowers.

After the Spanish Dance Mrs. VanBuren was led upon the stage and presented with a basket of immense chrysanthemums from the members of the refreshment committee.

The banner for the favorite matinee dance was won by the Hornpipe which had 900 votes. The Gypsy dancers were the victors in the evening dance contest, with the Indians close behind.

The quilt which was offered at the Kirmess to the doctor receiving the most number of votes was won by Dr. G. W. Endicott after an exciting contest, a testimonial of the esteem in which this talented physician is held by a host of friends.

The Gypsy booth was one of the most attractive of all the booths at the Kirmess. The dark red hangings and the evergreen decorations made a pretty frame work for the Gypsies in their brilliant many-colored costumes that gathered there. The booth was designed by William Pinton, of West Eighth street, and was arranged almost entirely by Mr. and Mrs. Pinton.

The supper Saturday evening was served by St. Mary's and the First Presbyterian churches. The members of the refreshment committee who were on duty were Mrs. J. M. Bettman, Mr. and Mrs. George B. DeRevere, Mrs. W. T. Williams, Mrs. W. A. Woodruff. The waitresses were the Misses Cornelia Rockfellow, Frances Demarest, Leonore Carl, Annie Carl, Lena Morgan, Elsie VanZandt, Agnes Blair, Helen Boice, Nora Williams, Julia Williams, Mary A. Luckey, Grace E. Overton, Olive Newell, Eva Dayton and Margaret Vermeule.

The firemen should also receive their share of credit as they aided greatly in keeping the passage ways clear. They were fully prepared for any emergency and had any trouble occurred they were ready to handle the crowd and prevent any panic.

At the conclusion of the Gypsy dance she was led out and William N. Runyon, with a few well-chosen words, presented her with a large bouquet of red roses and a handsome dress suit case from her friends, the Gypsies. She also received books and other tokens from the many friends that she made during her stay in this city.

The profits of the Kirmess will probably reach close to $5,000, which is as near as those in charge are able to determine at present.

AFTERTHOUGHTS.

Kirmess week has come and gone. It was a great, big, undeniable success, and the hospital bank balance is properly adjusted. To every one of the host that earned the victory the entire community owes a debt of personal gratitude. The Kirmess was a public blessing. It provided, for six glad days, an honest, healthful topic of conversation and object of interest for probably 20,000 persons, and this is much. It brought to light an unsuspected array of local talent, beauty and grace that was a surprise most welcome; it evidenced a sweet charity in Charity's fitting sphere—Home; and it dragged out a lot of fellow-townsmen who had not been out for no one knows how long, and did them a world of good. Above all it was a bully good show for the money, and this is the feature that will recommend it most tenderly to the average citizen, for your Plainfielder is not to be fooled in the matter of his money's worth. Everyone got several times the value of his investment and had a royal time into the bargain.

It is only too bad that the Kirmess is not a permanent attraction. 'Tis a pity to lose sight of that fairyland, the pretty girls and the manly men, and return once again to our prosaic life, but so it must be.

Perhaps, however, we shall have another gala week next year and Kirmess Week may be, hereafter, an annual affair like the Fourth of July, or Hallowe'en, or the Grocers' Picnic. The Kirmess has come to stay in our hearts, anyhow. T.

Dancers Entertained.

Mr. and Mrs. George B. DeRevere entertained the participants in the Russian Military dance and Father Murphy in the refreshment rooms at the Academy Saturday evening.

The Gypsies in the Kirmess were entertained Friday evening in the Welsh booth by their chaperone, Mrs. F. H. Andrews.

AGAINST MIXED SCHOOLS.

Rev. P. S. Gibson in Favor of Seperate Instruction for Colored Children.

Rev. P. S. Gibson, pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, expects soon to start a discussion on the "Mixed School Question." This subject has been deeply studied by Mr. Gibson and he hopes to bring out some very valuable points. In speaking about it, he said that in the Northern States educational advantages were offered equal to both white and colored people, but after graduation the advantages to the colored people were nominal, as they were not allowed to teach or assist in helping their race in a way where they could make a living. On the other hand the white people were given these advantages.

He is a strong advocate of separate schools for the colored people, and he advises that the colored people in New Jersey hold a monster conference for the purpose of formulating plans for the building of school houses for the colored race. A little later Mr. Gibson will have something important to say along this line.

Ticket for the Year 2000.

Editor of The Press:—Miss Stewart has carried Plainfield by storm, and as Mr. Runyon happily put it in his song on Saturday night, we would all vote for her for president. What's the matter, then, with Runyon for vice-president? What a fin-de-siecle ticket!

Meanwhile, while we are waiting, and working, some of us, and we will now work with renewed zeal, for the removal of Miss Stewart's political disabilities, why not head the ticket for '96 with the name of our own and only "Will?" What a name to conquer with! And what a "song and dance" we would have at the White House, and how much we would contribute to "the gaiety of nations!"

Wedded at the Plains.

Elliott T. Collins, of Scotch Plains, and Miss Grace E. Meeker, daughter of John Meeker, of Milton place, were married at the residence of Rev. J. H. Parks, D. D., at Scotch Plains, yesterday afternoon in the presence of their immediate family. After the ceremony the happy couple departed amid showers of rice on their honeymoon trip. Upon their return they will reside in Brooklyn. The bride is a niece of Street Commissioner Meeker, of this city.

For a Benefit.

It was announced at the Kirmess Saturday evening that a promenade concert would be given this evening for the joint benefit of Joseph L. Wiseman, manager of the cycle academy, and for the Muhlenberg Hospital. The floor will be cleared and Guttman's orchestra will furnish the music for the dancing. All the booths will be open and the ice cream and soda water departments as well. The admission will be twenty-five cents.

Fallen Heir to a Sum of Money.

John Brennan, an old man of Summit, who has been unable to work for the past five years, and who has been in very poor circumstances, has just been notified that he has fallen heir to quite a sum of money through the death of his brother, who was formerly a sailor and resided in Haverstraw, N. Y., and who had money deposited in three savings banks.

District Meeting.

A district meeting of the Knights of Pythias will be held Thursday evening in the rooms of Goodwill Lodge, No. 101, at Scotch Plains, to nominate a district deputy grand chancellor. Perseverence and Unity Lodges of this city will be well represented. The delegates will go both by train and stage.

Overcome by Heat.

Mrs. J. H. Kenyon, of 425 Kensington avenue, while in attendance at the Kirmess Saturday evening, became overheated and fainted away. She was carried to a side room where Dr. Murray attended her. After she revived she was taken to her home in one of Hedden's carriages.

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhœa of long standing in six hours, with one small bottle of Chambertain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief. It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. R. Armstrong, Manager.

SENSATION AT A FUNERAL.

NEW PROVIDENCE PEOPLE DEMANDED A POST MORTEM EXAMINATION

Edward Wilcox Assaulted by Samuel Clark and Dies a Few Days After—Friends Prevent a Hurried Burial.

Edward Wilcox, a farmer of New Providence who was appointed inspector at the recent election at that place, was assaulted in the performance of his duty by Samuel Clark, Jr., son of the late Samuel Clark who was killed at Scotch Plains. After that time Wilcox complained a great deal of pains around his heart. Medical aid was summoned but it had no effect and he died last Wednesday.

The funeral took place at his home Saturday, but as the body was being removed from the house some of the neighbors objected and claimed that a post mortem examination should be held. The body was taken to the house again and County Physician O'Reilly was notified. He held the examination yesterday afternoon and he gave the verdict that death was caused by unnatural action of the heart. While he would not say the assault was the immediate cause of death, it no doubt had hastened it.

Young Clark left for parts unknown as soon as he heard of the death.

The decedent was a highly respected citizen. Tax Collector H. N. Spencer, of the borough, was a nephew.

FIREMEN ON DUTY.

The Men Who Handled the Crowd Saturday Night.

The difficult job of handling the crowd at the Columbia Cycle Academy, Saturday evening, was placed in the hands of Chief Doane, of the Fire Department, and his assistants. There was no trouble although the firemen had to work hard to keep the passageways clear.

Those on duty were: Chief T. O. Doane, Assistant Chief James Martin, W. T. Newman, foreman of No. 1, L. Dunavan, assistant-foreman of No. 1, C. J. Newman, foreman of No. 2, E. E. Anthony, foreman of Alert Hose, Joseph Hawkins, assistant foreman of Alert Hose, Abner Bartlett, assistant foreman of Alert Hose, August Saltzman, C. Johnson, J. Daw, Frank Schuck, C. Smith, Stelle Randolph, W. Addis, H. Hartpence, Frank Putnam, C. Glaentzer, S. Miller and C. Conover.

Largest Ever Held.

The largest attendance at a men's meeting, ever held in the Y. M. C. A. building, was that of yesterday afternoon. Nearly every seat was taken. President W. D. Murray presided. A chorus choir, under the direction of H. J. Martin, rendered excellent music, and L. S. Bond rendered an effective solo. Howard Case presided at the piano and Whitfield Frazee assisted on the cornet. The address by David McConaughy, of India, was exceedingly interesting. At the close a collection was taken for his work in that country.

Good News for the Firemen.

The dances and drills will be the great attractions at the Firemen's fair. Mrs. Bartlett having recovered from her illness is again able to prepare the beautiful and unique dances and drills. Queen Flora will be given the first night. The second night, Gypsy dance, sailor's songs and a Firemen's drill and dance. The third night, a Roman sabre drill and a scarf drill. The Flowers and Butterfly dances will be the fourth night attractions.

For Foreign Missions.

The special offering in the Trinity Reformed church yesterday morning for the debt of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed church was $211. This amount will doubtless be considerably increased by the gifts of those who were prevented from being present by the inclement weather.

Cut By a Broken Bottle.

One of the horses that pulls Warren engine to fires in the borough, stepped on a broken bottle one day last week, and cut his leg quite badly near the hoof. He has not quite recovered from the cut.

Croup is a terror to young mothers. To post them concerning the first symptoms, and treatment is the object of this item. The first indication of croup is hoarseness. In a child who is subject to croup it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the rough cough has appeared it will prevent the attack. It has never been known to fail. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

DR. RIGGS TO LECTURE.

He Will Deliver a Course of Study Lectures on the Eastern Question.

A few friends have made arrangements with Prof. James F. Riggs, D. D., to deliver a course of lecture studies on the Eastern Question in this city. The topics will be as follows: "Asiatic Empire: the Orient of Today;" "Mohammed and Mohammedanism;" "Balance of Power, in Theory and Practice;" "The Crimean War;" "English Power in India; Sepoy Rebellion;" "Russo-Turkish War of 1877-1878."

The six lectures will cost seventy-five cents for the entire course. There will be no single admissions. The lectures will be delivered on Tuesday evenings, commencing November 26th, and continuing (except during the holiday season) in the upper room of the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, whose trustees have courteously placed this room at their service. The charge is only sufficent to meet the expenses of the lecturer, printing and incidentals. After each lecture there will be for those who wish it an hour devoted to conversation and study with Prof. Riggs.

ANOTHER DELAY.

Mayor Gilbert Sends a Letter to the Council About the Railway Extension.

The defects which The Press stated had been found in the street railway ordinance by Mayor Gilbert has resulted in that official sending a communication to the City Clerk for the Common Council with reference to the matter. A special meeting of the Council will be called this week to recieve the letter and act on whatever suggestiens are made in it. This will mean another delay in the extension.

"Highwaymen and Tramps."

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—It would seem that the fair name of our beautiful suburban towns and cities is being seriously damaged by the reports of "holding up" and "robbery" of their citizens on the highways. Two recent occurrances near here—which of themselves were of trifling importance—have been so magnified that the outside public is justified in believing that the woods are full of "highwaymen and tramps." I see no good excuse for heralding far and wide stories of "holding up" because an intoxicated man staggers in front of a bicyclist, thereby causing a tumble, or solicits alms or food on the street. Justice.

Fanwood, Nov. 15th.

Endeavor Sociabilty.

On Thursday evening of this week at eight o'clock in the lecture room of the First Baptist church a reception will be given to all the members of societies of Christian Endeavor and Epworth Leagues of Plainfield and vicinity. President French and other officers of the State Christian Endeavor Union will be present. All interested in the coming work of the Young People's societies are cordially invited to be present. The reunion of the party who went to the Convention at Atlantic City, will be held on the same evening at the same place at seven o'clock.

Thrown Out of a Wagon.

While Constable Samuel Taynor, of the borough, and George R. Nolan, of Elmwood place, were returning late last evening from a drive, their horse became frightened at a trolley car in front of Adam Fritz's house on Somerset street, and started to run away. Both men were thrown out of the buggy into the street. Mr. Taynor was severely cut about the head, while Mr. Nolan escaped without any injury. The wheels of the buggy were wrecked, but the horse kept on running till he reached Mr. Taynor's barn at 68 Jackson avenue.

Three Years of Active Service.

Tomorrow evening a reception will be tendered to Rev. and Mrs. Richardson, in the Park Avenue Baptist church, in recognition of the third anniversary of their settlement with the church. Members of the congregation and friends in the community are cordially invited.

County Teachers.

Next Friday the Union County Teachers' Institute commences in the Cherry Street School, Elizabeth. Papers will be read by educators from all over the county.

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

NO DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

THE FIELD IS OPEN FOR A CITIZENS' OR PEOPLES' MOVEMENT.

The Dissatisfied Republicans Will Be Given a Chance to Do Their Best or Worst, As the Case May Be.

James E. Martine today furnishes The Daily Press with the following official declaration from the Democratic Association, of which he is president:

"After consultation and mature consideration the Democratic Association deem it inexpedient and unwise to place a ticket in the field for the coming municipal contest, thereby leaving the field open for a Peoples' or Citizens' movement."

In conversation with a Press reporter Mr. Martine said that the Democrats as an organization would have nothing whatever to do with the coming municipal campaign. That whatever part members of the party took in the election would be as individuals, and their acts could not be held accountable to the Democratic party.

FORMALLY ORGANIZED.

The Plainfield Catholic Club Meet and Adopt a Constitution.

The Plainfield Catholic Club met yesterday afternoon and adopted the constitution and by-lays as presented by the committee. The following board of governors was then elected: P. Casey, T. Carty, John Lynch, F. McInerney, M. J. Mack, C. J. Ward, M. R. Flynn, Hugh MacDonnell, C. Guinee and J. Keenan.

The trustees were chosen as follows: Bishop Wigger, Vicar General Doane, Father Smyth, Thomas Carty, and Hugh MacDonald. One hundred and sixty-five members signed the constitution as charter members. An auditing committee, consisting of M. J. Cashen, D. J. Shay, and E. McCue, was appointed and an investigating committee to examine applicants for membership was also appointed. The board of governors meet tonight for organization.

Dangerous Bed Place.

A man from Somerville came to Plainfield Saturday afternoon and imbibed too freely. In his wanderings he walked on the railroad track, and feeling a little bit tired laid down on the rails.

He was discovered by Alex. Manning, of Boice, Runyon & Co.'s lumber yard, about five o'clock, and with the help of a boy succeeded in getting the man off the tracks. He was then started on his way, and with a little trouble managed to walk.

Didn't Know How He Got There.

One drunk was the only prisoner to whom Judge Coddington had to administer justice this morning and he got off with a suspended sentence. He gave his name as Alexander McGuigan and was arrested for being drunk and disorderly on West Eighth street by Officer Saunders. He owned up to the fact that he had been drinking a little but did not have the slightest idea how he got in jail.

Class Rings Ordered.

At a meeting of the Class of '96 of Leal's School during last week, the class rings were ordered. They will be the same as those described in the Daily Press last week.

—The contract case of Hooker against Day was settled in Justice Newcorn's court, and the case of Hooker against Leland, on contract, has been adjourned for one week.

—At Reynolds' pharmacy during the past week $1,250 worth of Kirmess tickets were sold and not a mistake was made.

—Marshal Wilson arrested Bert Metler this morning for riding his wheel on Somerset street. He was fined $2.

—Work on the third story of the Jackson building has been started. The other work is progressing in proportion.

—Finest Jersey turkeys for Thanksgiving at the lowest price at W. L. & J. M. Smalley, 90 Somerset street.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

HAVE THEY SOLD OUT?

Reported That Spain Has Bought Off Rebels.

Other Dispatches from Cuba Declare That the Insurgents Are Gaining in Strength and Victories—Gen. Canellas' Brutality Causing Desertions in the Rebel Ranks.

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 18.—A special from Tampa, Fla., says: Plant's steamer Olivette, arrived here from Havana last evening. Among the passengers were some prominent personages direct from Cuba, where they learned that Campos has instructed his men not to fire upon the insurgents, if it could be avoided, on account of a purchase price now pending between Spain and the Cuban leaders. It is told by a close friend of Campos and is understood by the powers that be in Havana that the insurrection will come to an immediate end, and for the reason that both Gomez and Maceo, the leaders, have been bought by the Spanish government, and while the price has not been delivered to the sellers, the money for them is now in Havona.

Gen. Canellas' Brutality.

Santiago de Cuba, Nov. 9, via Key West, Fla., Nov. 18.—Gen. Canellas, chief of the military division of Guantanamo, is at present the terror of that district, as he is arresting innocent people and casting them into jail and otherwise committing all sorts of abuses. Of course this conduct is increasing the ranks of the insurgents, as every day great numbers have gone to the field to escape the fury of Canellas, until now there is scarcely a Cuban in Guantanamo. All the prominent gentlemen arrested a few days ago in Guantanamo and brought to the Morro castle in this city have been sent to the penal city of Ceuta in Africa.

Kicked and Slapped.

On the 7th inst. several other prominent men of Guantanamo were arrested and incarcerated, and they will probably be sent to Ceuta. On the 8th inst. Bartolome Misas, a Spaniard, who is well liked in Guantanamo, and who represented the hardware house of Brauet & Co., was summoned by Gen. Canellas, insulted, kicked and slapped in the face and then cast into prison where he still is. It is said that Gen. Canellas drinks very hard.

Killed by Deserters.

On the 7th inst. eight of the nine soldiers who garrisoned the village of Dos Gaminos went over to the rebels with arms and ammunition. The ninth soldier, who, at the last moment refused to go with them, was killed by the deserters. In Baracoa the rebels have destroyed all the machinery and apparatus used there to make cocoanut oil.

Government Convoy Captured.

On October 30 a Spanish column of 1,300 men, under Col. Tejerize, left Manzanillo for Vaguita, with convoy of eighty wagons loaded with provisions and 1,000 Mauzer rifles and ammunition. The insurgents, who at first were very far from the road the convey took, only succeeded in reaching it on the sugar estate, Sofia, near Veguita. The insurgents, 500 strong, fiercely fought the Spaniards, and after a short but bloody engagement the insurgents succeeded in taking two wagons laden with crackers, 185 Mauzer rifles and 15 boxes of ammunition. The Spaniards had 12 killed and more than 50 wounded, almost all with machetes. The rebels had 4 killed and 14 wounded.

Rebel Success.

On the 1st inst. Gen. Gonzales Munez left Veguita with a force of 2,500 men, infantry, cavalry and artillery. On the 3d inst. they encountered the rebel leader Rabi with 1,500 men in Sabana, Valenzuela and Paralejo. They fought for three hours, the rebels compelling Munez, in spite of his superior forces, to retreat to Veguita. The Spanish general had to form squares more than once, losing more than 300 killed or wounded. The insurgents' loss was nine killed and twenty-seven wounded. The rebels remained in possession of the field. They captured many arms and much ammunition.

Filibusters Landed.

Responsible and well informed persons assert that Gen. Carrillo landed an expedition at midnight on Oct. 27 between this port and Guantanamo, the newcomers being furnished with plenty of arms and ammunition. Several persons who came here to-day from the country say that they met a rebel party of 300 infantry and 200 cavalry, under Demetrio Castillo, very near this city. All were well dressed and carried new arms. On being questioned by those people about the new arms Castillo said that they had just been received from the last expedition.

WANT SMUGGLERS RELEASED.

Burin's Business Being Ruined by Their Imprisonment.

St. Johns, N. F., Nov. 18.—The people of Burin held a mass meeting last night to petition the government to release nine business men of that town who are in prison for smuggling, because of the damage resulting to trade, and the impossibility of the people selling their cargoes of fish owing to the demoralization of business through their imprisonment.

A Comet Coming.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 18.—A telegram received at Harvard college observatory announced the discovery of a bright comet with a tail by Perrine of the Lick observatory. The object was first seen yesterday at 1.30, Greenwich mean time, in R. A. 13 hours 44 minutes, declination N. 1 degree 40 seconds.

FOR CHEAPER BERTH RATES.

Efforts To Induce the Pullman Company to Reduce Rates.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—All the railroads in the United States using the Pullman sleeping cars are about to present a unanimous petition to the company to have the price of upper berths in its sleeping cars lowered at least twenty-five per cent. The Pennsylvania railroad company has started the war against the Pullman rates. James R. Wood, general passenger agent of the above road, has addressed a private letter to the general passenger agents of all the important railroads in the country using the Pullman sleepers, asking them to join him in a request to the Pullman company to have the price of upper berths reduced at least twenty-five per cent. below the price charged for lower berths. In his letter Mr. Wood says that his company is determined to have the price of upper berths lowered, and earnestly requests the co-operation of all roads using the Pullman sleeper. About two-thirds of the Chicago roads using these cars have agreed to join the Pennsylvania company in its campaign for lower berth rates.

BROOKLYN DAY.

Preparations for the Celebration at the Atlanta Exposition.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 18.—The arrangements which have been in course of progress for some time are now practically complete for Brooklyn Day at the Cotton States exposition at Atlanta on Saturday next. A large number of well known Brooklynites have already secured tickets for the excursion, which will leave on the Pennsylvania annex at 4 p. m. on Wednesday next and is due to reach Atlanta at 2 p. m. on the following Friday. The ladies of the party will be decorated with handsome badges of satin ribbon. Everything necessary for the accommodation of the excursionists will be provided on board of the train. At Asheville, N. C., the mayor and common council will give a reception to the party, and afterwards drive them to the beautiful Vanderbilt estate. The exercises incidental to Brooklyn Day will begin at 10 o'clock on Saturday morning, when speeches will be delivered by Mayor Schieren and Mayor-elect Wurster.

6,000 AWAITING THE SIGNAL.

The Nez Perce Indian Reservation To Be Opened at Noon To-day.

Spokane, Wash., Nov. 18.—The rush to the Nez Perce Indian reservation is proving even greater than was expected. From and through this city by every road leading to the garden spot are long trains of "prairie schooners" and every imaginable description of vehicle, carrying loads of home seekers. It is estimated that when the opening gun is fired at noon to-day at least 6,000 people will begin the wild scramble for choice locations. The demand for lumber has cleaned out the local dealers, and it is now being shipped into the points nearest the reservation from this and other places. By to-night it is estimated that 2,000 houses will have been erected on the promised land.

Farden was an employe of the express company and Barnett worked for the Vandalia railroad.

Anderson, Ind., Nov. 18.—While making excavations Saturday evening workmen opened a mysterious cave in the west part of this city. The bones indicated a larger race than at present.

15 BODIES RECOVERED

Four of the Cleveland Viaduct Victims Missing.

The Motorman Arrested—He Endeavors To Place the Blame on the Dead Conductor—The Most Plausible Theory Regarding the Cause of the Disaster.

Cleveland, Nov. 18.—Up to this morning the bodies of fifteen victims of Saturday night's catastrophe had been recovered. This accounts for all but four of the passengers known to have been on the car at the time it made its dreadful plunge from the open central viaduct draw into the Cuyahoga river.

The Motorman Found.

The motorman of the ill-fated car was found after midnight by two detectives, and he insists that the reason he ran was because he was panic-stricken and he did not see the gates or the light until the crash came. He stated that Conductor Hoffman gave the signal to go ahead. Asked as to now the conductor could have given the "all right" signal in the face of the fact that the red light signal, showing that the draw was open, was hung on the closed bridge gates, Rodgers replied that Hoffman probably thought the draw was just closing instead of opening. Rodgers was released after giving bond for $5,000.

Recovering the Bodies.

A crowd of fully 5,000 spectators were gathered around the scene of the accident when the search for the missing bodies was resumed, and they remained all day Sunday. Diver Joseph Eberhart was employed by the street car company to assist in the search, and after he had been at work two hours on the river bottom he gave the pull-up signal for the grappling hooks, and the body of mail carrier Louis Huletz was brought to the surface. The top of the head was almost torn off and the face was battered in a fearful manner. About 10 o'clock Diver Metcalf came to the surface with a handful of woman's hair. He said that a body was held down by the trucks and in trying to pull it out he pulled the hair. The body is thought to be that of Miss Martha Sauenheimer.

Probable Cause of the Accident.

The most plausible theory regarding the cause of the disaster is the removal of a circuit breaker, which was replaced by a derailing switch about two weeks ago. Formerly the circuit was broken several hundred feet from the swinging portion of the viaduct, whenever the draw was open. According to the new contrivance, which was constantly set to derail a car, it was necessary for the car to stop. The conductor would set the "derailer" and signal the motorman to go ahead. This procedure was enacted Saturday night, and as the misty rain had covered the glass in the vestibule the motorman claims to have been unable to see the danger lights, depending solely upon the conductor's signals. As the conductor went down to death with the car, it will never be known what caused him to fail to see the lights or know that the bridge was swung.

Bogota Bank Manager Gets Fifteen Months in Prison.

New York, Nov. 18.—A special cable to the Herald from Panama says: The Herald's correspondent in Bogota telegraphs that Arturo Malo O'Leary, manager of the National bank in that city, has been sentenced to fifteen months' imprisonment for the crime of issuing illegal notes. The convicted man must also pay a fine of $398,000 and suffer incarceration for thirty-seven days in addition to the regular term, for presenting false reports and balance sheets. The notes issued amounted to $9,000,000. Senor Escipion Canal, the newly appointed consul in New Orleans from Colombia, has sailed for New York.

15-YEAR-OLD MURDERER.

Beresheim Seems To Take No Interest in His Predicament.

New York, Nov. 18.—Jacob Beresheim, the 15-year-old confessed murderer of William Krauel, whose body was found in the rear of his restaurant at 1,252 Second avenue last Monday morning, is still locked up at police headquarters. The prisoner seems to take no interest in his surroundings, but devotes his entire attention to a new pair of trousers given him since his arrest. The detectives refuse to allow him to converse with any one.

Position of the French Warship Baudin Critical.

Paris, Nov. 18.—The position of the French warship Admiral Baudin, which ran aground last Wednesday night in the roadstead of Salines, isles of Hyeres, in the Mediterranean, is critical, and grave fears are entertained that she will become a total wreck. The weather has become worse.

MANY WOMEN SUFFER

FROM LACK OF INFORMATION.

Doctors Are Too Reserved. A Woman Should Be Dealt With Openly.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Women are often allowed by their physicians to suffer much from lack of information and anxiety.

Many medical men are vainly and it is a struggle for them to acknowledge that they do not understand case. Women do not investigate; they have faith in their doctor, and often wreck their lives through this unfortunate confidence.

In the treatment of female diseases men work from theory; and it is not to be expected that they can treat as intelligently those complaints from which they have never suffered, as a woman can who has made the organism and diseases of her sex a life study.

Women afflicted with female diseases are wise in communicating promptly with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Their distressed condition is due to womb trouble, and their symptoms tell the story.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the one remedy that removes the cause, and restores health, courage, and happiness. The druggists sell more of it than all other female medicines. Why?

The following short letter speaks for itself. Mrs. Parker is a very young wife; only twenty-one years old. She was suffering untold misery when she wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. See the result.

Can evidence be stronger than this?

"I deem it my duty to announce the fact to all my fellow-sufferers of all female complaints that your Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me of all the pains and suffering I was enduring when I wrote you last May. I followed your advice to the letter, and the result is wonderful."—MRS. CHAS. PARKER, Little Falls, Minn. Any druggist has it.

SITUATION IN TURKEY

Government Again Marking Armenians' Homes.

The Most Serious Anxiety Prevails, Because Previous House-Marking Was Followed by Massacres—American Missionaries' Safety Said To Be Assured.

London, Nov. 18.—The Daily News publishes dispatch from Constantinople, dated Nov. 16, saying that the most serious anxiety prevails, and the situation is becoming worse. The government is obtaining a record of the houses in which Armenians live. This action causes alarm, because in several towns where massacres have occurred the houses of Armenians had been previously marked. Several of the leading Armenian merchants have sought and received shelter in the houses of Europeans. The American missionaries at Bitlis have telegraphed to the American minister asking him to procure from the porte an escort to take them and their families to Van. It is estimated that 20,000 persons have been massacred since the acceptance by the sultan of the scheme of reform.

Our Policy Commended.

The Daily News, in an article on "America and the Turk," will say that the New World is asserting itself to redress the balance of the old world. The lethargy of the European powers is hard to explain, but it is well that there is a great nation beyond the Atlantic that will not allow the blood of its sons to be shed with impunity. The paper commends the holding of the indignation meeting that has been summoned for Thursday in New York.

Forbidden Entry into Turkey.

Constantinople, Nov. 18.—The London newspapers of Nov. 11, containing the report of the speech made by Lord Salisbury on the occasion of the banquet given by the lord mayor of London and the papers of Nov. 12, containing comments on the speech, have been forbidden entry into Turkey by order of the porte.

Safety of Missionaries Assured.

Washington, Nov. 18.—The Turkish legation here has received, under yesterday's date, the following telegram from the sublime porte: "The safety of missionaries is completely assured. Our previous telegrams have already shown that the renewed accusations about a supposed massacre are groundless. The reported unpleasantness between the grand vizier and Mr. Terrell, the American minister, resulting from a supposed note of the latter, which, as a matter of fact, has never been sent to his highness, is also groundless."

Sultan's Life in Danger.

Berlin Nov. 18.—The Hamburger Correspondent claims to have semi-official information that a new conspiracy against the life of the sultan of Turkey has been discovered in the Yildiz palace.

San Francisco Sails for Turkey.

Marseilles, Nov. 18.—The United States cruiser San Francisco sailed hence Saturday for Turkey.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN HURT.

Bursting Gas Hose Causes a Panic at a Church Entertainment.

Farmland, Ind., Nov. 18.—During a stereopticon lecture at the Methodist church here Saturday night a panic was caused by the bursting of a rubber hose attached to the gas generator. In the stampede women and children were thrown down and trampled on. The greatest crush was at the doors which opened inward. The furniture in the building was utterly ruined. Several were in danger of asphyxiation by the gas, but outsiders burst in the windows and rescued them.

RECEIVER FOR THE N. Y., P. & O.

Holders of $44,000,000 of Mortgages Head the Movement.

New York, Nov. 18.—A special dispatch from Marion, Ohio, says: Application for a receiver for the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio railroad has been filed here by Herman Dressler and William Miswanger. Holders of $44,000,000 of the mortgages are supposed to be back of the proceeding. Control of the road was recently acquired by the Erie to form a part of that system. The Erie expected to take possession on Dec. 1.

TWENTY WERE DROWNED.

Fatal Attempt of Passengers To Leave a Stranded Steamship.

Rome, Nov. 18.—A number of passengers from the stranded steamer Solferino, from Genoa and Naples for Rio de Janeiro, which ran ashore near Copta, attempted to land yesterday in a small boat. The boat was swamped and twenty of its occupants were drowned. The others were rescued. The Solferino has about 1,200 emigrants on board.

A Priest Murdered.

De Soto, Mo., Nov. 18.—The body of a German Roman Catholic priest named A. P. Van Antwerp was found Saturday lying in a pool of blood beside the Iron Mountain railroad tracks at Bushberg, Mo. He had been murdered and robbed, probably by tramps.

Missing Man's Body Found.

[illegible], Mass., Nov. 18.—The body of [illegible] Allyn, a real estate dealer, who had been missing since Thursday, was found in a canal here yesterday. He committed by drowning and was [illegible] accidental. His valuables [illegible] pockets.

AN HISTORIC EDIFICE.

Old Christ Church, Philadelphia, Celebrates Its 200th Anniversary.

Philadelphia, Nov. 18.—When the chimes in the belfry of Old Christ church pealed forth the hour of morning service yesterday that venerable parish recorded the entrance into the third century of its honored and historic existence. The church where George and Martha Washington worshipped and where the family of William Penn attended divine service was fittingly decorated for the celebration of its 200th anniversary. The interior of the building has been recently restored and renovated, and the quaint colonial pulpit, towering above the high-backed pews in the body of the church, was draped with the stars and stripes. Behind the pulpit hung on one side a colonial flag and on the other the American emblem of to-day. The semi-choral service incident to the occasion were of the most impressive character, and were read by Dr. Chas. Ellis Stevens, rector of the church, assisted by several of the clergy. The sermon was preached by Dr. William A. Seabury of New York, professor of ecclesiastical polity in the general theological seminary and great-grandson of Bishop Seabury.

SHOT BY A BURGLAR.

A Hoboken Man in the Hospital with a Bullet in His Lung.

Hoboken, N. J., Nov. 18.—John Smith of West Hoboken was shot by a burglar who attempted to rob his house at an early morning hour. A bullet is lodged in his right lung, and he lies in Christ hospital, Jersey City, in a precarious condition. At about midnight he suggested to his father that they go to a near-by restaurant and have some oysters. On their return to the house the younger man noticed that the rear door of the basement was open. His father passed through the hall and entered the kitchen. When the light from the kitchen flashed into the hall John Smith, the burglar's victim, noticed what seemed to him to be a bundle of clothes or an overcoat lying behind an icebox. It proved, however, to be a burglar, who arose and shot him in the chest. The burglar made his escape, leaving behind him a bundle of jewelry which he had arranged ready for removal.

FUNERAL OF DR. SMITH.

The Author of "America" To Be Buried To-morrow.

Newton, Mass., Nov. 18.—The funeral of Dr. S. F. Smith, the author of "America," will be held from the Newton Centre church to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Complete details of the funeral have as yet not been arranged. The officiating clergyman will be the Rev. S. N. Murdock of Tremont Temple, Boston. The pall-bearers will probably be S. F. Smith of Davenport, Ia., and Ewing W. Smith of Arlington, sons of the deceased; H. L. Jones of Minnesota and Appleton W. Smith of Newton Centre, his grandsons. The burial will be in Newton cemetery and will be private. There have been many inquiries regarding the singing of "America" at the funeral. His grandson, Mr. Smith, informed a reporter positively that the hymn would not be sung.

TWO ACTORS' SUICIDES.

Amy Roselle and Arthur Dacre Chose Death to Poverty.

London, Nov. 18.—The Graphic today publishes a dispatch from Sydney, N. S. W., saying that the well known English actors, Arthur Dacre and his wife, have committed suicide. The former cut his throat and the latter shot herself with a revolver. The acts were caused by despondency arising from their unsuccessful tour of that country. A later dispatch from Sydney says that Dacre shot his wife and then killed himself. Both left pathetic letters showing that they had mutually decided on the tragedy. She was known on the stage as Amy Roselle.

New York, Nov. 18.—A special from St. Petersburg to the Herald says: A letter to the Novoe Vremya from Vladivostock, dated Nov. 2, reports the discovery of a seal poaching conspiracy on a gigantic scale in Yommandorfsky and the Seal islands. LIFE SAVING SERVICE

Work Accomplished During the Last Fiscal Year.

Over 5,000 Persons Rescued from Vessels in Distress and Only 20 Lost—Property to the Value of Over $9,100,000 Saved—Heroism of the Men Commended.

Washington, Nov. 18.—The annual report of the general superintendent of the life saving stations shows that dur the last fiscal year the number of disasters within the scope of the service exceeds that of any previous year by seventy-nine. This large excess is in a measure found to be due to the extension of the service, but principally to the conditions of weather which prevailed during the year. While the work of the service is thus shown to have been increased, it is satisfactory to know that the record of the year shows a smaller proportion of loss in both life and property than any previous year since the general extension of the service, except, as regards life, the year 1888, and regards property, the year 1884. At the close of the last fiscal year the establishment embraced 251 stations, 184 being on the Atlantic, 53 on the lakes, 13 on the Pacific and 1 at the Falls of the Ohio at Louisville, Ky.

5,382 Lives Saved.

The number of disasters to documented vessels within the field of the operations of the service during the year was 483. There were on board these vessels 5,402 persons, of whom 5,382 were saved and 20 lost. The estimated value of the vessels involved was $8,001,275 and that of their cargoes $2,645,960, making a total value of property imperilled, $10,647,235. Of this amount $9,145,085 was saved and $1,502,150 lost. The number of vessels totally lost was 73.

Casualties to Small Craft.

In addition to the foregoing there were during the year 192 casualties to small craft, such as small yachts, sail boats, row boats, etc., on board of which there 421 persons, 415 of whom were saved and six lost. Besides the number of persons saved from vessels of all kinds, there were 110 others rescued who had fallen from wharves, piers, etc., the most of whom would have perished without the aid of the life-saving crew.

Heroism of the Men.

The superintendent pays a high tribute to the heroism of the men, and says that no life was lost through the lack of prompt and faithful effort. The average annual loss of life from 1877 to 1895 inclusive, which embraces the period since the general extension of the service, has been one out of every 107 persons on board the vessels involved in disaster, and the average loss of property 22 per cent. out of the amount involved.

REVOLT IN VENEZUELA.

Revolutionary Uprising, But No Importance Attached to It.

New York, Nov. 18.—Gen. Nicolas Augusto Bello, consul-general of Venezuela in this city, says: "I have received a cable message from Dr. Francisco Castillo, minister of the interior, dated Caracas, Nov. 15, which stated that there had been a revolutionary rising, but no importance was attached to it. Another dispatch was brought to me from one of the most prominent houses of New York in the Venezuelan trade. It was as follows: 'Rebellion sufocada—rebellion crushed.'"

THE STORY DENIED.

Dunraven Did Not Show His Recent Pamphlet to the Prince of Wales.

New York, Nov. 18.—A New York paper prints a special dispatch from its London correspondent, which embodies a letter from Sir Francis Knollys, private secretary to the Prince of Wales, denying that Lord Dunraven's pamphlet relative to the America's cup races had been submitted to the Prince of Wales before publication, and that it had received his approval.

A Kentucky Girl's Brothers Adopt Shocking Revenge.

Ashland, Ky., Nov. 18.—Miss Bettie Wooten, the pretty 16-year-old daughter of Henry Wooten, a farmer, eloped to Ohio Saturday with Marshall Black, a negro. Two of Miss Wooten's brothers started in pursuit. By accident they encountered Black's 12-year-old brother James and shot him dead. The fugitives escaped across the Ohio river. Black is aged 33, ignorant and very repulsive.

The man with the pure white smile wants to climb higher. A faint heart is said to have never won fair lady, and certainly a dejected spirit has never helped a man to rise politically. Charles N. Codding believes that there is nothing like getting in the field early, and though temporarily crestfallen at the antipathy evinced towards his candidacy as a nominee for Assemblyman, his courage has revived and he has announced himself as a candidate for State Senator to succeed Fosier M. Voorhees, who, it is said, will not seek a re-election.

From hints thrown out by the leaders of both political parties, strong probabilities seem to exist that two important joint resolutions will be offered immediately after the assembling of the Fifty-fourth Congress. The first will be an affirmative of the principles embodied in the Monroe Doctrine, expressing in plain and vigorous language the sympathy of the American people with the government of Venezuela in its boundary dispute with Great Britain. The second joint resolution, which is being prepared with much care, provides for the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States under a territorial form of government.

THEATRICAL.

The Bad Boy will make his father, "Major Peck," stand around lively, to the undoubted delight of big audiences at Music Hall, Thursday night. The situations in the play are all capital, the dialogue is pleasing, brisk and wonderfully free from "chestnuts," and the man who will not laugh heartily when he sees the play must indeed be of a morose and sentimental disposition.

—The three dwelling houses on West Front street, being erected by Samuel Dreier, are about enclosed and inside work will soon be commenced.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

The first Y. M. C. A. eleven will meet for practice at the gymnasium on Thursday evening.

Albert P. Simmonds, one of Plainfield's old famous football players, is spending a short time in this city. He has been training the eleven of the Louisiana State College, and he is expected to play back of the line for the Y. M. C. A. eleven in their Thanksgiving Day game against Westfield. Simmonds will greatly strengthen the team.

The sturdy men of the Orange Athletic Club who met the Yale eleven on Manhattan Field Saturday were sadly disappointed in the result of the match. They had come from Orange with a strong determination to make a better showing against their rivals than they were able to do earlier in the season, when the two teams met on Orange Oval and Yale won to the tune of 24 to 12. But the blue-legged kickers outdid themselves, and succeeded in running their score up to 26, while the Orange team were shut out.

There was a lively game on the Somerset street grounds Saturday afternoon when the Alis team of this city met their antagonists of a week ago, the Watchung Park eleven. The boys from this side of the brook finally won by the close score of 6 to 0. The Alis team played well together and worked their interferences finely, but the Park boys outweighed them. Science told, however, and the clean record of victories was not spoilt with a single defeat. As soon as the game began the ball was rushed toward the Park boys' goal, and finally Charles Woolston was downed behind his own goal in an attempt to round the end. This safety counted two. The other four points were made by J. V. Rittenhouse who made a touch down after runnting thirty-five yards. The interfering of Cuming allowed him to make it. For the Watchung Park team, Louis Hummer, Chauncey Stout and Charles Woolston did the star work. O. T. Waring, at left end for the Alis team, distinguished himself by his brilliant tackles while their gains were made by Roy Phillips, Willard Wadsworth, W. K. Dwight, Harry Cumming and J. V. Rittenhouse.

The eleven from Pennington Seminary went to Elizabeth Saturday afternoon and defeated the Elizabeth Athletic Club scrubs by a score of 6 to 0. George B. Snediker, of this city, witnessed the game and brought his old chum, Harry T. Hyndman, half back for the Pennington team, home with him to spend Sunday. When Snediker attended the Seminary he played end on the eleven.

DR. LIGHTHILL makes the treatment of deafness, catarrh and diseases of the throat, lungs and heart a specialty.

Piles radically and permanently cured in a few weeks without the use of the knife, ligature or cautery and without pain or detention from business. The most desperate cases yield unfailingly to Dr. Lighthill's unique method of treatment, with guaranteed success. Fistula, fissure and ulcers of the rectum are also completely and permanently cured without the knife or other surgical operation.

Diseases of the bowels, bladder and stomach, mental and nervous derangements, diseases of the skin and blood and all chronic and obstinate complaints affecting the human system, of whatever name or nature, are successfully treated.

DR. LIGHTHILL refers with pardonable pride to the remarkable cures of his former practice in Plainfield and to the reputation which he established throughout the State. He has in his possession hundreds of testimonials from well-known residents of Plainfield and vicinity, which can be seen at his office.

THE PASSENGER AGENT.

Description of Him by W. A. Turk of the Southern Railway Company.

In his address before the American Association of General Passenger and Ticket Agents in Boston W. A. Turk, general passenger agent of the Southern railway, gave some interesting information about the function of the general passenger agent in worldmaking. He said:

"The general passenger agent is the pilot fish that leads the leviathan of commerce to the waters rich with prey, and thrice blessed is the transportation company whose general passenger agent is master of his art. If railway companies gathered their shining sheckles from none but those whose necessities compel them to travel, the receipts of the passenger department would be a meager source of revenue to most of them. But the efficient passenger agent takes care of that, and every train handles its quota of passengers who travel, not because they must, but because they want to, allured by the enticing arts of the general passenger agent.

"The railroad is the natural product of a demand for transportation, but the demand is created largely by the wise management of the passenger department. Every inducement offered to travel results in an increased patronage of the road. Facilities for business make business, a fair proportion of travelers become settlers and settlers become producers and consumers. The relation of the passenger and freight departments is so intimate that one cannot exist without the other, and in all normal American conditions the healthy growth of one means the prosperity of the other, but in priority of time and antecedence of cause the work of the passenger department is paramount.

"Among all the forces at work in the making of a nation, in the accumulation of wealth and the refinement and ennoblement of humanity there is none grander than that exerted by the men who compose the various associations of general passenger and ticket agents."—New York Times.

THE PREPARATION OF MEATS.

Methods by Which the French Butchers Excel In Their Calling.

Butcher's meat—in France—is prepared, divided and arranged in the shops in such a manner that it never suggests slaughter. It is a rare thing for one to see a stain on counter, bench or floor. The mode of killing the animals probably has something to do with this freedom from moisture and dripping. Maria Parloa, in an article on "The Science of French Cooking," in The Ladies' Home Journal, says the animals are not bled before being killed, as might be inferred from the absence of moisture, but they are killed in such a manner that veins and arteries are emptied quickly and thoroughly.

After this the animal is bouffee—that is, filled with wind. The large arteries are pressed open and the points of large bellows are inserted into them. While the bellows are being worked a man beats all parts of the carcass with a flat stick. This is to distribute the air in all parts of the flesh. All this work is done very rapidly. The inflating of the animal in this manner gives a fuller and firmer appearance to the meat, and, I fancy, empties the veins and arteries more effectually than they would otherwise be.

The French use very little ice, and meats are kept only a few days at the most. The best of beef in France does not compare with American beef, but the veal is superior to anything we have. It is valued more highly than any other product of the butcher. But no matter what the viand, when it comes to the hands of the cook, it is so prepared that she has but little to do to it except to cook it.

How a Vermonter Took a Prisoner.

A Vermont veteran tells a good story of the fight of Burkittsville, Va., just before the battle of Sharpsburg: "The Confederates, overpowered, fell back up the hill, firing upon our men from behind rocks and the natural defensive positions presented by the ground until they reached their artillery, where they made a more decided stand. Their riflemen took advantage of every possible cover of ledge and rock and tree. When Slocum's division had become actively engaged, Brooks' and Irvine's brigades of Smith's division were sent forward and bore a part in the final struggle. Hancock's brigade was held in reserve. After a sharp action of three hours the crest was carried, and 400 prisoners, 700 stand of arms, one piece of artillery and three colors were the prizes of the Union army. Our loss was 113 killed, 418 wounded and 2 missing. While climbing over a ledge, I slipped and fell 18 or 20 feet between two rocks. Rapid as had been my tumble, I found myself preceded by a Confederate soldier. For an instant we glared angrily at each other, when the 'reb' burst out laughing, saying: 'We're both in a fix. You can't gobble me, and I can't gobble you till we know which is going to lick. Let's wait until the shooting is over, and if your side wins I'm your prisoner and if we win you are my prisoner.' The bargain was made, but didn't that reb feel cheap when he found I'd won him?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Rebels Decided For Them.

In one of the battles of the Wilderness the Twentieth Massachusetts regiment was in the thick of the fight, and one color bearer after another was shot down almost as fast as the men could be replaced. But such was the fierce eagerness to keep the flag aloft that at one time two men—gallant Irishmen—caught hold of the standard at once, as it was about to fall, and struggled for the possession of it. Just then a shot struck the staff, cutting it in two, and leaving one brave soldier with the flag and the other with the shattered staff in his grasp. "Faith," said the man with the flag, "the rebels have decided for us this time!" and went on with the flag floating above him at the head of the cheering men.—Louisville Post.

The Wood Pile of Life.

"How we do all shun the wood pile of life!" said Mr. Gratebar. "There's the wood, free to all, with the sawbuck and the bucksaw standing by, but we go all around 'em and pick up chips rather than saw wood. We don't want to work; we want an easy job; we have a vague sort of an idea that wood will come and pile itself up in the cellar. But it won't. If we want a bright fire on the hearth, we must tackle the wood pile manfully."—New York Sun.

Mrs. N.—And the soup?

HE WAS CONVINCED.

A Wife's Practical Argument That Was Sufficient For Her Husband.

On the first day of the year Mr. Merchant makes his appropriations for the coming 12 months. Mrs. Merchant tells him the amount she needs for the conduct of the house, and this amount is credited to the account. It is understood that on this amount Mrs. Merchant will provide everything necessary for the interior of the house, Mr. Merchant looking to the care of the grounds and the exterior of the home.

Mrs. Merchant had the interior of the house redecorated. When the work was completed, she decided to have the vestibule painted. But she told the painter to send the bill for that work to Mr. Merchant.

The work was completed and the two bills presented, one to Mrs. Merchant and the other to Mr. Merchant. Mr. Merchant received the one addressed to him in his office mail. He looked it over and returned it to the painter with the message written across the bottom, "Send to Mrs. Merchant." Following the instructions, the bill was sent to Mrs. Merchant, and she referred the painter to Mr. Merchant. The man went to the office and presented the bill, telling the debtor that his wife had said the bill was to be paid by Mr. Merchant.

"Well, leave it with me," was all Mr. Merchant said.

That evening he spoke to Mrs. Merchant of the matter. She contended that the vestibule was outside the house and was under his care. He contended that it was inside the house and should be cared for from the appropriation. Between the two the painter waited a few days for his pay.

One evening Mr. Merchant came home from business and discovered he did not have his latch key. He rattled the door to call the attention of some of the members of the family to his predicament. He also rang the bell. Finally his wife came to the door.

"What's the matter?" she asked.

"Why, I want to get in," he replied.

"But you are in," said Mrs. Merchant, not offering to open the door.

"No, I am not. What are you joking about?"

"Why, yes, the vestibule is inside the house," replied the mistress of the house.

She had won her case, as after a moment Mr. Merchant capitulated by saying:

"Well, let me in, and I will pay that bill."—Chicago Chronicle.

The Bet Was Off.

"Reading your fish stories the other day reminds me of a good one I once heard in England," said Charles Coote, the comedian. "I was playing on one of the provincial circuits, and happening into a bar for a mug of half and half after the performance I heard this story from two costers. I will not attempt to give it in their dialect, because you could not produce it in print, the peculiarity being in the intonation rather than in the spelling of the words.

"It appears that the two costers had made a bet of half a sovereign and the drinks as to which could catch the most fish. Accordingly, with the drinks beforehand, they had repaired to the river and thrown in their lines. They sat there for something like four or five hours without either of them getting even a bite. Finally one of them imagined he felt a nibble at his hook, and in his excitement he fell into the river.

"'Bet's off!' shouted the other coster. 'It's no fair divin for 'em!'

"The barmaid held stakes, and it was their explanation of the case to her which I overheard and afterward made a hit with."—Washington Post.

A Strange Tryst.

Bradford Torrey, the naturalist, told a pretty story some time since to a party of friends of a tryst of his with a blackcap. He saw the bird for the first time one 15th of May in a corner of his garden, and happening to look at his watch noticed the hour. It was 1 o'clock. He spoke to his family of this first encounter with the little creature and was led by a whim to return to the same spot on the following 15th of May and at 1 o'clock. Again he saw the blackcap fly down upon his "rockery" as he stood waiting for it. Then the tale was told about among his acquaintances, and in the next year at the same day and hour he persuaded one of his family to accompany him to the tryst. Mr. Torrey acknowledged that he felt nervous and almost dreaded to put the strange coincidence once more to the test. They went down to the pile of rocks and moss, and taking out their watches stationed themselves in the old spot. Just as the clock struck 1 there was a flutter of wings in the bushes—the blackcap flew forth, faithful to the strange appointment between man and bird.

An Important Question.

A short time ago a large factory, fitted with the most modern appliances, including the electric light, caught fire, and despite the most strenuous efforts of the fire brigade was almost demolished.

The following morning a newly appointed member of the force was dispatched to the spot, with a view of ascertaining how the fire originated.

After closely interrogating the manager of the factory he asked to see the man who was responsible for the electric light.

The manager stated that the electric switches were under his sole control.

"Then you are the man that lights up the electric affair?"

"That is so."

"Now, be careful how you answer my next question, 'cos if it ain't satisfactory it will be took as evidence against ye. When you lighted the electric light last night, where did you throw the match?"—London Tit-Bits.

Pressing a Map.

A British scientist recently made the statement that upward of five-sixths of the weight of a human being was composed of moisture. His colleagues questioned the statement, whereupon a hospital cadaver, the remains of a small, fleshy man, was obtained and put under the hydraulic press. The corpse weighed 140 pounds even, and it was found that when every drop of moisture had been pressed from the body the residue was a thin mass of dry, fibrous flesh and bones, weighing but 33 pounds.—St. Louis Republic.

A Red Letter Day.

"Say, guide, what does that memorial stone commemorate?"

"I put it there. It is upon that spot where a tourist once gave me 5 marks."—Fliegende Blatter.

As universal a practice as lying is, and as easy a one as it seems, I do not remember to have heard three good lies in all my conversation.—Swift.

The atmosphere is so clear in Zululand that it is said objects can be seen by starlight at a distance of seven miles.

THE SOHO ANARCHISTS.

By ROBERT BARR.

[Copyright, 1895, by the Author.]

It has been said in the London papers that the dissolution of the Soho Anarchist league was caused by want of funds. This is very far from being the case. An anarchist league has no need for funds, and so long as there is money enough to buy beer the league is sure of continued existence. The truth about the scattering of the Soho organization was told me by a young newspaper man who was chairman at the last meeting.

The young man was not an anarchist, though he had to pretend to be one in the interests of his paper, and so joined the Soho league, where he made some fiery speeches that were much applauded. At last anarchist news became a drug in the market, and the editor of the paper young Marshall Simkins belonged to told him that he would now have to turn his attention to parliamentary work, as he would print no more anarchist news in the sheet.

One might think that young Simkins would have been glad to get rid of his anarchist work, as he had no love for the cause. He was glad to get rid of it, but he found some difficulty in sending in his resignation. The moment he spoke of resigning the members became suspicious of him. He had always been rather better dressed than the others, and besides he drank less beer. If a man wishes to be in good standing in the league he must not be fastidious as to dress and he must be constructed to hold at least a gallon of beer at a sitting. Simkins was merely a "quart" man, and this would have told against him all along if it had not been for the extra gunpowder he put in his speeches. On several occasions seasoned anarchists had gathered about him and begged him to give up his designs on the parliament buildings.

The older heads claimed that, desirable as was the obliteration of the houses of parliament, the time was not yet ripe for it. England, they pointed out, was the only place where anarchists could live and talk unmolested, so while they were quite anxious that Simkins should go and blow up Vienna, Berlin or Paris they were not willing for him to begin on London. Simkins was usually calmed down with much difficulty, and finally, after hissing "Cowards!" two or three times under his breath, he concluded with, "Oh, very well, then, you know better than I do—I am only a young recruit—but allow me at least to blow up Waterloo bridge or spring a bomb in Fleet street, just to show that we are up and doing."

But this the anarchists would not sanction. If he wanted to blow up bridges he could try his hand on those across the Seine. They had given their word that there would be no explosions in London so long as England afforded them an asylum.

"But look at Trafalgar square," cried Simkins angrily. "We are not allowed to meet there."

"Who wants to meet there?" said the chairman. "It is ever so much more comfortable in these rooms, and there is no beer in Trafalgar square." "Yes, yes," put in several others. Thus was Simkins calmed down and beer allowed to flow again in tranquillity, while some foreign anarchist, who was not allowed to set foot in his native country, would get up and harangue the crowd in broken English and tell them what great things would yet be done by dynamite.

But when Simkins sent in his resignation a change came over their feelings toward him and he saw at once that he was a marked man. The chairman, in a whisper, advised him to withdraw his resignation. So Simkins, who was a shrewd young fellow, understanding the temper of the assembly, arose and said:

"I have no desire to resign, but you do nothing except talk, and I want to belong to an anarchist society that acts." He staid away from the next meeting, and tried to drop them in that way, but a committee from the league called upon him at his lodgings, and his landlady thought that young Simkins had got into bad ways when he had such evil looking men visiting him.

Simkins was in a dilemma, and could not think what to do. The anarchists apparently were not to be shaken off. He applied to his editor for advice on the situation, but that good man could think of no way out of the trouble.

"You ought to have known better," he said, "than to mix up with such people."

"But how was I to get the news?" asked Simkins, with some indignation. The editor shrugged his shoulders. That was not his part of the business, and if the anarchists chose to make things uncomfortable for the young man he could not help it.

Simkins' fellow lodger, a student who was studying chemistry in London, noticed that the reporter was becoming gaunt with anxiety.

"Simkins," said Sedlitz to him one morning, "you are haggard and careworn. What is the matter with you? Are you in love, or is it merely debt that is bothering you?"

"Neither," replied Simkins.

"Then cheer up," said Sedlitz. "If one or the other is not bothering you, then anything else is easily remedied."

"I am not so sure of that," rejoined Simkins. And then he sat down and told his friend just what was troubling him.

"Ah," said Sedlitz, "that accounts for it. There has been a ruffianly looking man marching up and down, watching this house. They are on your track, Simkins, my boy, and when they discover that you are a reporter, and therefore necessarily a traitor, you will be nabbed some dark night."

"Well, that's encouraging," said Simkins, with his head in his hands.

"Are these anarchists brave men, and would they risk their lives in any undertaking?" asked Sedlitz.

"Oh, I don't know. They talk enough, but I don't know what they would do. They are quite capable, though, of tripping me up in a dark alley."

"Look here," said Sedlitz, "suppose you let me try a plan. Let me give them a lecture on the 'Chemistry of Anarchy.' It's a fascinating subject."

"What good would that do?"

"Oh, wait till you have heard the lecture. If I don't make the hair of some of them stand on end they are braver men than I expect them to be. We have a large room in Clement's inn where we students meet to try experiments and smoke tobacco. It is half club and half lecture room. Now, I propose to get those anarchists in there, lock the doors, and tell them something about dynamite and other explosives. You give out that I am an anarchist from America. Tell them that the doors will be locked to prevent police interference and that there will be a barrel of beer. You can introduce me as a man from America, where they know as much about anarchism in ten minutes as they do here in ten years. Tell them that I have spent my life in the study of explosives. I will have to make up a little, but you know that I am a very good amateur actor, and I don't think there will be any trouble about that. At the last you must tell them that you have an appointment and will leave me to amuse them for a couple of hours."

"But I don't see what good it is all going to do, though I am desperate," said Simkins, "and willing to try anything. I have thought some of firing off a bomb myself at an anarchist meeting."

When the Friday night of meeting arrived the large hall in Clement's inn was filled to the doors. Those assembled there saw a platform at one end of the apartment and a door that led from it to a room at the back of the hall. A table was on the platform, and boxes, chemical apparatus and other scientific looking paraphernalia were on it. At the hour of 8 young Simkins appeared before the table alone.

"Fellow anarchists," he said, "you are all well aware that I am tired of the great amount of talk we do and the little action which follows it. I have been fortunate enough to secure the co-operation of an anarchist from America, who will tell you something of the cause there. We have had the doors locked, and those who keep the keys are now down at the entrance of the inn, so that if a fire should occur they can quickly come and let us out. There is no great danger of fire, however, but the interruption of the police must be guarded against very carefully. The windows, as you see, are shuttered and barred, and no ray of light can penetrate from this room outside. Until the lecture is over no one can leave the room, and by the same token no one can enter it, which is more to the purpose.

"My friend, Professor Josiah P. Slivers, has devoted his life to the chemistry of anarchy, which is the title of this lecture. He will tell you of some important discoveries which are now to be made known for the first time. I regret to say that the professor is not in a very good state of health, because the line of life which he has adopted has its drawbacks. His left eye has been blown away by a premature explosion during his experiments. His left leg is also permanently disabled. His left arm, as you will notice, is in a sling, having been injured by a little disaster in his workshop since he came to London. He is a man, as you will see, devoted body and soul to the cause, so I hope you will listen to him attentively. I regret that I am unable to remain with you tonight, having other duties to perform which are imperative. I will, therefore, if you will permit me, leave by the back entrance after I have introduced the professor to you."

At this moment the stumping of a wooden leg was heard, and those in the audience saw appear a man on a crutch, with one arm in a sling and a bandage over one eye, although he beamed upon them benevolently with the other.

"Fellow anarchists," said Simkins, "allow me to introduce to you Professor Josiah P. Slivers of the United States."

The professor bowed and the audience applauded. As soon as the applause began the professor held up his unmaimed arm and said, "Gentlemen, I beg that you will not applaud."

It seems the fashion in America to address all sorts and conditions of men as "gentlemen." The professor continued: "I have here some explosives so sensitive that the slightest vibration will cause them to go off, and I therefore ask you to listen in silence to what I have to say. I must particularly ask you also not to stamp on the floor."

"Allow me to introduce to you Professor Josiah P. Slivers."

Before these remarks were concluded Simkins had slid out by the back entrance, and somehow his desertion seemed to have a depressing effect upon the company, who looked upon the broken up professor with eyes of wonder and apprehension.

The professor drew toward him one of the boxes and opened the lid. He dipped his one useful hand into the box, and, holding it aloft, he allowed something which looked like wet sawdust to drip through his fingers. "That, gentlemen," he said, with an air of the utmost contempt, "is what is known to the world as dynamite. I have nothing at all to say against dynamite. It has, in its day, been a very powerful medium through which our opinions have been imparted to a listening world, but its day is past. It is what the lumbering stagecoach is to the locomotive, what the letter is to the telegram, what the sailing vessel is to the steamship. It will be my pleasant duty tonight to exhibit to you an explosive so powerful and deadly that hereafter, having seen what it can accomplish, you will have nothing but derision for such simple, harmless compounds as dynamite and nitroglycerin."

The professor looked with kindly sympathy over his audience as he allowed the yellow mixture to slowly percolate through his fingers back into the box again. Ever and anon he took up a fresh handful and repeated the action.

The anarchists in the audience exchanged uneasy glances one with the other.

"Yet," continued the professor, "it will be useful for us to consider this substance for a few moments, if but for the purpose of comparison. Here," he said, diving his hand into another box and bringing up before their gaze a yellow brick, "is dynamite in a compressed form. There is enough here to wreck all this part of London, were it exploded. This simple brick would lay St. Paul's cathedral in ruins; so, however antiquated dynamite may become, we must always look upon it with respect, just as we look upon reformers of centuries ago who perished for their opinions, even though their opinions were far behind what ours are now. I shall take the liberty of performing some experiments with this block of dynamite." Saying which, the professor, with his free arm, flung the block of dynamite far down the aisle, where it fell on the floor with a sickening thud. The audience sprang from their seats and tumbled back one over the other. A wild shriek went up into the air, but the professor gazed placidly on the troubled mob below him with a superior smile on his face. "I beg you to seat yourselves," he said, "and for reasons which I have already explained I trust that you will not applaud any of my remarks. You have just now portrayed one of the popular superstitions about dynamite, and you show by your actions how necessary a lecture of this sort is in order that you may comprehend thoroughly the substance with which you have to deal. That brick is perfectly harmless, because it is frozen. Dynamite in its frozen state will not explode—a fact well understood by miners and all those who have to work with it, and who, as a rule, generally prefer to blow themselves to pieces trying to thaw the substance before a fire. Will you kindly bring that brick back to me before it thaws out in the heated atmosphere of this room?"

One of the men stepped gingerly forward and picked up the brick, holding it far from his body as he tiptoed up to the platform, where he laid it down carefully on the desk before the professor.

"Thank you," said the professor blandly.

The man drew a long breath of relief as he went to his seat.

ST. NICHOLAS IN 1896.

For almost quarter of a century—for twenty-two years, to be exact—St. Nicholas Magazine has been bearing its welcome messages each month to the young people of the land. It began existence in 1873, consolidating with it in its early years all of the leading children's periodicals of that day, "The Little Corporal," "Children's Hour," "The School-Day Magazine," and "Our Young Folks" among them. The last children's magazine to be merged in St. Nicholas was "Wide Awake" which was purchased and consolidated with it only a few years ago. It has been fortunate in securing contributions for its pages from the leading writers and artists of the language, while it has given to its readers many works that have become imperishable classics in juvenile literature. St. Nicholas has had for many years a large circulation in Europe, and it is said to be read by many royal children. When the children of the Prince of Wales' family were young the Prince took six copies for his household, and the present Crown Prince of Italy grew up a constant reader of St. Nicholas.

The magazine is a help to those that have the care and up-bringing of children, in that it is full of brightness and interest and tends to cultivate high asperations, without being "preachy" and prosy and lugging in too apparent moralizing. Its readers are always loyal to it, and they will be glad to learn what has been provided for their delectation during the coming year. The leading feature will be a delightful series of letters written to young people from Samoa by Robert Louis Stevenson. These describe the picturesque life of the lamented romancer in his island home, and give interesting portraits of his native retainers. Rudyard Kipling, whose first Jungle Stories appeared in St. Nicholas, will write for it in 1896, and James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet, will contribute a delightful poem, "The Dream March of the Children," to the Christmas number. The serial stories represent several favorite names. "The Swordmaker's Son" is a story of boy-life in Palestine at the time of the founding of Christianity. It is written by W. O. Stoddard, whose careful study of the history of the times and whose travels over the scenes of the story have enabled him to present vividly the local coloring. "The Prize Cup" is one of J. T. Trowbridge's best stories. Albert Stearns, whose "Chris and the Wonderful Lamp" was one of the greatest success of the past year, has written another story that promises much. In "Sindbad, Smith & Co.," he has again gone "The Arabian Nights" for inspiration. An American boy enters into partnership with that greatest of sea-faring adventurers, Sindbad, and the fun and the complications that this brings about can be imagined. These are but a few of the features. During the coming year $1,000 will be given in prizes. Full particulars concerning it will be found in the November number.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Brown, of Grove street, have secured passage on the "Cherokee," of the Clyde line steamers, and will sail for Jacksonville on Friday. They will spend the winter in southern Florida, near Lake Worth.

—Work will be commenced very soon at South Plainfield to sink a ten-inch well in order to ascertain more definitely the amount of water flow.

A new novel by George du Maurier, entitled The Martian, will also begin during the year. It is not too much to say that no novel has ever been awaited with such great expectation as the successor to Trilby. The Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc will continue and will relate the story of the failure and martyrdom of the Maid of Orleans. Other important fiction of the year will be a novelette by Mark Twain, under the title, Tom Sawyer, Detective; a humorous three-part tale called Two Mormons from Muddlety, by Langdon Elwyn Mitchell; and short stories by Octave Thanet, Richard Harding Davis, Mary E. Wilkins, Julian Ralph, Brander Matthews, Owen Wister, and other well-known writers.

Prof. Woodrow Wilson, will contribute six papers on George Washington and his times, with illustrations by Howard Pyle. Poultney Bigelow's history of The German Struggle for Liberty, illustrated by R. Caton Woodville, will be continued through the winter. Two papers on St. Clair's defeat and Mad Anthony Wayne's victory, by Theodore Roosevelt, with graphic illustrations will be printed during the year.

A noteworthy feature of the MAGAZINE during 1896 will be a series of articles by Caspar W. Whitney, describing his trip of 2600 miles on snow-shoes and with dog-sledge trains into the unexplored Barren Grounds of British North America in pursuit of wood-bison and musk-oxen. Mr. Whitney's series will have the added interest of being illustrated from photographs taken by himself.

The Volumes of the MAGAZINE begin with the Numbers for June and December of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of order.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money order or draft, to avoid chance or loss.

LIKELY FIGHT FOR DELEGATES.

Dissatisfied Republicans Will Probably Make a Stand Tonight.

A lively time is expected at the Republican primaries which will be held in the various wards this evening. In most of the wards the dissatisfied element of the Republican party will doubtless enter a contest against the regular organization. The primaries will be called to order at eight o'clock in the following places: First ward, Republican Association rooms at 120 East Front street, five delegates; Second ward, Bryant School building, six delegates; Third ward, Casino on West Seventh street, five delegates; Fourth ward, Reform Hall on West Second street, eleven delegates. Besides the delegates each ward will nominate one Member of the Common Council, one Constable, one Justice of the Peace, and three members of the city executive committee. The city convention will be held at the Republican Association rooms on Thursday evening of this week.

There is no snap for anybody in the Republican ward nominations for Councilmen but, in all except the Fourth ward, there is some prominent candidate who appears able to get the nomination. There is opposition but, in most cases, it is very quiet. R. I. Tolles, of the First ward, is apparently the choice in his ward. George H. Frost is running for re nomination in the Second ward and has a big backing. The Third ward's choice seems to be E. T. Barrows, but rumor claims that there will be a dark horse in the race.

WISEMAN'S BENEFIT.

Quite a Number Attended and Entered a Novel Contest.

The patrons of the Kirmess were given a chance to say farewell to the academy in its holiday garb last evening, when the promenade concert and dance for the benefit of Manager J. L. Wiseman took place. Several hundred gathered there during the evening and danced or visited the different booths which were kept open for the occasion. Prof. Guttman furnished the music. The evening passed very pleasantly. At the stationary booth a novel contest was inaugurated. Two prizes, an umbrella stand and a handsome vase, were offered for the two most popular women. But everybody voted for Mrs. D. T. VanBuren, and as she had no competitors, she was given both prizes.

PROSECUTION MUST CONTINUE.

Borough Board of Health Get More Evidence of Brook Pollution.

A screen was placed over the outlet of the North avenue sewer at the foot of Watchung avenue last night and this morning the place was visited by Dr. W. E. Honeyman, president of the Borough Board of Health, Health Inspector Peter Hansen and Andrew Love, who found an accumulation of solids there that were sickening in the extreme. These gentlemen were convinced more than ever that the pollution of Green brook by this sewer is a menace to the health of the people in the vicinity of the stream, and are determined to prosecute the violators of the law with reference thereto. Owing to the absence of Borough Counsel Reed from the city the matter was not further acted upon at the meeting of the Board of Health last night.

A Woman's Presence of Mind.

While attempting to light a lamp in her home on East Third street last night, Mrs. S. P. T. Wilbur accidentally ignited the shade on the lamp, the paper material quickly becoming enveloped in flames. Mrs. Wilbur, however, did not lose her presence of mind, and carried the burning article to the front piazza, though in so doing she also set fire to the portierre curtains between two room. The lamp was thrown on to a mat on the stoop, and a Mr. Chamberlain, who is a member of the fire department and who was passing by at the time, rushed to the scene and quickly extinguished the flames. No serious damage was occasioned by the fire.

District Meeting of Knights.

The annual district meeting of the Knights of Pythias of this city will be held on Thursday evening in Goodwill Lodge rooms at Scotch Plains. The Grand Chancellor and other grand lodge officers will be present. Delegations from Perseverance and Unity Lodges will also be present and a pleasant, profitable evening will be spent.

DeMott's stage leaves the corner of Somerset and Front streets at 7:45 prompt, and will return after the meeting.

At the meeting a Deputy Grand Chancellor will be elected to succeed the present officer, James Patterson of this city.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS

STEPHEN A. KROM TELLS WHY THEY SHOULD BE ADOPTED.

Some People are Willing to Follow in the Methods of a Century Ago, No Matter How Disastrous They Are.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—There is some opposition to the individual communion cup. This seems incredible, but it is a fact nevertheless. Some of the objections to it are as follows:

One prominent church member has stated, that if the old method was good enough for our forefathers, it is good enough for us. It sounds very kind and respectful to our forefathers, but that is all. Our friend forgot that if the pilgrims had decided that what was good enough for their forefathers was good enough for them, the American race as we know it, himself included, would never have come into existence.

The Chinese believe that what was good enough for their forefathers is good enough for them. We all know the result. The bows and arrows, the flint locks, the round shot of their cannon, was so inferior to the modern armament of the Japs that there was nothing left for the Chinese to do but to run away, which they did with great celerity.

To this principle is due the fact that they have some of the most disgusting and cruel practices on earth.

Just think of the number of comforts we should be deprived of if we should carry out this principle.

The first thing that would go would be the steamship, next would come the railroad, telegraph, electric light, the modern hospital, with its antiseptic surgery, water system, sewer system, modern house improvements, graded and paved streets; these with a host of other comforts would all go out in a batch, and leave us almost stark naked.

The principle of what was good enough for our forefathers is good enough for us, is a relic of pre-historic times. It belongs to the pre-glacial period, along with the mammoth cave lion, cave bear and other terrible things. It is silly and childish, it is also a sign of atavistic degeneration, and it should be stamped out as speedily as possible. It has been said that the new method is cumbersome; such a statement is completely refuted by the fact that churches that have used the new method report that it is far more convenient than the old method. Also that the attendance at the communion ordinance has been doubled since its introduction. These churches would on no account return to the old method, which reminds them of the time when (our forefathers come in here again) our forefathers used one dish placed in the centre of a table, the position of the diners being marked by the lines of grease radiating from it.

Again it has been said that but one cup was used at the last supper, and so we must use but one. Such a statement is utterly without foundation. Even if it was founded on fact we have already completely ignored it by using more than one cup, generally four or six. If we can do this, and there is not a shadow of doubt but that we can, we can just as well use forty or forty hundred if need be.

Some church members seem to think that anything connected with the church is no subject to the ordinary laws of the universe but is governed by some mysterious something nobody can explain. So that when the communion cup is passed through the congregation, and diseased germs are dropped into it by millions, some mysterious force will prevent these germs from doing any harm. Such conclusions are not borne out by facts. I have in mind a case in New York, where I have no doubt that syphilis was communicated by one church member to another by the communion cup. Other cases are on record. A doctor recently found himself at the chancel rail placed next to a patient of his whom he was at that time treating for a malignant disease of the mouth. It is surprising that such cases should come out, for up to the present time no one has suspected the comunion cup as being a source of infection. A person in the rear part of the church could receive the germ of consumption which had been dropped into the communion cup by someone in the many pews in front of him, not knowing that such a person was in the congregation how could he possibly trace the source of his infection. This is just the way the present method of administering communion ordinance spreads diseases of all sorts. After communion services in several church of Rochester a microscope revealed twenty-two living microbes, any one of which

A Little Gem.

The Unionist Gazette printing establishment of Somerville, has just finished the publication of an interesting little volume of 200 pages, bound in cloth, entitled, "Coaching in Merrie England." It is a journal of a coaching tour in England, also a visit to York, Lincoln, Ely, London, Paris, Switzerland and the Rhine in 1895; together with notes of coaching in England in 1894, by the Honeyman tourists, of which our fellow-townsman, A. V. D. Honeyman was manager. It has numerous illustrations, carefully selected, or photoghaped by members of the parties.

Only a small edition was printed, as it is only published for distribution among the two touring parties mentioned. Were it on sale The Press feels sure it would be in demand, as it is well printed, ably edited, and is a very interesting little gem.

Students in Military Uniform.

The cavalry post has not been established here, but the High School Cadets have at last received their uniforms which accounts for the sudden appearance of numerous blue coats and brass buttons. The coats are dark blue and the trousers light blue, while the dark blue caps have the letters P. H. S. on the front. The officers are not at all pleased with the state of affairs, for, through some mistake, there were no cheverions put on their coats, and they appear the same as the privates. The suits are quite becoming, however, and in a short time almost the entire school will turn out in uniform.

Beekman, Jr., the young men adjourned to the next room where the last and best part of the reception took place, and a great variety of cakes and fruits were served, while jokes and funny stories kept the diners in roars of laughter.

It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. R. Armstrong, Manager.

WIFE WANTS THE FURNITURE.

A Family Affair Tried Before Justice Crosley Yesterday.

The case of Mrs. Alberta Baker against George O. and his wife Amelia Baker, in tort, was tried before Justice Crosley yesterday afternoon and lawyer W. R. Codington represented the plaintiff and lawyer Geo. W. DeMeza the defendent.

The facts brought out were that several months ago Mrs. Alberta Baker and her husband Charles Baker, separated and their household goods were kept by the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George O. Baker.

Mrs. Charles Baker wanted the goods and had a notice served to that effect, but they refused to give them up, hence the action brought yesterday. Mrs. Charles Baker is living with her father, Isaac Scriven, and wants the goods which she claims belongs to her.

After hearing both sides of the case Justice Crossley reserved his decision for one week.

New Recording Secretary.

Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph has been appointed recording secretary of the Monday Afternoon Club in place of Miss Jessie Munger, resigned.

Croup is a terror to young mothers. To post them concerning the first symptoms, and treatment is the object of this item. The first indication of croup is hoarseness. In a child who is subject to croup it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the rough cough has appeared it will prevent the attack. It has never been known to fail. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

PROF. CARPENTER ON DANTE

INTERESTING LECTURE DELIVERED TO THE PROGRESSIVE WOMEN.

Various Phases of Dante's Life Discussed to the Edification of the Monday Afternoon Club—Points Made.

A very interested audience gathered at the Casino yesterday afternoon to listen to Prof. R. H. Carpenter, of Columbia College, who came to lecture on "Dante," under the auspices of the Monday Afternoon Club. Prof. Carpenter is a very intertaining speaker and held the attention of his listeners throughout the lecture. He spoke first of the different portraits and what proofs there were of their anthenticity. The death masks, according to the best authorities, are not true ones. From the traditional face which is left us, Prof. Carpenter stated that he belonged to the Italian type of idealist and reformers. The best descriptions of Dante, he said, make him a good type of the Southern European man. He next spoke of Dante's deeds and what might be learned from them, of his romantic early life, his entrance into politics, his exile, and his life as a poet. He stated that there is almost nothing really known about that great poet as there are very few facts that throw any light on the subject. The students of Dante should reduce the romantic story of his life to the plain historical facts and then learn something.

After a short sketch of his early life the lecturer said he belonged to the Guelphs, which he compared to the "Democrat or Tammany" party of today. His political advancement was next described and then how the other party, the Pope's party, came into power and Dante, with a number of others were banished for three years on the charge of appropriating the public money. He didn't obey the degree when a new one was issued in which it was declared that he would be burned alive if he ever entered Florence again. A description of his wanderings was then given and finally his death spoken of.

The speaker next proposed judging him from his works. The ideal Beatrice, he said, did not exactly compare with the real one of history. After further discussion of his works and creations he told of the way in which Dante appeared to the different people since that time. He next gave as reasons why his works were of less importance than is given them because they were in a foreign language, the matter in them was largely uninteresting, and his view of the world was one almost forgotten. In closing he gave his reasons for thinking Dante a great poet. They were the music of his verse, the picturesque quality of his description, his fine feeling of aspiration, and his beautiful dream of the world in where the laws were settled.

A Republican View.

A prominent leader in the Republican party in this city told a Daily Press reporter today that he thought that the action of the Democrats in not placing a ticket in the field this year would have little effect on the situation, and that the harmony of the Republican party would not be molested.

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ON TRIAL FOR HIS LIFE.

A Determined Attempt Will be Made to Prevent a Gallows Victim.

Frank Freehill, alias John Slone, who shot and killed Special Policeman Alfred E. Jewell, at Rahway last spring was placed on trial this morning at Elizabeth.

Judge McCormick will preside at the trial. Freehill's history has been learned by the detectives. He is a tramp, and when arrested after the killing of Jewell had in his possession some burglar's tools, a stick of dynamite and the revolver. On the day of the shooting he was with other tramps in the vicinity of the water station of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Scott avenue. They were annoying the railroad employes, and the aid of the police was called. Chief Wright, with a detail of officers, including Jewell, made a raid on the tramps, who ran to the woods. It was in the pursuit that Freehill, when cornered by the officers, fired upon Jewell and killed him.

None of the officers were in uniform and it is probable Freehill will, in defense, endeavor to show that he didn't know who his pursuers were, and that the shot was fired in self-defense.

Freehill's father, who is a repectable resident of Virginia, reached Elizabeth yesterday. The prisoner will be defended by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, of this city, and ex-Assemblyman T. M. Kelly, of Elizabeth.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. MEETING OF CONGRESS

Less Than Thirty Members Yet in Washington.

Contests for House Offices Promise To Be Spirited—Candidates from Illinois, Ohio, Kansas and Pennsylvania—Several of Them at the Capital Preparing for the Struggle.

Washington, Nov. 19.—Although congress will assemble a week from next Monday fewer than thirty members of the house are in the city. All are republicans. Excepting four, all are from the south and west. These early arrivals are here principally in the interests of the candidates for the several house offices. The contest for the clerkship and doorkeepership promises to be a spirited one. Ex-Representative McDowell of Pennsylvania and W. J. Glenn of Cuba, N. Y., have opened headquarters at Willard's hotel. The two gentlemen are understood to have formed a combination to secure the offices of clerk and doorkeeper, respectively. Ex-Representative Henderson of Illinois is also a candidate for clerk and has installed himself at the Ebbitt house. W. S. Tipton of Cleveland, Tenn., who will be Mr. Glenn's principal competitor for doorkeeper, arrived in town yesterday and last evening removed to the Ebbitt house, where he will make his headquarters until the caucus meets. The Kansas representatives have a candidate for chaplain in the person of Rev. H. D. Fisher of Westmoreland, who was a prominent abolitionist in antebellum days while it was yet a territory. The Ohio representatives say that they will bring forward a candidate for postmaster but the report to-day is that they are unable to agree upon their man. The Missouri representatives are asking that their state be recognized by the election of one of their citizens as sergeant-at-arms. Their candidate is Benjamin F. Russell, who recently held the office of speaker of the lower branch of the state legislature. It has been reported that the colored republicans of the country desire the selection of one of their number as chaplain, and it is understood that one of their candidates is the Rev. Walter H. Brooks of this city. There does not appear at this writing to be any substantial basis for the report, and it is generally doubted.

JOHNSON AGAIN ARRESTED.

Indignation Against Him at Point Pleasant Increasing.

Point Pleasant, N. J., Nov. 19.—The indignation against Reilly Johnson, who is accused of assaulting Mary Irons, ten years old, of this place, increases every day. In order to protect Johnson from mob violence he was rearrested yesterday at the instance of Dr. A. A. Higgins, who is attending the Irons girl. The doctor accuses Johnson of attempting to bribe the parents of the child to withdraw the charge against him. Johnson is now in the Toms River jail, Squire Allen having refused to accept bail for him.

MORE OF THE SILVER FOUND.

London Police Unearth Six of the Stolen Ingots.

London, Nov. 19.—The police yesterday unearthed six silver ingots in the garden of a prosperous resident of Dalston, a northern suburb of London. The occupant of the place is missing. The silver is part of the thirty-one ingots, valued at £4,900, that were stolen from a van of the Midland railway company on Sept. 25 last. Four men are in custody on the charge of having stolen the bullion, most all of which has now been recovered.

MAYOR CURTIS ASSAILED.

Taken to Task by the South for Presiding at the Anti-Lynch Meeting.

Boston, Nov. 19.—More than half of yesterday's mail to Mayor Curtis was from various sections of the south. These letters, on the whole, aim to justify the lynching and burning of colored men south of Mason and Dixon's line. Among many of the letters abuse was predominant, especially in those from Fort Worth and Sherman, Texas, and Shelbyville, Tenn. Along with many of the letters are newspaper clippings, some of them illustrated, of the recent burning at Tyler, Tex. Some of the writers appear surprised at the fact that the mayor of Boston would preside at an anti-lynching meeting. Some think that all the people in Boston are "fools," "idiots" and "negro sympathizers." Others invite his honor to come south and receive some instruction before presiding over any more such meetings. In nearly all the letters Congressman Morse, Rev. F. B. Scully, Edward G. Walker and all the speakers come in for considerable abuse. One letter goes so far as to say that if any of the colored speakers were to show up in Texas they would be treated to a lynching bee. The "Cradle of Liberty" is sneered at, and one letter goes so far as to state that they will send missionaries up north to teach Bostonians how to rule "niggers."

RUSH FOR MARRIAGE LICENSES

Baltimore's Bureau Was Closed Three Days on Account of a Death.

Baltimore, Nov. 19.—When the office of the clerk of the court of common pleas opened yesterday there was a line of applicants waiting for marriage licenses. The office had been closed since last Wednesday owing to the death of chief clerk John T. Gray. The wheels of matrimony were at a standstill, the law requiring that the clerk of the court of common pleas grant all licences. Mr. Gray's successor was appointed last Saturday, and yesterday more than fifty permits to marry were handed to prospective grooms or their representatives.

IS MR. TERRELL TO RESIGN?

Secretary of State Olney Declines To Discuss the Rumor.

Washington, Nov. 19.—A report was prevalent yesterday that Mr. Terrell, the United States minister at Constantinople, had forwarded his resignation to President Cleveland. Secretary Olney declined to say anything about the rumor. Mr. Terrell is giving great satisfaction to the state department, and there is seemingly no reason why he should desire to resign, particularly when he would, by so doing, be deserting his post of duty in a grave emergency.

LAST OF THE BODIES FOUND.

No More Persons Reported Missing in the Cleveland Disaster.

Cleveland, Nov. 19.—Two more bodies of the victims of Saturday night's bridge horror were taken from the river late yesterday afternoon. They were Martha Sauernheimer and Edward Callahan. This makes eighteen bodies that have been recovered. It is believed that the last of the bodies have been found, as no more persons are reported missing. The blame for the accident has not been fixed. The coroner will begin his investigation to-day.

It May Throw Additional Light on the Charge Against Him.

Norristown, Pa., Nov. 19.—A new trial has been granted Rev. S. Howard Chubb of the Plymouth Evangelical church, who was convicted of a serious charge, preferred by Miss Hannah Hillner, a member of his congregation. MURDER IS UNCHECKED

Heartrending Appeal To Stop Massacres.

Over 100,000 Armenians Said To Be Dying of Starvation—The Authorities Believed To Be Anxious, But Unable To End the Slaughter—Mobilizing Troops.

London, Nov. 19.—The Anglo-Armenian association has receiving the following telegram from Constantinople "Massacres are proceeding almost everywhere in Asia Minor. Over 100,000 persons are dying from starvation in Armenia. For God's sake urge the government to put a stop to the most awful event of modern times. The porte is powerless, as the telegraph lines are controlled by the palace officials, who have incited these massacres."

Accusations Against Armenians.

Washington, Nov. 19.—The Turkish legation here received from the sublime porte the following telegram under yesterday's date: "The Armenian insurgents of Zeitoun plundered and burned the following villages: Sousikuci, Kechkere, Moussali and Kerimli. Four bombs were found in the hands of an Armenian rioter at Diarbekir. The Armenian agitators at Marsouvan attacked two Mussulmans going to the mosque and wounded them. They also fired from their houses to the barracks and to the palace of the governor. Disorders followed these proceedings, and on both sides there were dead and wounded. The authorities, however, succeeded in restoring order. All news concerning a supposed insecurity regarding all foreigners living in the towns where troubles take place is absolutely and entirely false."

Troops To Protect Americans.

Constantinople, Nov. 19.—The troops are being actively mobilized in Anatolia, but each battalion, instead of reaching the estimated strength of 1,000 men, does not exceed 600 men. Minister Terrell has obtained from the porte in order for a guard of troops to protect the American missionaries who, with their families, are about to proceed to Van from Bitlis. The porte has cancelled the order for six battalions in Macedonia to go to Syria, the Vali of Salonica protesting that it would be unsafe to weaken the forces in Macedonia under existing conditions.

Sultan Calls for Troops.

The Standard publishes a dispatch from Constantinople saying there is no doubt that the central authority has been doing its utmost to check the massacres, but owing to the inflamed passions of the lower classes of Moslems, and the absence of sufficient force to restrain the Kurds, and also the defiant attitude of Zeitoun Armenians, it has met with little success. The sultan has instructed the ministers to draw up a plan for the mobilization of 500,000 troops. The financial situation is such that such a request is almost grotesque. More revolutionary placards have been posted about the city and letters of similar import have found their way to the sultan's table.

AMERICANS IN ARMENIA.

Evangelical Alliance Calls for Protection.

Cincinnati, Nov. 19.—At a meeting in Wiley hall the Evangelical alliance adopted a resolution, which was ordered sent to President Cleveland, calling upon him to "intercede promptly and effectively in defense of the common rights of humanity," and to defend the lives of American citizens living and laboring in Armenia.

Pillsbury will sail for St. Petersburg to-morrow.

Ocean Race to Japan.

Philadelphia, Nov. 19.—An ocean race to Japan between the British ship Dunham and the British bark Durfion for $1,000 has been arranged by the masters of the vessels. The passage is a long one, probably one of the longest made by sailing vessels, being around the Cape of Good Hope, Australia and Java. At least 14,000 miles will have to be covered before the prize can be won by either vessel.

Ambitious for Statehood.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Nov. 19.—A statehood convention has been called to meet at Shawnee on Dec. 4 to name a delegation to go to Washington and work for the admission of the territory. The Chickasaw nation will also send a delegation.

Spanish Troops Hemmed In Near Baire.

Great Excitement at Santiago de Cuba Over the News—Two Expeditions From Canada Safely Landed. Well Supplied with Arms, Ammunition and Stores.

Santiago de Cuba, Nov. 10, via Key West, Fla., Nov. 19.—Great excitement prevails here to-day owing to the news received from Manzanillo, saying that Gen. Gonzalez Munoz, who left that city with a strong column a few days ago for Baire, is besieged by a strong rebel party near the latter place. Gen. Jose Maceo has been appointed general-in-chief of all the rebel forces in the eastern district during the absence of his brother, Gen. Antonio Maceo.

Two Expeditions Landed.

New York, Nov. 19.—Enrique Trujillo, editor of the Cuban newspaper El Porvenir, received a cipher dispatch last evening announcing the safe arrival in Cuba of two expeditions, both prepared in Canada. One of these expeditions, numbering sixteen patriots under Gen. Francisco Carrillo, with 100 rifles and 10,000 cartridges, left Cape Hatian (Hayti) on a schooner and landed on the northeast coast of Cuba. The other expedition was composed of 129 men under Jose M. Aguirre, and had two rapid-fire guns, 400 steel hand grenades, 400 bombshells, 500 Winchester rifles, 464,000 cartridges and machetes and other war material, including two boxes of medicine. This expedition landed on the southeast coast of the island.

Some Are Old-Time Fighters.

Following is a list of the principal Aguirre expeditionaries: Col. Jose M. Aguirre, Fernando P. Alvarez, Venezuelan colonel; Porfiro Batista Varona, commander in the ten years' war; Antonio Gomez, captain in the same war; Maclobio San Cristobal, Mexican captain, chemist of explosives; L. Robert Stuart Weatherby, captain in the English army; Joseph Chapleal, Canadian, lieutenant in the English army; Francisco Oberto, lieutenant in the ten years' war; Antonio Luca Palacios, sub-lieutenant in the Cuban army; Emilio L. Moreno, sergeant in the ten years' war; Bartolome and Carlos Maso, son and nephew respectively of the vice-president of the present Cuban republic; Pompeyo Viada, Edgar Diaz and Charles M. Aguirre, lawyers; Salvador de Castroverde, dentist.

Iruguez in New York.

The veteran Cuban general, Calixto Garcia Iruguez, arrived here yesterday from Havre on board the French line steamer La Champagne. He fought in the ten years' war and also in the revolution of 1879, during which war he was made a prisoner. When he saw that he was about to fall into the hands of the Spaniards he shot himself, the bullet penetrating the roof of his mouth and coming out at his forehead. The general escaped death, but was sent as a prisoner to Spain. He will sail for Cuba as soon as possible.

Filibustering Expedition Suspected.

Kingston, Jamaica, Nov. 19.—The steamer Elliott, from New York for this port, is overdue. The Spanish consul here says he has reason to suspect that the delay in the steamer's arrival is due to her deviating from her route to land a filibustering expedition in Cuba.

OUT OF POLITICS.

Gov. Altgeld Has No Desire To Be Vice-President.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Gov. Altgeld has returned with the Chicago party which went to Atlanta, and said, when asked if there was any truth in the talk of his being a candidate for the vice-presidency: "You can say that Altgeld is out of politics. I am eagerly looking forward to the close of the next fourteen months, when I will turn over to the people the finest state government on earth, and quit politics forever. I want to get back to my law practice and make some money." The governor characterized as a "malicious, contemptible lie" the report that he had refused to participate in a parade with federal troops. He said the lie was conceived by a Chicago morning newspaper, and that federal troops were not asked to parade on Illinois day.

JEALOUSY THE CAUSE.

Another Murder Added to the Record of Luzerne County, Pa.

Hazleton, Pa., Nov. 19.—The reign of murder in lower Luzerne county continues, and another blot has been added to the record by John Boback shooting and killing John Holodnack at Milnesville. Two bullets struck Holodnack, one grazing his heart, death resulting an hour later. Boback tried to escape, but was captured by an officer and is now in custody. Jealousy was the cause.

K. OF L. SESSION.

The Matter of Admitting Liquor Sellers Discussed.

Washington, Nov. 19.—At the afternoon session of the general assembly of the Knights of Labor a resolution declaring in favor of the recognition of the Cubans as belligerants was adopted. The assembly also disposed of the amendment relative to the admission of members engaged in the liquor trade temporarily. The constitution was so amended as to exclude gamblers, lawyers, bankers and brokers as at present, and also to exclude all employers engaged in the manufacture of or dealers in intoxicating liquors, but permitting each local assembly to decide for itself whether it will admit bar-keepers, waiters, etc., engaged temporarily in the work of dispensing liquors, but having no connection with the place where employed as proprietor.

NEWFOUNDLAND NEWS.

Another Seizure of Smuggled Rum. Commander of the British Fleet.

St. Johns, N. F., Nov. 19.—Another large seizure, the largest yet, of smuggled rum, has been made at Burgeo. Three thousand dollars' worth of liquor was captured. Petitions for the release of the smugglers now in prison are being widely signed. Pardons are expected to be granted before the arrival of Governor Murray, who leaves England to-day. Captain the Hon. Maurice Bourke, heir presumptive of the Earl of Mayo, has been appointed to command the British squadron in Newfoundland waters, in succession to Commodore Curzon Howe. Bourke was captain of the ironclad Victoria when she was rammed and sunk by the Camperdown in the Mediterranean three years ago.

BATTLESHIP INDIANA.

Taken to League Island for Her Transfer to the Government.

Philadelphia, Nov. 19.—The battleship Indiana, which has been lying off Cramps' ship yard, left her anchorage yesterday afternoon and in tow of four tugs of the Red Star line was taken down to League island, where to-morrow the formal transfer of the Indiana to the government will take place and she will be put into commission. After the Indiana goes into commission she will receive her ammunition, stores and paraphernalia and proceed to Newport, where she will take on board torpedoes. From there it is quite probable she will be sent to Port Royal.

HE PAID FOR PERJURY

Holmes' Senior Counsel in Trouble.

Accused of Purchasing for $20 a False Affidavit Which Was Presented to the Court Yesterday—Held in $1,500 Bail—Holmes Shows Signs of Breaking Down.

Philadelphia, Nov. 19.—The argument for a new trial for the convicted murderer H. H. Holmes was heard yesterday in the court of oyer and terminer and this remarkable case furnished another sensation. One of the counsel for the prisoner produced an affidavit in court alleging to show that Pietzel, the murdered man, contemplated suicide. Amidst the silent amazement of the spectators and the shocked astonishment of the court District Attorney Graham proved the affidavit to be false and showed that Mr. Shoemaker, the attorney for Holmes, who offered it, had paid the woman who swore to it twenty dollers for doing so.

Shoemaker Held Under Bail.

Shoemaker was so overcome by this exposure that he could make no explanation, and at the conclusion of the argument he was held in $1,500 bail by the court to answer to the charge of subornation of perjury. While the judge was addressing him Mr. Shoemaker stood pallid and nerveless, and when his honor had finished he made an inarticulate effort to say something, but his voice choked and he sat down silently. The court reserved its decision upon granting Holmes a new trial, but that a new trial will be refused from the line of questioning adopted by the bench is undoubted. Shoemaker procured bail, but refused to make any statement in regard to the affidavit. He would only say that it was a most cruel and unexpected development to him, and that he understood his whole professional career was at stake.

Mr. Rotan Exonerated.

Mr. Rotan, Mr. Shoemaker's colleague, was greatly worried over the affair, as he feared that it would reflect upon him, but as it was clearly shown in court that he had no hand in procuring the affidavit, the bench of judges exonerated him from blame.

Holmes in Court.

Holmes was in court during the argument, and he has failed perceptibly in looks since his trial. He has lost the prison blanch which paled his cheek, and a hectic flush has taken its place. His eyes are bloodshot, and dark rings around them tell of anxious days and nights. His manner was not as cool and unconcerned as it was during his trial, and he showed an almost feverish interest in the proceedings. As formerly, however, he retained his self-possession and took notes of the district attorney's argument and prompted his lawyer during his address.

BLOW AT CIGARETTE TRUST.

Hancock Authorizes Suit Against American Tobacco Company.

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 19.—Attorney General Hancock yesterday afternoon granted the application of C. A. Wheaton & Co., of this city, for the commencement of an action to restrain the American Tobacco company from doing business in this state and to cancel its certificate. He bases his decision on the fact that the methods of the company are in restraint of trade and tend to monopoly.

Thursday, December 5th, has been designated by Governor Werts as Jersey Day at the Atlanta Exposition.

Judge Gibbons at Chicago has declared the Illinois state law closing barber-shops on Sunday unconstitutional because it is class legislation.

When the Legislature gets here it ought at once to pass a law abolishing poll tax in this State. Last winter there was passed a law abolishing poll tax in first-class counties. This law was passed because of a recognition of the fact that it was almost impossible to collect the tax in those counties. The same difficulties exists in the other counties, and, therefore, the law ought to be abolished in them, too, unless on the other hand some law is enacted which will make the collecting of poll tax something more than a farce. Any law, however, which would attempt to make the payment of poll taxes a condition precedent to exercising the right of franchise, and this would be about the only way the collecting of poll tax could be made effective, would be open to grave questions as to its constitutionality.—Trenton Times.

ODE TO THE KIRMESS.

BY UNCLE WESTFIELD.

'Pea-'s now twuz Sarey fust who talked
About that Plainfield Kirmess show,
I kinder shied and then I balked
An' low'd I couldn't afford to go:
The times wuz hard, a cow wuz sick,
But yet when Sarey's mind is bent,
To lie 'round home's a ticklish trick,
An' she'd made up her mind, we went.

When we wuz squatted in the rink,
Gee whiz! I can't describe it—
There wuz a thousand flags, I think,
A hangin' 'round inside it.
I bought a programme—cost a dime—
To see jest what wuz comin'
Before the show I passed the time
'A readin' and a-wond'rin'.

The fust crowd wuz the gipsy band,
I'd never seen so bright a sight,
Their ribbons all wuz streamin' an'
Their bangles sparklin' in the light.
An' then two gals come front an' danced
An' beat an' waved their tambourines,
Them two wuz posies—I jest chanced
To hear a young chap call 'em "queens."

The Injuns came out with a shout
An' Sarey wuz a-tellin',
Not even when the bull got out
Wuz there such awful yellin'.
The fust big Injun set a pace
For all their jumps and leapin'.
An' had a grinnin', painted face
That haunts me when I'm sleepin'.

An' then they danced a Highland reel
Like grasshoppers a hoppin,'
They hopped so long, most made me feel
They never would be stoppin'.
The tarantula folks came out—
On what they did I've been a chewin'.
But wringin' clothes wuz jest about
What those gals wuz a doin'.

An' then there came the Minuet,
They looked so kinder solemn,
Were all tricked out like no dance yet
With so much finery on 'em.
Each woman's headgear in that dance
Wuz like a roll of cotton,
The men wuz powdered an' their pants
Wuz sawed short at the bottom.

A lady danced the sarpentine
In a long loose dress of white.
She wore a crown—jest like a queen,
It flashed with 'lectric light.
They'd made the place so thundrin' dark
Twuz kinder hard to see so far.
Yet from her head a wire ran back,
Twuz sorter like a trolley car.

A chap called Onion sang a song
An' made the folks all stamp and roar.
An' when they'd cheered so loud and long
They made him come and sing some more.
An' when he'd sing he'd dance around
As playful as a kitten.
I wished a barrel hoop 'd been found
To keep my sides from splittin'.

An' when their cheerin' folks got through.
The gals an' fellers danced again;
Wuz Russian dancers, Germans too,
An' Torriders from Spain.
At last they all trooped in once more
An' flashed in every colored light.
From lookin' on my eyes wuz sore
At watchin' such a dazzlin' sight.

An' then we went to see the stalls,
An' Sarey buys some chiny-ware;
We has our fortunes told—and calls
For sody—jest like Trenton fair.
We had ice cream, the Frenchy kind,
With cake—wuz twenty cents a plate;
We bought fried cheese—can't call to mind
What other sort of truck we ate.

They had some five-cent votin' scheme,
Twuz run this sorter manner:
The dance that got the votes, their queen
Would take a yaller banner.
But we liked ev'ry dance the best,
That put us in a pickle,
So into ev'ry money chest
I dropped a different nickle.

Twuz Monday night when we fust went
To see the dances. An' you know
I'd said I wouldn't blow one cent.
Like's not I wouldn't even go.
Yet ev'ey night since that fust treat,
An' afternoon each blessed day,
We've each held down a front row seat,
I didn't care what I had to pay.

From my ole sock my money's gone,
I've sold what garden truck I've got,
I've sold my next year's crop of corn,
I've mortgaged half the pasture lot;
An' yet tho' all my money's spent,
You bet that I'm not sorry,
I'm glad that me an' Sarey went,
We'd go again tomorry.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

New Order of Things Produces This Result.

Women Can Keep Strong and Well By Taking

Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

The advent of woman into new occupations brings a new era into her life. Heretofore she had only to encounter the strain of household duties. Broader fields bring to her increased burdens. Her naturally sensitive organism is subject to a new nervous tension. How does it affect her? It brings exhaustion to her nervous energies. It brings weakness and loss of vitality. It adds new dangers to her condition. What does it do to future generations? It robs them of the robust vitality and nervous source they ought to have. It starts them in life the weaker physically and mentally, the result of this condition of her nervous system, weakened and over wrought as it is. It then becomes a vital subject of the welfare of the women—one to which the thoughtful are already giving attention, one of serious moment to all.

It is a duty each woman owes to her self and her children Given only to household duties that burden, see to it that your over worked nerves are righted and your exhausted strength regained. Don't delay a single hour. If you are a woman wage-earner in any occupation and are over-worked in the duties which weigh upon you, see to it that you keep you keep your nervous force up to its proper standard, that you renew your strength and keep up your power to work. It means health and happiness to you; health for you to do your work and happiness to make life worth living. Attend to it at once.

You have only to use the help nature has provided in that wonderful restorer of health and strength, that powerful invigerator of brain, nerve and body. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Read what it did for Mrs. F. Cohen, of 153 Pacific st., Newark, N. J.

"I had been sick for three years," writes Mrs. Cohen, "weak, nervous and run-down until I didn't care whether I lived or died. A friend of mine advised me to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and it has made a new woman of me today. I had the rheumatism in one of my legs, and I could not rest at night until I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura, and I can truly say I am entirely cured. I feel twice as young and all my friends say I don't look like the same person. Nervura has certainly done me a wonderful sight of good."

It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City. He has the largest practice in the world, and this grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is a guarantee that his medicine will cure and the fact that he can be consulted by anyone at any time, free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this wonderful medicine.

In the Standard League tonight the Union County Club of this city will bowl their opening games against the Parks.

The Crescent Wheelmen meet the team from the N. J. A. C. at their alleys on East Second street this evening. An exciting game is assured.

The team which will represent the Crescent Wheelmen against the New Jersey Athletic Club bowlers this evening, has been decided upon by Captain Van Emburgh as followers: Van Emburgh, Wilbur, Lyman, Petrie, Price, Stephenson, Maltby, Buckle, Anderson and Nail.

The Tournament Committee of the Diocesan Union met in St. Mary's rooms, Elizabeth, Sunday afternoon and received entries for the bowling pool, billiard and card tournaments. Delegates were present from the following societies: Newark—Institutes, Sacred Heart, St. James's, St. Columba's and Father Mathew T. A. B. S. Jersey City—Catholic Club, St. Paul's of the Cross and St. Joseph's. Orange—St. John's and Orange Valley Lyceum. Elizabeth—Young Men's Lyceum. Plainfield—Young Men's Literary Association. In bowling six societies will compete. The Second Y. M. C. A. team met for practice yesterday afternoon on the Park avenue grounds, and after practicing signals, the backs tried kicking, running and tackling. They meet again this afternoon for practice.

Wednesday afternoon the Second team will play the "Trilbys" of Elizabeth on the Crescent Oval. As the Trilbys consist mostly of the substitutes on the Elizabeth Athletic Club a hard fight may be expected.

CYCLING COMMENT.

John Keefe, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company leaves today on a cycling trip into New York state.

It is probable that the racing board of the League of American Wheelmen will take some action prohibiting indoor bicycle races by refusing sanction. The large number of casualties always resulting from them, is the reason for the proposed action.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

John Keefe went after rabbits yesterday. His luck was fair but there are some left.

Joe Blatz, Henry Haurand and Geo. Richter left this morning on the 8:16 train for Stroudsburg, Pa., on a hunting trip. Frisbie's dogs, "Nellie" and "Fanny," accompanied them. They will return Friday afternoon.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Already three teams have been organized as follows: The "Spartans," color blue: W. E. Barnes, C. Thorn, H. Martin, D. W. Littell, C. B. Egan, A. C. Wyckoff, Garfield Pike. "Defenders," color red: Henry Jessup, Ray Carroll, N. Lane, T. H. Stafford, B. Steiner, Alvah Davis, Ed. Sheppord, E. Moraller. The Olympics and Stars have not completed the list of their teams yet.

Where Did I Get This Dreadful Cough?

No matter; the great question is, how shall I get rid of it? Use THE PINEOLA BALSAM, a soothing combination of the remedies nature has put in the pine and other balsamic trees. It cures the inflammation and tickling in the throat and if taken in time will prevent the spread of the disease to the lungs. Ely's Pineola Balsam is strongly recommended in cases of asthma. Twenty-five cents is the price. Tell the neighbors about it.

RUDYARD KIPLING AN ACTOR.

The Novelist's Father Was Very Proud of the Young Man's Talents.

B. Ribbentrop, inspector general of forests to the government of India, is well acquainted with both the Kiplings. In a recent interview he said:

"Personally Mr. Kipling, the father, is a man of ordinary stature, with a massive and remarkable head. It is well balanced and at once striking to look at. His hair is getting very white, but there is a youth about his face that is quite unusual in a man of his age. He is very proud of Rudyard and carefully reviews everything the young man writes. I recollect very well the first literary work Rudyard produced. He came to Lahore from London to work on The Civil and Military Gazette, and in a short time he was so familiar with all the people of the locality that he issued a little book called 'Department Ditties.' It was full of humor and satire, and attracted a great deal of attention. In a short time he was sent around the world as a correspondent to a syndicate, and when he came back to Lahore he was famous. He is idolized there, and his success is our pride.

"Very few people know it, but Rudyard Kipling is one of the best actors I ever saw. On one occasion in Lahore the people got up an amateur theatrical company and put on a play called 'Plot and Passion,' wherein one Fouche, a character who is at the head of the police, is introduced. This part was played by Rudyard, and when the initial performance came off, Rudyard, meanwhile having done very badly at the rehearsals, played the part well and with such marvelous understanding that the entire cast was thunderstruck. He went at it like an old hand, and had the audience with him from the very start. Everybody in Lahore advised him to go on the stage at once, but he refused and staid by his pencil. I tell you it was the best piece of amateur acting I ever saw, and I begged him to follow the life of an actor, but he only laughed and continued to call me the 'Gigantic Head of the Indian Forest' in his stories. He always had a peculiar way of forming quick acquaintance, and he knew every man in Lahore from the poorest to the richest. He never let a story escape him, and his understanding of men and their eccentricities has made it possible for him to give the world all sorts of literature."—San Francisco Call.

TYRANTS IN AMERICA.

How Max O'Rell Views Our Public Servants and Officials.

Max O'Rell, writing in The North American Review, tells of the many petty tyrants that rule us in America, and reiterates that "the patience of the American public is simply angelic, nothing short of that." Apropos of our servants and officials he says:

"The Americans, like the French, have no initiative and lack public spirit. The English are the only people who are served by their servants, let the servants be the ministers of the crown, the directors of public companies or mere railway porters. To every one to whom John Bull pays a salary he says, 'Please to remember that you are the servant of the public.' When the English appoint a new official, high or low, it is a new servant that they add to their household. When the French and the Americans appoint a new official, it is a new master that they give to themselves to snub them and to bully them. For example, when the English railway companies started running sleeping cars, the public said to them: 'We do not wish to be herded up together like hop pickers. You will please have the cars divided at night into two parts by a curtain, so that our ladies may be spared the annoyance of having to share a section with a man.'

"I do not know a single American lady who has not told me of that grievance, and how on that account she dreaded traveling alone. Yet I am not aware that the American public has ever told the officials of any railway company in this country, 'We pay you, and you shall, please, give such accommodations as will secure the comfort of our women.' On one occasion, in a crowded sleeping car from Syracuse to New York, I occupied an upper berth and a lady occupied the lower one. If she only felt half as uncomfortable as I did, I pity the poor woman."

The Fickle Parisian Public.

The Parisian world was in fact very fickle. Society had been much exercised over the execution of Enghien; rumors of coming war furnished interesting topics of conversation. The giddy majority had a few passing emotions, gossiped about one theme and the other alternately and then went on with its amusements. The grave men who sincerely desired their country's welfare were profoundly moved and whispered serious forebodings to each other. The world at large was sensitive to both currents of thought, but in the main the masses considered the coming coronation ceremonies, the splendors of empire, and the prospects for unbounded glory opened by Napoleon's unhampered control vastly more entertaining as the subject of speculation than anything else. They were not deceived in some portions of their dreams; the time of imperial grandeur was at hand, the influence of French civilization was marching over Europe, the dazzling vision of France as supreme in prestige and renown was opening on their view.—"Life of Napoleon," by Professor William M. Sloane, in Century.

Miniature Painting an Exacting Art.

Those who know only the finished miniature and have no acquaintance with the method of its production cannot conceive of the labor that it represents. Each of these tiny masterpieces—these ornaments with human identification—these concentrated expressions of pictoral art—stands for more toil, of a peculiarly exacting sort, than the largest canvas. The brushes, some of them containing scarcely half a dozen hairs, make strokes so fine that most of the painting must be done under a magnifying glass. And the touches on the frail bit of ivory must be as unerring as they are light, for the smallest mistake may destroy the characteristic translucence that constitutes the miniature's greatest charm.—Nancy Houston Banks in Ladies' Home Journal.

Josephine.

Josephine, the wife of Bonaparte, was far from being the beauty that she is commonly supposed. Her nose was too long, her chin was small and receding, her eyes were rather oblique, her teeth were brown and decayed and her breath very bad. Her gait was not easy, and she had a foolish giggle that spoiled her conversation.

These limbs—whence had we them; this stormy force; this lifeblood, with its burning passion? They are dust and shadow—a shadow system gathered round me, wherein through some moments or years the divine essence is to be revealed in the flesh.—Carlyle.

SHE REBELS.

The Young Married Woman Wants a Club to Flee To.

A young married woman with gazelle-like eyes astonished the writer the other day by declaring that she was just tired and sick of the present matrimonial conditions, and though she had no desire to be a new woman she would just like a few things changed in the lives of women who have promised to love, honor and obey. "Where would you begin this great reformation?" we queried.

"Where it is needed most. I would just make it a rule that a woman had quite as much right to slam the door and go out, even in the evening, after a quarrel, as has her liege lord. At present a storm begins to brew, and the first thing you know his majesty remarks, 'Well, I'm not going to stay here and be nagged to death,' and he delightedly picks up his hat and vanishes from the scene, to return hours later, after the poor little wife has cried herself to sleep imagining all sorts of horrible things happening to him, and ready to say 'Forgive me' when he returns, even though she was in the right all the time, yet so fearful is she that he will go out again that she is quite willing to eat humble pie, though she does not relish the flavor of it one bit.

"And what does he do when he goes out? Does he weep a single tear or have a single tiny qualm of remorse? Not a bit of it. If he is a clubman, he goes there, and meeting a lot of congenial friends forgets all about the sobbing one at home. If he has no regular mecca of this sort, he selects a cafe, a hotel corridor or drops in to see an act or two at the theater. He isn't at a loss for entertainment, and if finally he brings home a few soft shell crabs or a box of ice cream he pats himself on the back for his forgiving disposition and feels much incensed if his wife is not appeased by these delicacies, which are meant to make her forget the length of his absence.

"He often declares that he never quarrels, for he doesn't allow himself to get into an argument with his wife, and in consequence is considered a man with an unusually good dispostion. His wife, however, is regarded with suspicion, her red eyes and his frequent outings giving rise to the belief that she is a termagant. No, indeed, I am not in favor of such a one sided privilege, and I believe there are dozens of wives who feel as I do, and would gladly go out and forget their woes if there were only some nice, respectable place sanctioned by society as an outlet for temper, a nepenthe for matrimonial squabbles."—Philadelphia Times.

A Close Call.

There is an old raftsman on the Susquehanna river whose proud boast it is that he has never been whipped in a fight. This means a good deal, for the sturdy raftsmen are all splendid specimens. Fights over the most trivial matters are of daily occurrence. Ole Dan, as he is called, has now grown very feeble and rheumatic, but he is never tired of recounting his exploits as a fighter when he was a young man. The old fellow always stoutly affirms that he has never been licked, but after a good deal of pressing he can sometimes remember that he once came very near being soundly thrashed.

"Yes, sir, the nearest I came to being whipped was over 20 years ago. I was cartin a load of logs up to the mill one powerful hot day in August. The sun was a-shinin fit to sizzle your brains. As I was goin alongside of a wood which threw a shadow just half way across the road I met a man in a buggy coming straight at me.

"'Turn out,' sez he.

"'Turn out into the sun yourself,' sez I.

"Well, after that we came to words. Bimeby we came to blows.

"We fit till the sun went down, and then I turned out."

"Oh, you did turn out for him then, Dan?"

"Yes, when the sun went down, the shadow was all over the road. I didn't care then. That was the nearest I ever came to being whipped."—New York Journal.

A Court Decides That Dogs Cry.

Does a dog cry? This knotty question has occupied one of the civil courts under these circumstances: A certain gentleman rented a handsome set of rooms, and the lease contained a clause interdicting the tenant from keeping animals which cry. It happened that a friend sent the gentleman two little dogs from Mexico. The arrival of the animals led to notice being served on their owner for breach of the terms of the lease, and the matter had to be settled by legal argument. The defendant insisted that Pipo and Pipa, as his dogs were called, weighed only 12 ounces apiece, and their bark was correspondingly diminutive, but counsel for the plaintiff contended that dwarfs were known to be bad tempered, and very small dogs were no exception and were inclined to be quarrelsome and noisy. In ordinary language their whimpering might be called crying. The court took the same view, and Pipo and Pipa had to find another home in 24 hours or subject their master to a penalty of 5 francs for each day's delay.—London Telegraph.

German Reverence For Science.

Electric cars have been prohibited on the road from Berlin to Charlottenburg because they would have to pass the Imperial Technical institute, whose delicate scientific experiments would be affected by the current. Science is of less importance here. A similar effect was noticed in the Jefferson Physical laboratory at Harvard, when the grounds were surrounded with trolley wires several years ago, but there would probably have been little sympathy expressed for the scientist who would have dared to place the claims of research above the privileges of the general public.—Boston Journal.

Rude.

"Well," said Mrs. Bruggins after a solo by a fashionable church choir tenor, "if that ain't the rudest thing I ever saw!"

"What?" inquired her niece.

"Why, didn't you notice it? Just as soon as that young man began to sing every other member of the choir stopped, but he went right through with it, and I must say I admire his spunk."—Washington Star.

In some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil is rapid. For this reason we put up a 50c. size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children.

In other conditions gain must be slow, sometimes almost imperceptible, health can't be built up in a day. For this Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment, food rather than medicine, food prepared for tired and weak digestions.

THE SOHO ANARCHISTS.

By ROBERT BARR.

[Copyright, 1895, by the Author.]

"That is frozen dynamite," continued the professor, "and is, as I have said, practically harmless. Now, it will be my pleasure to perform two startling experiments with the unfrozen substance," and with that he picked up a handful of the wet sawdust and flung it on a small iron anvil that stood on the table. "You will enjoy these experiments," he said, "because it will show you with what ease dynamite may be handled. It is a popular error that concussion will cause dynamite to explode. There is enough dynamite here to blow up this hall and to send into oblivion every person in it, yet you will see whether or not concussion will explode it." The professor seized a hammer and struck the substance on the anvil two or three sharp blows, while those in front of him scrambled wildly back over their comrades, with hair standing on end. The professor ceased his pounding and gazed reproachfully at them; then something on the anvil appeared to catch his eye. He bent over it and looked critically on the surface of the iron. Drawing himself up to his full height again, he said: "I was about to reproach you for what might have appeared to any other man as evidence of fear, but I see my mistake. I came very near making a disastrous error. I have myself suffered from time to time from similar errors. I notice now upon the anvil a small spot of grease; if my hammer had happened to strike there you would all now be writhing in your death agonies under the ruins of this building. Nevertheless the lesson is not without its value. That spot of grease is free nitroglycerin that has oozed out from the dynamite. Therein rests perhaps the only danger in handling dynamite. As I have shown you, you can smash up dynamite on an anvil without danger, but if a hammer happened to strike a spot of free nitroglycerin it would explode in a moment. I beg to apologize to you for my momentary neglect."

Holding it far from his body as he tiptoed up to the platform.

A man rose up in the middle of the hall, and it was some little time before he could command voice enough to speak, for he was shaking as if from palsy. As last he said, after he had moistened his lips several times:

"Professor, we are quite willing to take your word about the explosive. I think I speak for all my comrades here. We have no doubt at all about your learning and would much prefer to hear from your own lips what you have to say on the subject and not have you waste any more valuable time with experiments. I have not consulted with my comrades before speaking, but I think I voice the sense of the meeting." Cries of "You do! you do!" came from all parts of the hall. The professor once more beamed upon them benevolently.

"Your confidence in me is indeed touching," he said, "but a chemical lecture without experiments is like a body without a soul. Experiment is the soul of research. In chemistry we must take nothing for granted. I have shown you how many popular errors have arisen regarding the substance with which we are dealing. It would have been impossible for these errors to have arisen if every man had experimented for himself, and although I thank you for the mark of confidence you have bestowed upon me I cannot bring myself to deprive you of the pleasure which my experiments will afford you. There is another very common error to the effect that fire will explode dynamite. Such, gentlemen, is not the case."

The professor struck a match on his trousers leg and lighted the substance on the anvil. It burned with a pale bluish flame, and the professor gazed around triumphantly at his fellow anarchists.

While the shuddering audience watched with intense fascination the pale bluish flame the professor suddenly stooped over and blew it out. Straightening himself once more, he said: "Again I must apologize to you, for again I have forgotten the small spot of grease. If the flame had reached the spot of nitroglycerin it would have exploded, as you all know. When a man has his thoughts concentrated on one subject he is apt to forget something else. I shall make no more experiments with dynamite. Here, John," he said to the trembling attendant, "take this box away, and move it carefully, for I see that the nitroglycerin is oozing out. Put it as tenderly down in the next room as if it were a box of eggs."

As the box disappeared there was a simultaneous long drawn sigh of relief from the audience.

"Now, gentlemen," said the professor, "we come to the subject that ought to occupy the minds of all thoughtful men." He smoothed his hair complacently with the palm of his practicable hand, and smiled genially around him.

"The substance that I am about to tell you of is my own invention, and compares with dynamite as prussic acid does to new milk as a beverage." The professor dipped his fingers in his vest pocket and drew out what looked like a box of pills. Taking one pill out he placed it upon the anvil, and as he tiptoed back he smiled on it with a smile of infinite tenderness. "Before I begin on this subject I want to warn you once more that if any man as much as stamps upon the floor or moves about except on tiptoe this substance will explode and will lay London from here to Charing Cross in one mass of indistinguishable ruins. I have spent ten years of my life in completing this invention. And these pills, worth a million a box, will cure all ills to which the flesh is heir.

"John," he said, turning to his attendant, "bring me a basin of water." The basin of water was gingerly placed upon the table, and the professor emptied all the pills into it, picking up also the one that was on the anvil and putting it with the others.

"Now," he said, with a deep sigh, "we can breathe easier. A man can put one of these pills in a little vial of water, put the vial in his vest pocket, go to Trafalgar square, take the pill from the vial, throw it in the middle of the square, and it will shatter everything within the four mile radius, he himself having the glorious privilege of suffering instant martyrdom for the cause. People have told me that this is a drawback to my invention, but I am inclined to differ with them. The one who uses this must make up his mind to share the fate of those around him. I claim that this is the crowning glory of my invention. It puts to instant test our interest in the great cause. John, bring in very carefully that machine with the electric wire attachment from the next room."

The machine was placed upon the table. "This," said the professor, holding up some invisible object between his thumb and forefinger, "is the finest cambric needle. I will take upon the point of it an invisible portion of the substance I speak of." Here he carefully picked out a pill from the basin, and as carefully placed it upon the table, where he detached an infinitesimal atom of it and held it up on the point of the needle. "This particle," he said, "is so small that it cannot be seen except with the aid of a microscope. I will now place needle and all on the machine and touch it off with an electric current." As his hand hovered over the push button there were cries of "Stop! stop!" but the finger descended and instantly there was a terrific explosion. The very foundation seemed shaken and a dense cloud of smoke rolled over the heads of the audience. As the professor became visible through the thinning smoke he looked around for his audience. Every man was under the benches, and groans came from all parts of the hall. "I hope," said the professor in anxious tones, "that no one has been hurt. I am afraid that I took up too much of the substance on the point of the needle, but it will enable you to imagine the effect of a larger quantity. Pray seat yourselves again. This is my last experiment."

As the audience again seated itself another mutual sigh ascended to the roof. The professor drew the chairman's chair toward him and sat down, wiping his grimy brow.

A man instantly arose and said, "I move a vote of thanks to Professor Slivers for the interesting"—

The professor raised his hand. "One moment," he said. "I have not quite finished. I have a proposal to make to you. You see that cloud of smoke hovering over our heads? In 20 minutes that smoke will percolate down through the atmosphere. I have told you but half of the benefits of this terrific explosive. When that smoke mixes with the atmosphere of the room it becomes a deadly poison. We all can live here for the next 19 minutes in perfect safety; then at the first breath we draw we expire instantly. It is a lovely death. There is no pain, no contortion of the countenance, but we will be found here in the morning, stark and stiff in our seats. I propose, gentlemen, that we teach London the great lesson it so much needs. No cause is without its martyrs. Let us be the martyrs of the great religion of anarchy. I have left in my room papers telling just how and why we died. At midnight these sheets will be distributed to all the newspapers of London, and tomorrow the world will ring with our heroic names. I will now put the motion. All in favor of this signify it by the usual upraising of the right hand."

The professor's own right hand was the only one that was raised.

"Now all of a contrary opinion," said the professor, and at once every hand in the audience went up.

"The noes have it," said the professor, but he did not seem to feel badly about it. "Gentlemen," he continued, "I see that you have guessed my second proposal, as I imagined you would, and though there will be no newspapers in London tomorrow to chronicle the fact, yet the newspapers of the rest of the world will tell of the destruction of this wicked city. I see by your looks that you are with me in this, my second proposal, which is the most striking thing ever planned, and is that we explode the whole of these pills in the basin. To make sure of this I have sent to an agent in Manchester the full account of how it was done, and the resolutions brought forward at this meeting, and which doubtless you will accept.

"Gentlemen, all in favor of the instant destruction of London signify it in the usual manner."

"Mr. Professor," said the man who had spoken previously, "before you put that resolution I would like to move an amendment. This is a very serious proposal, and should not be lightly undertaken. I move as an amendment, therefore, that we adjourn this meeting to our rooms at Soho, and do the exploding there. I have some little business that must be settled before this grand project is put in motion."

The professor then said: "Gentlemen, the amendment takes precedence. It is moved that this meeting be adjourned so that you may consider the project at your clubrooms in Soho."

"I second that amendment," said 15 of the audience, rising together to their feet.

"In the absence of the regular chairman," said the professor, "it is my duty to put the amendment. All in favor of the amendment signify it by raising the right hand."

Every hand was raised. "The amendment, gentlemen, is carried. I shall be only too pleased to meet you tomorrow night at your club, and I will bring with me a larger quantity of my explosive.

"John, kindly go round and tell the man to unlock the doors."

When Simkins and Slivers called round the next night at the regular meeting place of the anarchists they found no signs of a gathering, and never since the lecture has the Soho Anarchist league been known to hold a meeting. The club has mysteriously dissolved.

THE END.

A LOSS OF $80,000,000!!!

Labor-saving inventions or discoveries have often been violently opposed on the ground that they take workingmen's bread out of their mouths. Although experience has shown the fallacy of that theory the feeling, or fear, was natural.

But it is not so much the lack of work as the inability to work that causes poverty and suffering. In England and Wales every workingman averages ten days of sickness every year, with a total loss of wages for all of about $ 0 000,000 per year. In this country the loss is much greater. In all countries the prevailing disease is indigestion and dyspepsia and its consequences—such as rheumatism, and other ailments resulting from impure blood; a result of dyspepsia.

No thorough, rapid and trustworthy cure for this universal and obstinate malady existed until the Mt. Lebanon (N. Y.) Community of Shakers placed upon the market their now famous remedy called the Shaker Digestive Cordial. It is prepared from roots and herbs cultivated solely by them. Nothing more certain, safe and palatable can be imagined. It expels the impurities from the body by means of the bowels, kidneys and skin, and imparts vigor and tone to the stomach—upon whose proper action all our strength, activity and endurance depends. For many years the Shakers have given earnest attention to this subject, and their final success is thankfully admitted by the multitudes who have been cured by the Cordial after all other means have failed. Their high reputation for skill as herbalists, for honesty and religious sincerity guarantees whatever they recommend.

No invention can ever take your work from you if you are able to work. Health and strength are the vital consideration.

THE KIDNEY COMPLEXION

A New Name for the Complexion Daused by Sick Kidneys.

Pale, Sallow, Bloodless People, and What Makes Them Look So—How They Can be Made Ruddy and Cheerful.

When your blood is all white and thin, instead of being red and rich, you get the "kidney complexion."

You can see it for yourself.

You lose color and animation. You get sallow and pale. Even your lips are not red as they should be.

This is the kidney complexion.

It is so-called, because it is the fault of your kidneys.

They have not properly filtered your blood. They have filtered out too much red matter and left in too much white matter.

They have filtered out the life and the nourishment.

This will never do.

You must not let it go on.

You must cure your kidneys and make them filter your blood. This you can do with Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

As soon as your kidneys begin to filter your blood properly, your blood will get red and pure again. It will get rich and nourishing, color and life bringing.

It will make you feel like a new man or woman.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills are a strengthing, healing tonic for the kidneys. They will cure your sick kidneys.

And when the kidneys are well, they will filter your blood, keep it pure, clean, cool and healthy.

For upon your blood depends nearly entirely your health or sickness.

When it is properly filtered, it will hardly be possible for you to fall sick.

When it is unfiltered, impure, unhealthy, you can hardly expect to keep well.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills are made principally, not from the stalks, but from the roots of the asparagus plant. From a special extract made by a special process which extracts and concentrates all the virtues and healing properties of the plant.

Their action on the kidneys is almost immediate. They gently tone them up and heal all injuries or disorders. They stimulate them to healthy action and make them do their work of filtering the blood.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will bring back color and life to pale kidney complexions, revive flagging energy, strengthen the muscles, and cure all kidney and blood troubles and disorders.

They will relieve and cure Bright's disease, diabetes, congestion of the kidneys, rheumatism, pains in the joints, limbs, sides and back, anaemia, chlorosis, gout, sleeplessness, depression of spirits, nervousness, headache, dizziness, hysteria, etc.

They will do it simply enough by simply making the kidneys filter the blood.

And their success comes from recognizing the truths, that pure blood means health, that impure blood means disease, that only the kidneys can filter and purify the blood.

A few doses of Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will relieve. A few boxes will cure.

Sold by all druggists, or mailed prepaid to any address for 50c a box.

Valuable medial pamphlet "A Filter for Your Blood," illustrated, mailed free on request. Address Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago or San Francisco.

could work incalculable harm in the system of any person who happened to imbibe them. No one can tell the number of germs taken by the communicants on the Sunday that the examination was made, or the results which will follow. It is the opinion of those who have investigated the matter that the present uncleanly and disgusting method of administering our communion ordinance has caused the death of thousands of persons. The method is also unchristian and is one of the most glaring inconsistencies of our times. The pastor prays in the opening part of the service for a blessing on his people, as one of the greatest blessings we can have, and he also prays for good health, and the next minute he puts into operation a method of infection that could be no more defective if it was especially designed to carry out that purpose.

We laugh at the Mohammedan who brings of the water of what he calls the holy well of Zanzan, which is infected with cholera germs. We call him a religious fanatic for doing so, and declare that his old well ought to be filled up, yet we at the same time are doing just the same thing, with the exception that we use an infected cup, while he uses an infected well. He does not know better. We ought to and do know better, therefore, in that respect, the balance is in favor of the Mohammedan.

Aside from the above mentioned dangers, the old method is nasty. That is just the word to apply to it. What host would think of passing one cup around the table at a dinner party? What guest would submit to such treatment? Multiply the number of persons at a dinner party by about forty and you will have the condition of things at the communion table, forty times as bad as the one you would not put up with at the dinner party.

Heredity is to blame for our present method of observing the communion service, and with a good many other bad things heredity has left us with, we must eliminate it as soon as possible. At this time it is well for us to remember that we come of hardy stock. The Anglo-Saxon race with all its strength and virtue is well worth perpetuating, and to do so we must leave no stone unturned that will help us in the struggle, which is every day becoming fiercer. Our modern science, our Christian beliefs, our regard for the lives of those we love, our position as the most enlightened race on the earth, our posterity, and last, but not least, common decency, all demand that we adopt the individual communion cup at the earliest possible date. If any one has still doubts about this matter, they can have them speedily removed by attending the illustrated lecture on microbes to be given in Y. M. C. A. Hall, Thursday evening, November 21st. It will cost them but a trifle, for which they will receive information of incalculable value, at the same time aiding the Plainfield branch of the W. C. T U., which is just as truly the anti-idiot and criminal producing organization as the saloon is the factory where the greater part of the idiots, degenerates and criminals of the land originate.

Dense Fog.

Fog, dense and gray, hung over the city, the rivers and the Bay this morning like a mantle. It delayed traffic on all railroads and surface car lines until taains and cars were strung out in dangerous confusion, creeping through the mist as best they could, all schedules abandoned.

It made the rivers and Bay so near impassable that only ferryboats and a few tugs made the venture out into the gloom, where the lights were visible only a few yards away, and fog horns and bells sounded dim and ghostly.

According to the Weather Bureau, it was the worst fog in five years.

Plainfield commuters were delayed an hour and a half in getting to their work.

Smashup on the Bridge.

A bad smashup occurred near the Brooklyn end of the big Bridge at 7:20 o'clock this morning in which two men were so seriously injured that at first it was thought they would die before night. One man had both his legs cut off.

To Clean Copper and Brass.

Copper teakettles and other household articles having polished surfaces should not be allowed to get rusty, as rust will destroy the metal. If the surface be rubbed but a little every day, the labor of keeping them bright will be very light. In case a rust is formed on the surface apply a solution of oxalic acid, which, well rubbed over tarnished copper or brass, will soon remove the tarnish, rendering the metal bright. The acid must be washed off with water, and the surface rubbed with whiting and soft leather. A mixture of muriatic acid and alum dissolved in water imparts a golden color to brass articles that are steeped in it a few seconds. To give a finer polish, go over the surface of the metal with rotten stone and sweet oil, then rub off with a piece of cotton or flannel and polish with a leather.

Harper's Weekly

IN 1896.

HARPER'S WEEKLY is a journal for the whole country. It deals with the events of the world that are important to all Americans.

In carrying out this policy, in 1895, Julian Ralph visited China and Japan, and journeyed through the West; Richard Harding Davis took a trip through the Caribbean Sea; the evolutions of the new navy were described and illustrated by Rufus F. Zogbaum; Frederic Remington presented studies of Army and Frontier life; Poultney Bigelow attended the opening of the Kiel Canal.

In 1896 like attention will be given to every notable happening. The chief events in art, literature and music and the drama will be artistically presented. W. D. Howells, in the new department, Life and Letters, will discuss in his interesting way books and the social questions of the time. E. S. Martin's sprightly gossip of the Busy World will be continued. The progress of the Transportation Commission around the World will be followed, and Caspar W. Whitney will conduct the department of Amateur Sport.

In 1896 will occur a Presidental election. In its editorials and through its political cartoons the WEEKLY will continue to be an independent advocate of good government and sound money.

In fiction the WEEKLY will be especially strong. It will publish the only novel of the year by W. D. Howells and a stirring serial of a Scotch feud by S. R. Crockett. The short stories selected are of unusual excellence and interest. In every respect HARPER'S WEEKLY will maintain its leading place in the illustrated journalism of the world.

The Volumes of the WEEKLY begin with the first Number for January of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of order.

Harper's Magazine

IN 1896.

Briseis, a new novel by William Black, written with all the author's well-known charm of manner, will begin in the December Number, 1895, and continue until May. A new novel by George du Maurier, entitled The Martian, will also begin during the year. It is not too much to say that no novel has ever been awaited with such great expectation as the successor to Trilby. The Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc will continue and will relate the story of the failure and martyrdom of the Maid of Orleans. Other important fiction of the year will be a novelette by Mark Twain, under the title, Tom Sawyer, Detective; a humorous three-part tale called Two Mormons from Muddiety, by Langdon Elwyn Mitchell; and short stories by Octave Thanet, Richard Harding Davis, Mary E. Wilkins, Julian Ralph, Brander Matthews, Owen Wister, and other well-known writers.

Prof. Woodrow Wilson, will contribute six papers on George Washington and his times, with illustrations by Howard Pyle. Poultney Bigelow's history of The German Struggle for Liberty, illustrated by R. Caton Woodville, will be continued through the winter. Two papers on St. Clair's defeat and Mad Anthony Wayne's victory, by Theodore Roosevelt, with graphic illustrations will be printed during the year.

A noteworthy feature of the MAGAZINE during 1896 will be a series of articles by Caspar W. Whitney, describing his trip of 2600 miles on snowshoes and with dog-sledge trains into the unexplored Barren Grounds of British North America in pursuit of wood-bison and musk-oxen. Mr. Whitney's series will have the added interest of being illustrated from photographs taken by himself.

The Volumes of the MAGAZINE begin with the Numbers for June and December of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of order.

CITY ADMINISTRATION WON.

DISSATISFIED REPUBLICANS SHOWED STRENGTH IN ONLY ONE WARD.

And That Was in the First, Where They Gave Them a Hustle—Nominations Unanimous in the Second—Other Results.

In nearly every ward in the city last night there were contests in the Republican primaries, though in the First ward the opponents of the city administration seemed strongest and gave the workers of that faction a hustle to carry their candidates through. After the primary had adjourned there were mutterings of rebellion at the result and some indulged in talk of a citizens' movement. In the other wards the dissatisfied portion of the party did not evince such a great amount of strength, and in the Second the opposition petered out entirely. Though none of the delegates to the city convention, which will be held tomorrow night, were instructed, it is believed that George DeMeza will probably get the nomination for City Judge, and John Johnson will be the candidate to succeed himself as Collector.

The First ward Republicans held their primary in the Republican headquarters on East Front street last evening. The meeting was called to order precisely at eight o'clock by ex-Judge W. R. Codington. J. B. Coward was nominated as chairman, with Wm. Addis, Sr., secretary; D. S. Pope, clerk; John H. Tier, Sr., judge; Wm. Patterson, inspector.

The first business brought before the meeting was the nominating of delegates to the city convention. There were two tickets in the field, and the nominations were as follows: John H. Tier, Jr., H. E. Templin, D. S. Dunavan, R. E. Coriell, John Rowland, J. F. Buckle, Amos Andrews, H. Case, G. W. Moore and H. F. MacDonald.

After counting the ballots it was found that 139 had been cast, while two were rejected, leaving a total of 137. Each of the delegates named received as follows: John H. Tier, Jr., 71; H. E. Templin, 70; D. S. Dunavan, 73; John Rowland, 71; H. Case, 72; R. E. Coriell, 64; J. F. Buckle, 64; Amos Andrews, 94; Geo. W. Moore, 63; H. F. MacDonald, 56.

Considerable excitement was caused when John Burns came around to cast his ballot for the nominee, and J. B. Coward refused to let him vote. John was exclaiming all the time, "I'm a Republican, every time, and don't you forget it." When the time came to cast ballots for councilman his ballot was cast with the aid of a few workers present. The next business was the nominating of a councilman. There were two delegates, C.H. Rugg and R. I. Tolles. R. I. Tolles was the nominee, he receiving 72 votes while C. H. Rugg received 54, out of a total of 127 ballots cast and one rejected. Next came the nominations for constable. There were two men eager to get the nomination, C. M. Fine and John Slover. Slover got the nomination, he receiving thirty-six votes while Fine received, thirty-one out of a total of sixty-eight cast and one rejected. C. W. Nichols was unanimously nominated for justice of the peace, he being the only aspirant for that office. The election of members of the city executive committee was next called to order. They were W. R. Codington. J. B. Coward, J. F. Buckle and J. F. MacDonald. At the close of the contest each received votes as follows: W. R Codington, 72; J. B. Coward. 48; J. F. Buckle, 12, and J. F. MacDonald, 62. The meeting was then declared adjourned.

The Second ward Republicans gathered in the Bryant School building last evening. Arthur C. Baynon, of the city executive committee, called the meeting to order and George H. Goddard was elected chairman. Armstrong Mulford was chosen secretary. After waiting a few moments to allow the crowd to be seated, W. R. Mattox and Edwin H. Frost were elected Inspectors of Election and Henry E. Bowen Judge of Election.

By motion of Stephen A. Ginna, the nomination of the Councilman from the ward was first taken up. Mr. Ginna nominated G. H. Frost as the candidate for that office. The nominations were closed and then J. B. Dumont moved that the Secretary cast a ballot for Mr. Frost, which motion was carried.

W. R. Mattox, the present Constable, was unanimously re-nominated for the office. As the term of office of the present Justice of the Peace has not yet expired, none was nominated. The three members of the city executive committee were the next to be elected. The present incumbents are George D. Patten, Arthur C. Baynon and W. R. Codington.

The first contest of the evening then began, but it was entirely an unorganized fight. Those nominated and the number of votes they received were: J. P. Laire, 76; George D. Patten, 70; Arthur C. Baynon, 62; Louis L. Croon, 50; A. T. Slauson, 31; and Edward H. Ladd, Jr., 3. Croon, the colored nominee, made a lively fight for a place on the committee.

Everybody was all ready for a lively time when the delegates to the City Convention came to be elected. Two tickets had been prepared, both supporting De Meza for City Judge, but one in favor of John S. Johnson, the present Tax Collector, as the candidate for his old office, and the other supporting Vincent W. Nash for that position. The Johnson ticket was to consist of J. B. Dumont, S. A. Ginna, M. S. Ackerman, J. P. Laire, Peter Neuman and Robert Guttridge, while the Nash men were expected to vote for C. B. Corwin, G. D. Patten, N. H. Drayton, J. V. A. Craighead, A. T. Slauson and Ferdinand Brown. At the last moment, it was decided that the Nash ticket had not the necessary number of supporters and so it was not nominated. The other people were all ready, however, with printed ballots. When the nominations were opened, V. W. Nash jumped up and nominated the regular Johnson ticket, which was carried through without opposition. H. H. Baker was also nominated, but he withdrew.

Just before the vote, a short man stood up in the rear of the room and remarked upon the fact that all the candidates were named by the same man.

"I came from Newark," he exclaimed, "but I never saw such a thing in Newark." His protest was laughed down and the vote carried unanimously.

After Messrs. Baynon and Cahoone had taken up a collection for the benefit of Janitor Hope, Mr. Nash made the motion, which was carried, that a committee of three be appointed to fill any vacancies in the ward candidates. Chairman Goddard appointed V. W. Nash, J. K. Myers and E. S. Peck as the committee. The meeting then adjourned.

The Third ward primary was called to order by Roger F. Murray in the Casino last night promptly at eight o'clock. Frank E. Marsh was elected chairman for the evening. After taking the chair Mr. Marsh called for the nomination of a secretary. J. Marsh Leonard was nominated and duly elected.

Roger F. Murray was appointed judge, Fred H. Andrews inspector, and Townsend Rushmore clerk of election, by Chairman Marsh.

The first business which came before the primary was the nomination of a member of the Common Council. Elliot T. Barrows was nominated for this position, and as there was no opposition it was moved and carried that the secretary cast a ballot for Mr. Barrows.

The nex business was the election of five delegates to the city convention. Messrs. H. M. Stockton, Jacob Kirkner, C. E. Stillman, James W. Murray, Jr., George W. Rockfellow, Eugene M. Laing. A. I. Littell, B. Frank Coriell, O. T. Waring and A. J. Woodruff were nominated.

Ballots were prepared and the vote taken, while the count was being made Mr. Barrow was called forward and in a well-chosen group of words thanked the primary for the honor they had conferred upon him. In his speech Mr. Barrow said: "I am comparatively a stranger in this ward and I feel highly honored that you have so much trust in me and that you deem me worthy to fill this position. I can only thank you for this honor which you have conferred upon me.'

After loud applause, the count of the ballots was given showing the following result:

One hundred and sixty-three votes were cast in all, of which Mr. Stockton received 119, Mr. Kirkner 118, Mr. Stillman 117, Mr. Murray 162, Mr. Rockfellow 113, Mr. Laing 47, Mr. Littell 44, Mr. Coriell 47, Mr. Waring 9 and Mr. Woodruff 38. The first five candidates having received the greater number of ballots, they were announced by the Chair as elected.

The Secretary again had the pleasure of casting a ballot for both Amos Moffett as Constable, and J. Darby for Justice of the Peace.

The next step was to elect three members of the city executive committee.

Four nominations were made and were as follows: F. E. Marsh, B. F. Coriell, William T. Kirk, J. W. Murray, Jr.

The count showed that Messrs. Marsh, Kirk and Murray were elected. The number of votes for each were as follows: Mr. Marsh 132, Mr. Coriell 35, Mr. Kirk 118 and Mr. Murray 137.

It was moved aud carried that each

FIFTY YEARS TOGETHER.

MR. AND MRS. WM. L. SMALLEY, SR., ENJOY A GOLDEN WEDDING.

The Anniversary Celebrated by the Gathing of a Large Number of Friends and Relatives Who Congratulate the Couple.

The half-century milestone in the married life of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Smalley, Sr., was celebrated last evening at their home on Craig place in a pleasant manner.

During the evening a large circle of relatives and friends gathered to congratulate the host and hostess and wish them many years of prosperity and health.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with roses and smilax. In one corner of the parlor, beneath a circle of beautiful smilax, sat the honored twain, where they received the congratulations of all. The bride and groom, as they were frequently called, looked as happy as the day when at the altar they promised to live for each other through joy and sorrow.

The table in the dining room presented a pretty picture, tastefully decorated with roses and smilax, while two large banquet lamps shed their rays on the golden streamers that were gracefully suspended from the ceiling. There was a lack of formality that was really delightful and genuine sociability was the rule.

It was a delight of each one present to make the event one of rare success and it can truly be said that the object was accomplished.

During the evening the guests were served with an excellent supper, after which the young people, as well as a few older ones, enjoyed dancing, music for which was furnished by Guttman.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Asbury King, Westfield; Mr. and Mrs. J. Irving, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Irving, Mr. and Mrs. David Irving, Cranford; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lewis, Newark; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hayes, Liberty Corner; Miss Minnie Ammerman, Madison; Mr. and Mrs. J. Hayden, Logansville; Mrs. Ludlow, Bedminister; Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Carman, Dr. and Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Armstrong, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, Mr. and Mrs. A. Willett, Mr. and Mrs. D. I. Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Woodruff, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Vail, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Demarest, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Demarest, Mrs. D. I. Smalley, Miss Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Newton Honeyman, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Carney, Mr. and Mrs. John Valiant, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Boss, Mrs. Isaac Brokaw, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brokaw, Miss Grace Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. David W. King, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Smalley, Mr. and Mrs. J. Burrows, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Manning, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Leader, Mr. and Mrs. R. I. Tolles. Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Arnold, Miss Emma Gillem, Mrs. Cadmus, George DeMeza, Charles McNabb, Frank Smalley, John McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Smalley, Miss Lizzie Smalley, Jedediah Smalley, J. H. Van Winkle, Sr., Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, and Harry Vail.

The very large number of handsome presents received was fitting testimony to the high esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Smalley are held by their friends.

EXTENSION MEANS A NEW BRIDGE.

Both City and Borough People Will Want a Good Structure.

There is a considerable amount of interest being evienced by large bridge builders throughout the country in regard to the bridge that will sooner or later span Green brook on the Watchung avenue extension. The freeholders from both Union and Somerset counties will be expected to place a bridge at that point that will be substantial and stand the heavy travel that will naturally pass over that thoroughfare, and the residents of both counties will want a structure that will be a credit to them. As the freeholders are men of ability and good judgment they can be relied upon to do that which is to the very best interest of both communities.

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhœa of long standing in six hours, with one small bottle of Chambertain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief. It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. R. Armstrong, Manager.

A SUPPER FOR THE VICTORS.

THE REDS HAD A JOLLY GOOD TIME LAST NIGHT.

Y. M. C. A. Members Eat, Talk and Make Merry—Two of the Defeated Ones Present—What the Toasts Were.

To the victor belongs the spoils in the political arena, and to the victors in the membership contest of the Y. M. C. A. belonged the supper which was served in the association building last night by the Ladies Nine. It was a merry and good-natured crowd of young men and young old men who sat around the tables and ate and regaled one another with stories and listened to the witty remarks of those who responded to the toasts after the ladies had finished serving the good things.

They were all victors—all but two, and these two were as blue men as ever lived. George R. Cornwell, captain of the men who worked hard but whose results were just sixty-four less than those of their opponents, was one of the blue men, and the other was H. O. Newman, and—well, without them no event in the association is complete.

They were not blue in the sense that they were sad and downcast, but they were simply designated as the representatives of this hue because their friends, the enemy, and chosen red and had won.

After the hundred or more red men had enjoyed the repast and heard two selections by Prof. Conde's orchestra, President Murray, in the capacity of toast-master, arose and in a few introductory words set the ball rolling, figuratively speaking, in the line of speaking. Prof. MacPhie, who marshaled the winning side, was called upon to the toast of "The Side That Won, or the Value of Athletics in a Contest." His words were mostly of a humorous nature, though inculcated in them was a quaint line of philosophy that was enjoyed hugely by his hearers.

Here President Murray was compelled to leave the post of toast master, owing to a previous engagement, and Curtis M. Thorpe was called to preside at the head of the table. Mr. Thorpe was down to respond to the toast of "Our Members," but in his place he called on Howard Leggett, who succeeded in getting more members for the winning side than anyone else. With funny anecdotes Mr. Leggett illustrated how he did it. "A Short Man," sixty-four short, was the way he was scheduled on the programme, was called on in the heretofore ubiquitous personality of George R. Cornwell, who had been doing the "Jack Horner eating a plum pie in the corner" act, and he arose—that is what there was of him, for he candidly admitted that he was a short man, but naively remarked that the section from which he hailed a man was measured not from his shoulders down but from the shoulders up. So he passed and in the parlance of the stage made a decided hit with his talk. With a total absence of that vacant feeling around the stomach and the sight of two or three hundred soiled dishes before them the men realized more than ever that it is a young men's association, only by the assistance of the young ladies, and thus knew that the subject of "The Ladies Who Entertain Us" was one of the most important to be heard. Rev. C. E. Herring responded to the toast in a fitting manner, worked in a few ludicrous tales and paid a tribute to the genius of a woman who knows best how to satisfy the inner man.

H. O. Newman followed in a few words on "The Financial Results of the Contest," which had brought in 118 new members and increased the treasury materially so that the officers felt greatly encouraged to go ahead in the work for young men.

The music of Prof. Conde and his orchestra of young men was greatly appreciated and applauded by those who enjoyed its sweet strains.

The Ladies Nine, who served the supper, consisted of Mrs. Jos. Gavett, Mrs. Henry Rankin, Mrs. Roger Murray, Mrs. Stephen Struthers, Mrs. Frank Clawson, the Misses Thorne, Mrs. Harry Manning and Miss Ethel Holmes.

After the speaking had been finished congratulatory of the success of the contest, another movement was inaugurated which was a novel, and which will probably be a most successful, one. It is termed the "Get One" movement, the modus operandi of which is that every member of the association who gets one new member will be entitled to membership to the "Get One" club, and to a supper which will be served to the ones who get one before the first of January.

COAL CARS WRECKED.

Jersey Central Engine Strikes a Coal Train Pulling Off a Siding.

It is a self evident fact that two trains cannot occupy the same piece of track at the same time; when they try to, trouble is sure to occur. That was the case exactly on the Central Jersey railroad last ovening at about half past five o'clock. A coal train bound in the direction of New York had stopped at Plainfield on the third track to allow a passenger train to pass and was then to proceed on track one. The engine number 362 and about half the train had crossed onto the main track at the switch just beyond the Watchung avenue bridge when engine number 420, with a freight car attached, came down the main track, and seeing no light, struck the coal train derailing six cars and demolishing the freight car.

No one was hurt except the fireman of engine 420 who was severely scalded. Both of the east bound tracks were blocked and remained so until about ten o'clock. The wrecking train arrived at eleven and remained at work until half past nine this morning. "Doggy Meyers was the engineer of the freight train and Silas Holdseizer of the coal train.

THIEVES MAKE A BIG HAUL.

Summit Postoffice Entered This Morning and $7,000 Taken.

Burglars broke into the postoffice at Summit at three o'clock this morning, blew open the safe with dynamite, stole $5,000 in postage stamps and $2,000 in cash, and got away with their booty without being seen or leaving behind them any clue that would serve to aid in their capture.

The robbery was discovered at six o'clock by Mrs. Bridget Lane, the postmistress, when she opened the office to send out the morning mail. No mail matter was disturbed, but the only thing left in the safe was a money order for $150 and seven registered letters that the explosion blew out of reach.

Two officers from Summit came to Plainfield this morning, hoping to get trace of the thieves. They reported the matter to the local police, but not the slightest trace of the robbers can be found.

Croup is a terror to young mothers. To post them concerning the first symptoms, and treatment is the object of this item. The first indication of croup is hoarseness. In a child who is subject to croup it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the rough cough has appeared it will prevent the attack. It has never been known to fail. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A FIGHT FOR A LIFE.

CRAIG A. MARSH USES STRONG ARGUMENTS FOR FREEHILL.

He Questions the Right of the Court to Try the Case, But Is Overruled—Considerable Trouble to Get a Jury.

The trial of Frank Freehill, murderer of Officer Alfred Jewell at Rahway, was commenced at Elizabeth yesterday. Before the jurors were called Craig A. Marsh, of the counsel for the prisoner, challenged the jurisdiction of the Court as constituted. He held that the constitution intended that homicide trials should be before a Supreme Court justice, and that the present Court was acting under color of right given by a law of '94, which Mr. Marsh held was not constitutional.

In raising this question of jurisdiction, Mr. Marsh desired the Court to understand that he meant no discourtesy, but in a capital case, having been assigned to defend the life of the prisoner, it was his duty to take advantage of every right of law.

Mr. Marsh also challenged the panel of jury as being in excess of the statutory number, forty-eight. The Court had drawn sixty jurors, and it was the prisoner's right to have a panel of forty eight selected men served upon him.

Judge McCormick overruled the objections of the counsel for the defense. He said the private opinion of members of the court and bar as to the constitutionality of the law had no bearing in the case. He said that Mr. Marsh was justified in making these motions, and the Court would not have considered him a good lawyer if he did not do everything he could in behalf of his client. The Court was perfectly satisfied that Mr. Marsh stood high in his profession, otherwise he would not have appointed him.

Considerable time was taken in the selection of a jury. All who were called were examined as to whether they were related to the dead man, whether they had formed any opinion as to the innocence or guilt of the defendant, or had conscientious scruples against capital punishment.

Hon. Henry Clauss was the second juror called. He was examined and said he was a member of the Grand Jury, and voted for the indictment against Freehill. He was challenged by the defense for cause, and the Court sustained the challenge.

The jurors accepted were: Chas. B. Pierce, foreman; Randolph Drake, Henry Wilke, William Ayer, George N. Potter, Edward Burnett, Samuel Nichols, Thomas H. Seymour, George W. Calkins, George A. Meddaugh, John J. Slifer, John J. Ludlow.

It was after 12 o'clock when the panel of jurors had been accepted, and Prosecutor Marsh opened the case for the State, reviewing the story of the crime.

BROOKLYN TALENT.

A Professor Leaves the Dead Languages and Gives Lively Music.

Last evening about 150 friends of the Christian Endeavor socieety of the Crescent Avenue church met with the society to enjoy an evening of social discourse. The first of the evening was taken up with an interesting and pleasing entertainment. Wm. Edwards, professor of Greek and Latin in the Boys High School, of Brooklyn, and Mr. Evans, of Plainfield, were present. During the programme, which was made up as the entertainment progressed, Mr. Evans gave several whistling selections that were excellent and enjoyed by all.

Everybody was well pleased that Mr. Edwards had left his Greek and Latin in Brooklyn and had only brought to them some of his musical skill. Mr. Edwards' music is all of his own composition and is entirely of the humorous style. His compositions are of a nature peculiar to himself.

The committee in charge was Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, chairman; Peter Neuman, E. Irving Oakley, J. E. Kimball, and the Misses Sadie H. Hunter, Katharine M. Wood, Sophie W. Brower, Susie Davies and Marion P. Bower.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. HE IS A SLY OLD TURK

Sultan Writes an Appealing Letter to Salisbury.

Begs the Premier To Make a Speech To Offset the One He Made at the Lord Mayor's Banquet—Pledges Himself To Carry Out the Reforms Demanded by the Powers.

London, Nov. 20.—An incident that is unparalleled in the annals of English diplomacy occurred last night at the conference of the colonial agents in London. This was the reading of a letter from the sultan of Turkey to Lord Salisbury, begging him to make a speech that would offset the one he delivered on the occasion of the banquet given by the new lord mayor of London. Lord Salisbury referred to the impropriety of reading the speech at the conference, but he took advantage of the occasion simply to gratify, as far as he could, the request of the sultan. At the outset of his speech the prime minister said:

Only To Please the Sultan.

"Allow me to say a word in answer to a very distinguished distant correspondent, if I may so term him, who has requested me to make a statement in some public speech. My correspondent is no less a personage than the sultan of Turkey. (Loud cheers.) I feel that there is a profound impropriety in thrusting any diplomatic details on your attention, and I hope you will believe that nothing would have induced me to produce on this occasion the august message I shall read except the distinct commands of the person from whom it proceeds."

Sorry Salisbury Doubts Him.

Lord Salisbury then referred to the speech he delivered at the Guildhall on the occasion of the banquet given by the new lord mayor of London, on November 9, and added: "His majesty has been pleased to send me a message to say that he has been very much pained to read the report of that speech and the expression of the opinion that the promised reforms in Turkey would not be executed. His majesty desires it to be known that he is carrying out those reforms decided upon by him. He is desirous of executing them at the earliest possible moment, and has so repeatedly instructed his ministers. His majesty continues: 'The only reason why Lord Salisbury should thus throw doubts on my good intentions must be the intrigues of certain persons here or false statements made to cause such an opinion.'

Will Carry Out Reforms.

"After intermediate observations his majesty says: 'I repeat that I will execute the reforms. I will take the paper containing them, place it before me and see that every article is put in force. This is my earnest determination, and I give my word of honor. I wish Lord Salisbury to know this, and I beg and desire his lordship, having confidence in these declarations, to make another speech by virtue of the friendly feeling and disposition he has for me and my country. I shall await the result of his message with the greatest anxiety.'"

Could Not Be Discourteous.

When the prime minister had finished reading the letter he was greeted with loud applause. When quiet had been restored he again appealed to his hearers to acquit him of impropriety for such an unprecedented act as reading such a message to a public meeting, but declared that he could not abstain from reading it without showing discourtesy to the distinguished potentate who had written it. He then said:

Powers Still Agreed.

"As you know, we are part of the concert of Europe, which has resolved, so far as it acts, to act with unanimity. Some persons seem to imagine that we dispose of the decisions of the European powers. That is crediting us with more influence than we possess. Whatever is done must be done with unanimity. I do not admit that responsibility for any decision that the powers make rests entirely or mainly on this country. We and all the powers are in a position common to those who are obliged to act together, namely, that if others do not agree with them, they cannot have their own way, but I in nowise desire to intimate by these words that the slightest shade of disagreement has arisen among the powers."

British Press Comment.

London, Nov. 20.—The Post, commenting on the sultan's letter to Lord Salisbury, says: Nobody who considers eastern politics with calm, unbiased judgment will fail to be struck by the pathetic dignity and frank earnestness of the sultan's message. The Graphic says: In writing these manly words the sultan has rendered a signal service to himself, his country and Europe.

CARLISLE ON FINANCE

Addresses the New York Chamber of Commerce.

He Says Greenbacks Must Go, But Refrains from Defining the Best Future Currency Policy—Points Out What the Pound Sterling Has Done for London.

New York, Nov. 20.—The chamber of commerce held its one hundred and twenty-seventh annual banquet last night at Delmonico's. The banquet hall was decorated with the stars and stripes, and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. Alexander E. Orr, president of the chamber of commerce, presided, and around him were seated, besides the speakers of the evening, Hon. Carl Schurz, Rear-Admiral Henry Erben, Mayor Strong, Hon. Hilary A. Herbert, Hon. Judson Harmon, Gen. Thomas H. Ruger, Commander Montgomery Sicard, James N. Constable, William H. Webb, Calvin S. Brice, General Horace Porter, J. Edward Simmons, John Jacob Astor and James G. Cannon. The meeting was called to order by President Orr, who spoke at considerable length and closed with an appeal for funds to aid the sufferers in Armenia. He then introduced the Hon. John G. Carlisle, the secretary of the treasury, who spoke on "Our Currency Question." He said in part:

Points Out a Danger.

"Two years ago I had the honor to attend your annual banquet and to make some remarks, in the course of which I said that the disposition and ability of the government to maintain its own credit at the highest standard, and to preserve the integrity of all the forms of currency in circulation among the people, could not be reasonably doubted and ought not to be the subject of further controversy. Since that declaration was made here, interest bearing bonds to the amount of $162,315,400 have been issued to procure gold for the redemption of United States notes and treasury notes, and the obligations of the government on account of the notes still remain the same as at the beginning. The notes are redeemed, but they are unpaid, and if our legislation is not changed, no matter how often they may be presented and redeemed hereafter, they will remain unpaid. If this policy of redemption and reissue is continued, the interest-bearing debt will be greatly increased, while the non-interest bearing debt will not be in the least diminished.

The Fundamental Vice.

"Every student of monetary science and every practical man of business knows that the fundamental vice in our currency system is the legal tender note, redeemable in coin by the government and reissuable under the law. So long as these notes are outstanding the slightest diminution of the coin reserve authorized by law for their redemption at once excites a feeling of apprehension and distrust in the public mind, affects the values of all our securities, curtails investments, and more or less seriously embarrasses all the business affairs of the people.

Says Greenbacks Must Go.

"In attempting to provide a circulating medium consisting of its own notes, redeemable in coin on presentation, and reissuable after redemption, the government of the United States is engaged in a business for which it is wholly unfitted, and which was never for a moment contemplated by its founders. It has a right to borrow money and issue evidences of the debt, and it has a right to coin money and regulate its value—that is, to declare what the relative values of the metals shall be in the coinage—but it was never contemplated that it should convert itself into a bank of issue and furnish a legal tender paper currency for the use of the people, and the longer it is required to conduct such a business the greater will be the injury to the government and to the people. No change that can be made in our currency system will afford the relief to which the government and people are entitled unless it provides for the retirement and cancellation of the legal tender United States notes.

At the Mercy of Foreigners.

"The circulation of legal tender United States notes and treasury notes has a tendency to drive out of use and out of the country the very coin in which the government is compelled to redeem them, and it has expelled millions of dollars from our borders. The maintenance at par of the United States notes and treasury notes compels the government of the United States not only to furnish gold to pay the private debts of its own citizens abroad, but to furnish it to every foreign nation and to the subjects of every foreign nation whenever they want it for any purpose; and, in order to procure it for them we must, from time to time, increase the public debt by sales of bonds.

What Gold Has Done for London.

"The merchant and banker cannot prosper when the farmer and mechanic are idle or only partially employed, nor can the farmer or mechanic prosper when the operations of the merchant and banker are improperly obstructed. The pound sterling has made London not only the principal market, but the clearing house of the world. No matter what character of currency other nations may use, no matter what standard of value they may adopt, all their international balances are subjected at last to the test of the pound sterling; and all their international bills of exchange are naturally attracted to a common centre, because it is there, and there only, that a uniform and recognized measure of value will be applied to them. England not only realizes great profit from her own trade, but takes toll out of the international trade of all other countries, for the simple reasons that the balances are settled upon the basis of her standard of value, and the credits which represent them almost necessarily pass through the hands of her merchants and bankers."

Did Not Define a Policy.

Secretary Carlisle's speech was listened to with deep interest, but he refrained from defining the best future currency policy.

TO AVOID FAVOR SEEKERS.

Ex-Speaker Reed Will Not Arrive in Washington Until the 26th.

Washington, Nov. 20.—Ex-speaker and future speaker Thomas B. Reed of Maine writes that he will be in Washington on the 26th inst. The explanation of Mr. Reed's delay in reaching Washington which is generally accepted imputes it to a desire to avoid as long as possible the personal importunities of representatives who are ambitious of committee chairmanships and good committee assignments. The pressure for these places among the members who were re-elected to the next house began last winter, and it is presumed that it is greatly intensified with the near approach of the re-assembling of congress. The republican caucus will meet in the hall of the house of representatives on Saturday evening, the 30th inst. The first business will be the election of a speaker, following which the names of the various candidates for clerk, doorkeeper-sergeant-at-arms and postmaster will be presented.

THE PASTOR APOLOGIZES

And the Celebrated Tibbals-Moulton Libel Suit Is Withdrawn.

Middletown, Conn., Nov. 20.—The celebrated Tibbals-Moulton libel suit for $5,000 damages was withdrawn yesterday afternoon from the superior court, after pastor J. W. Moulton had testified and signed a paper stating: "I have never said nor intended to convey to James N. Tibbals that I believed he had embezzled money. I regret that I repeated to him or any one else anything that had been said to me implying anything of the sort. I write this in the hope that Christian unity may be perpetuated in the church and all discords quelled and ended." Tibbals claimed that Moulton got him removed from the deaconship by slanderous statements.

RAISE THEIR ONW PAY

South Carolina Delegates To Receive $4 Per Day.

Constitutional Convention Employes Were Also To Get Larger Salaries, But the Appropriation Was So Far Exceeded That the Grant Had To Be Rescinded—Tillman's Charge.

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 20.—The constitutional convention had an exciting time last night. The legislature last year fixed the per diem of the members at $2. An ordinance to provide for the disbursement of the $30,000 appropriated to defray the expenses of the convention was taken up last night, and it provided for a per diem of $4 for the members after Oct. 15 last and to the final adjournment. The convention rushed ahead and adopted this and then increased the pay of all employes until the per diem provided amounted to about $54,000. Eighty-nine members came to the hall pledged to vote themselves $4 a day. So Senator Tillman stated on the floor, and no one denied the assertion. When they realized what they had done and how much they had voted, an attempt was made to recall the action by conservative-minded members. Amid the greatest confusion the convention finally left all the employes at a low rate and voted to themselves a per diem of $4, this conclusion being reached a few minutes before midnight.

GEN. KEYES' FUNERAL.

As the Sun Sank an Impressive Scene Was Presented at the Grave.

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 20.—The burial of Maj.-Gen. E. D. Keyes took place yesterday afternoon at the Military cemetery with full military honors. A full regulation escort of cavalry, artillery and infantry escorted the remains from the train. The body was placed on a caisson drawn by four horses, followed by a led horse with proper drapery and equipment. After the family and mourners came the academic board in full uniform. Minute guns were fired during the moving of the procession to the grave. The artillery fired thirteen guns, a major-general's salute. The close of the ceremonies, as the sun went down and the moon rose, with the large body of officers and the presence of the troops, made a most impressive scene.

PEAK'S APPOINTMENT.

The New Swiss Minister Never Held Public Office Before.

Washington, Nov. 20.—John F. Peak, nominated yesterday to be minister to Switzerland, is a lawyer residing in Kansas City, Mo., a man of means, and a gentleman of culture. He has never held public office before, his preferment to this position being due to the efforts of Representative Tarsney. There is said to be no political point made or lost by this appointment, for it is understood that Mr. Peak is a friend of Senator Cockrell, Senator Vest and ex-Gov. Francis. He has never been an active politician and has been drawn into no party quarrel. It is therefore believed that his appointment will be satisfactory to the Missouri delegation in congress.

The jury has been discharged.

TO POOL THEIR INTERESTS.

New York and New Jersey Pilots Will Hereafter Work Together.

New York, Nov. 20.—At a meeting of the New York board of pilot commissioners action was taken which will materially effect the pilotage at this port. In accordance with a resolution previously adopted by the pilots, the board sanctioned a scheme looking to the eventual pooling of the interests of the New York and New Jersey fleets and the substitution of steam for sail. For the present the New York fleet will be reduced from a score of craft to eight. An ocean going steam fishing vessel, the Walter Adams, will be chartered for a station boat at Sandy Hook. The Jersey pilots will discard their sailing vessels at once and substitute three steam pilot boats. If they are found satisfactory the New York pilots will adopt them. There are 110 New York and 50 Jersey pilots. The New York men will provide seven steam craft. The ten boats then comprising the fleet will be jointly operated. It is believed that this will make the business more profitable and it will of course do away with the long and often dangerous cruises, sometimes 600 or 700 miles to the eastward, engendered by the existing competition.

STILL HARD AGROUND.

Believed, However, that the Steamer Manitoba May Be Saved.

Quarantine, S. I., Nov. 20.—The tug C. E. Evarts, from the wrecked steamer Manitoba, reports that the Manitoba is ashore about seven miles south of Barnegat light at Beach Haven. There is only nine feet of water there at high water and as the steamer is drawing fifteen feet, it will be seen that she is hard and fast aground. No cargo has yet been discharged. She has only about one hundred tons of cargo all told. Capt. Millington and his officers and crew are on board the Manitoba and are sanguine of floating her with the assistance of a wrecking steamer. Unless an easterly wind drives the steamship further up on the beach, the chances of saving her are fairly good.

EXILED FROM CUBA.

Two Refugees Reach New York, But Refuse To Talk.

Quarantine, S. I., Nov. 20.—On the steamer Saratoga of the Ward line, which arrived at Quarantine last night from Vera Cruz and Havana, were two Cuban refugees named L. Alvarez and H. Mazzora. They were put on board the Saratoga at Havana and were escorted by two Spanish army officers, who were responsible for their safe embarkation. Both gentlemen are entirely ignorant of the English language, but refused to talk through an interpreter. Their fellow passengers could give no information as to what led to their exile.

See in Wilton, about six miles from this place, and who was convicted and sentenced to Dannemora prison for life, was released from that institution on Monday by Gov. Morton, his sentence having been commuted. Standish has returned to Saratoga, where he expects to reside in the future. He is 60 years of age and has considerable property. During his incarceration he was regarded as one of the model convicts of the prison.

New York, Nov. 20.—The collision on the Brooklyn bridge yesterday at the Brooklyn terminal by which one man, George Granite, a passenger, was killed, and Thomas Cooper, a conductor, had both legs cut off, it is now said was due entirely to the heavy fog. Cooper has since died in the hospital.

THEY HAVE CONFESSED

The Four Train Wreckers Break Down.

Probably Led Astray By Reading Jessie James Literature—A Fifth Boy Arrested as a Witness—A Miracle That So Many Escaped Death or Serious Injury.

Rome, N. Y., Nov. 20.—In addition to the four boys arrested for wrecking the Central mail train near this city yesterday, Joseph Wilkes, 18 years old, has been arrested as a witness. It is said that he was taken into the confidence of the others when they were planning the wreck, but that he refused to go with them when they went to commit the deed. Confessions have been made by all the other boys of their guilt. They gave their names as J. Watson Hildreth of New York, Fred Bristol and Herbert Plato of Rome, and Theodore Hibbard. They range in age from 17 to 19 years. One of the boys confessed that they had a number of revolvers hidden in the woods near the railroad track, and he was taken there last night to locate them, but on account of darkness the spot could not be found.

Had Jesse James Literature.

District-Attorney Block was closeted with the prisoners several hours, and scores of detectives have been in town investigating the case. A large crowd is about the police station again to-day, but there are no threats of violence. The prisoners are closely guarded. There is no evidence that others besides those apprehended were concerned in the plot. One of the boys, when arrested, had in his possession a yellow-covered novel, giving the exploits of the James boys in bank and train robbing. Coroner Nock has begun an inquest on the bodies of Engineer Hager and the tramp, Robert Bond, who were killed. Lewis Morris of this city found a black cloth mask in the woods near the scene of the wreck.

Miraculous Escape for Many.

It is a miracle that no more lives were lost by the wreck. The wreckers removed all the spikes and fish-plates from two opposite rails on the southerly tracks and left the released rails in their position. As the train comprising four mail cars and three sleeping cars came along at the rate of about forty miles an hour the locomotive left the track, bounded over the ties and fell sideways into the twelve feet deep ditch on the south side of the track. The first two mail cars came together in V shape and the wreck of the engine lay in the open space between them. Under the second mail car, pinned down by a pair of trucks and stone dead, was found Engineer Hager.

None of the Passengers Injured.

The fourth mail car was partly toppled over. The first two sleepers were partly turned over and the last one remained on the tracks. Strange to say, the two loose rails had not been thrown from the roadbed, the last car remaining upon them. There were about fifty passengers in the three sleepers, and not one of them was hurt. Most of the injured were government employes in the mail car, but the most serious of the injured was John R. Macy, a tramp, of Syracuse. He was riding on the platform between the first and second mail cars, and his foot was crushed and had to be amputated.

The Spot Had Been Watched.

One week ago Sunday night a fish-plate was loosened near the spot where yesterday's accident occurred. Several trains passed over the place in safety. The condition of the track was discovered by the track walker on the following morning, and a watch was kept there each night until Monday night.

A North River bridge wouldn't have been lost in this morning's fog. The ferryboats were. Thus remarks the New York Evening World as an argument for a bridge, and a right good one it is.

William Newcorn was made Chairman, R. A. Meeker, Secretary, Charles Lister, and G. Lees, Inspectors and Abram Angleman, Judge.

OWNER SAW THEM GOING.

Rag Pickers' Quick Detection and Trip to the Bastile.

Three rag pickers invaded Westfield yesterday and while they searched for rags one of them discovered a coat and a pair of trousers hanging on a line. The articles suddenly disappeared in the rag picker's bag, but not so fast but that their owner saw them go and shortly after the three strangers saw the inside of the jail. The owner of the stolen clothes valued them at $3 and the prisoner offered to settle for that amount, but the officers of justice said nay and the thief was sent to jail while his companions were each held in $100 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. A Plainfield man acted as bondsman for the two who were released on bail.

Obstructing Sidewalks.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Did you see the unsightly advertising boards on Saturday that encroached on the sidewalk at the curb line in front of one of Plainfield's recent cut-rate grocers? I ask The Press, which appears to be the people's paper, to call the attention of Street Commissioner Meeker to the nuisance if it appears again. Other merchants, who are residents of Plainfield, are not allowed, or have not been in the past, to encroach on the sidewalks with anything connected with their business, and this firm should be called to account for this violation of the city ordinance. Fair Play.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

Who says the Crescent Wheelmen can't bowl? A glance in at their club house last evening, where their first game in the Central Journal Bowling League with the New Jersey Athletic Club was drawing to an end, would have speedily dispelled such an illusion. They won, of course, that goes without saying, and by seventy-two pins. The Jersey boys set the pace for the first frame; on the second the Crescent bowlers were only five pins behind and in the next, they passed the visitors and led to the tune of fourteen pins. Then they galloped away with the other fellows in the rear where they remained the rest of the match.

Sammy Wilbur's genial face wore a determined expression as he sent the ball flying down the alley in the third frame.

"Strike, Plainfield," called the umpire, and that was the tune for the next three frames for Wilbur. The fifth frame was where the Crescents did their fast work. Strikes by Price, Anderson, Lyman, Buckle. and Wilbur, and spares by Van Emburgh, Stephenson and Maltby greatly increased the lead for the Plainfield in that frame. The N. J. A. C. bowlers had seen the front for the last time and the Crescents contented themselves with holding their own or perhaps gaining a little. The pins were new and splits were the order of the evening. "Quaker" Vail appeared to have an off night.

The umpires were J. E. Smith, of the N. J. A. C., and Thomas U. Smith, of the Crescent Wheelmen. The scoreing in the books was done by done by C. E. Teel, and William Waters, both of the Crescent Wheelmen.

The individual scores were:

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. PUNTS AND KICKS.

The players of the second Y.M.C.A. eleven met for practice yesterday, and under the thorough coaching of Albert P. Simmonds, showed considerable improvement. After practicing the signals and the interference, the players tried a little running and tackling. The team which will line up against the "Trilbys" this afternoon has about been selected and will probably be Charles Denice; right end, William McCutchen, right tackle, Raymond A. McGee, right guard; Thomas A. Cumming, centre; George B. Snediker, left guard; Edgar I. Serrell, left tackle; Louis Darling, left end; W. Kirby Dwight, quarter back; Volney F. Green, captain, right half back; Albert P. Simmonds; left half back, and Charles Dupee, full back.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Will you kindly contradict the statement made in The Courier-News that the first Y. M. C. A. foot ball team had disbanded. The eleven has no no intention of disbanding at present and will put one of the strongest teams in the field on Thanksgiving Day that Plainfield has ever seen play that will be put up against the Westfield Athletic Club. Yours truely, Thomas U. Smith, manager.

Fred H. Freeeman, captain.

A SPLENDID CHANCE.

Everybody who is weak, delicate or sickly wants to get well. Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th st., New York City, makes a specialty of treating patients through letter correspondence. The wisest thing all suffering people can do is to write the Doctor, stating just how they feel, mentioning every symptom of which they complain, and he will answer the letter, explaining each symptom and describing the case so thoroughly that patients understand their complaint as well as though they had talked with the Doctor. He makes his explanations so clear that they cannot help but understand just what ails them, and he tells exactly what to do to get well. It saves a journey to the city and doctor's fees, and costs nothing. Dr. Greene is the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He is the discoverer of that wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Thousands are being cured through his perfect system of letter correspondence. It has been proved successful.

The geometry class will soon finish the first book and then will enter upon the subject of circles, which is treated in the second book of geometry.

It will do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. Sprinkler bottles 25 cents at

A CHICAGO CHARACTER.

Uncle Zig White, His Truthfulness, His Costume and His Epitaph.

Every child in North Clark street knows Uncle Zig White. He is the most familiar character between the river and North avenue. His right name is not Zig White, but when anybody calls him by the other name he feels embarrassed and out of place.

Uncle Zig is respected mainly because of his scrupulous honesty and truthfulness. He is fond of sitting on a salt barrel and telling about his adventures. According to the stories told by him at various times, he was a contemporary of George Washington, Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln and General Tecumseh Sherman. He has been through the Revolutionary, Mexican, civil and various Indian wars and always escaped without a scratch, although he was always in the front ranks. Aside from being a soldier Uncle Zig was one of the pioneer settlers of California, New Mexico, Nevada, Kansas and Oklahoma. From time to time he has made great reputations in certain regions as a powerful religious exhorter. It is said that he can recite any passage in the Old Testament by having the first few words given him.

Uncle Zig's favorite costume consists of a tall black silk hat, a long black frock coat, a striped white vest, wide check trousers and white shoes. He wears at the same time a red, white and blue shirt to testify to his patriotism and over this a pale blue necktie with a moonstone stuck in it. A heavy piece of lath for a cane and a big chew of tobacco complete his best attire. Many attempts have been made to induce Uncle Zig to take a drink of liquor, but he has refused steadily to be led into temptation. However, he confesses that a long time ago he was "wicked," and that during those time he could count chickens in the dark at 20 paces, and that he could even tell their breed at that distance.

Uncle Zig has been frugal during his declining years, and with the money he has saved he has purchased a lot in Oakwoods cemetery, near where the Confederate dead lie. On the tombstone which will be erected over his grave he will have engraved this inscription:

Shun the wicked; choose the right;
Be a man like me.—Zig White.

SULLIVAN'S SECRET.

How He Could Tell Whether It Was a Boy or a Girl.

When John L. Sullivan was in Washington once upon a time he amused a crowd of listeners, who happened to be of a variety intellectually superior to the average crowd of hangers on who worship the great man's memory for what he was, with an exhibition of attainments in which, according to John's idea, brain instead of brawn and fistic prowess plays the better part. He told the age of any man in the crowd who was learned enough to add, substract and divide a series of compound figures, which John furnished, and nine times out of ten hit the mark.

But one feat which he performed and in which he believed with the fervor of an idolator goes into the marvelous. It involved the telling whether the firstborn of a given couple was a boy or a girl. The way that this feat was accomplished was a profound secret with the pugilist, but in a burst of confidence he disclosed the method to the writer.

To solve the problem the only necessary data are the full maiden name of the mother and the full name of the father. According to Mr. Sullivan's formula, if, after counting the letters in both names, the sum is an even one, the firstborn is a boy; if odd, the issue of the union is a girl. For example, all the letters in Mary Jane Brown and Hiram Smith form a total of 23, an odd number; result, a girl. If this formula is reliable, it will serve forecasting purposes as well as the establishment of post facto results, but no editorial guaranty goes with the prescription.—Washington Post.

The Beauty of Sympathy.

Sympathy, beautiful and pure, is apt to be marred by its being prompted merely by a sense of duty, and thus its true and natural spontaneity is veiled. It is true that the habit becomes second nature to us, and by habit we may and do develop honorable and charitable sympathy with all suffering, but the truly sympathetic are so born, and it is as impossible for them to enshroud their true desires and actions as it is "to soil a sunbeam by the touch." It is in the late youth and mature years that, as a rule, we see its most splendid achievements. In childhood it is apt to be in abeyance.

In the old age of good people its beauty is enhanced, and yet in many instances, in the sere and yellow leaf, all that was of sympathy, what little there might have been, becomes bitterness, and the selfish man clings to what he has gained, coveting what he has not, with a tenacity which baffles description. All his treasures are on earth, and as he knows he must and shall leave them there can be no eternal hope in him, and his mind becomes centered on that which is of but short duration. He becomes "earthen," and the rest of his days are spent in sordid contemplation of what at best is but an idle dream.—Current Literature.

A Miniature Inland Ocean.

One of the queerest sheets of water in New England or within the limits of the United States, or the world, for that matter, is the celebrated "Snow's ocean," in the state of Maine. When calm, it is, to all appearance, an ordinary pond of no great dimensions, but observations and investigations made more than a century ago prove that the little body of water is a veritable ocean. It is located in Orrington near Bangor, and its peculiarity is that, although situated among some high hills some distance from ocean or river, it has tides which rise and fall as regularly as do those of the great Atlantic. Many so called scientific examinations of this miniature ocean's bed and surrounding banks have been made, but so far no tenable explanation of the phenomenon has ever been given to the public.—St. Louis Republic.

How to Clean Neckties.

Take 18 grains of powdered white castile soap, 5 fluid drams of strong aqua ammonia, 24 grains of granulated saltpeter. First dissolve the soap in a pint of warm soft water, then add the saltpeter, and after it has dissolved add the ammonia. Set aside over night, or the equivalent ten hours, and then it is ready to use. Take a cloth or small sponge, and after wringing it out of this mixture gently rub the ties until all dirt disappears.—Philadelphia Times.

A Hard Lesson.

"Do you think you could learn to love me, Maud?"

"I don't know, George," she answered softly. "I might. I learned German once."—London Answers.

CENTURY FOR THE COMING YEAR.

The Century Magazine celebrates its quarter-centennial in its November issue with an "Anniversary Number." In honor of the occasion it dons a new dress of type, with new headings, etc., and it appears in a new and artistic cover. Although The Century has reached an age that is unusual among American magazines, it continues to show the youthful vigor and enterprise that have always characterized it. The programme that has been arranged for the coming year contains a number of interesting features. Much has already been written concerning Mrs. Humphry Ward's new novel, "Sir George Tressady," which has been secured for its pages. There was a very spirited bidding for this novel on the part of several prominent publishers, with the result that the author will probably realize from the serial and book rights of it one of the largest sums that has yet been given for a work of fiction in the English language. It will be the leading feature in fiction for the coming twelve months, other and shorter novels being contributed by W. D. Howells, F. Hopkinson Smith, Mary Hallock Foote, and Amelia E. Barr. There will also be contributions from Mark Twain and Rudyard Kipling (the latter furnishing to the Christmas Century one of the most powerful stories he has ever written); a series of articles on the great naval engagements of Nelson, by Captain Alfred T. Mahan, author of "Influence of Sea Power upon History"; three brilliant articles on Rome, contributed by Marion Crawford, and superbly illustrated by Castaign, who made the famous World's Fair pictures in The Century; a series of articles by George Kennan, author of "Siberia and the Exile System," on the Mountains and the Mountaineers of the Eastern Caucasus, describing a little-known people; articles by Henry M. Stanley and the late E. J. Glave on Africa; a series of papers on "The Administration of the Cities of the United States," by Dr. Albert Shaw. The Century will also contain during the year a great number of papers on art subjects, richly illustrated.

Prof Sloane's "Life of Napoleon," with its wealth of illustration, will reach its most interesting part,—the rise of the conquerer to the height of his power, and his final overthrow and exile. In order that new subscribers may obtain the whole of this monumental work, the publishers have made a rate of $5.00, for which one can have a year's subscription from November, '95, and all of the numbers for the past twelve months, from the beginning of Prof. Sloane's history.

A Slippery Night.

"Talk about slipping," said Butch Boylan. "We had a lot of little Grant engines on the Erie one time that were just about the smartest and slipperiest engines that ever was. They were four wheel connected hard coalers, with the cab on the running boards. One night there was a fellow going east with one of 'em and had a lot of switching to do at the rolling mill in Paterson. Just as he got coupled up again and ready to go it began to rain hard, and as soon as he got the slack taken up and got the signal from the flagman on the caboose he shut his cab windows. There's a pretty hard pull for a couple of miles out of Paterson, going east, and then you get to the top of Lake View and let them run themselves from the top down to Passaic bridge, where we all had to make a dead stop. Well, the little fellow got the little Grant hooked up and was going along nice and thought he was in luck that she didn't slip more than she did. It was so dark he couldn't see much outside through the rain, but pretty soon the little Grant began to rock and roll at a livelier gait, seemed to be picking them right up, and he knew he had pitched over the top of Lake View, so he shut her off, and before he could get the lever dropped down she had stopped dead. That was a puzzler to him, and he threw his window open and stuck his head out in the rain, and what do you suppose the matter was?" The committee declined to do any supposing, and Butch went on: "Why, that little Grant had stood right there in one spot and slipped all the while he thought he was getting up Lake View hill. Hadn't moved a car length!"—Locomotive Engineering.

Victor Emanuel Sees Things.

There is a homely story told of Vittorio Emanuele when at the Pitti palace. He was looking idly out of a window one day, when he saw two large wagons full of forage going out of one of the gates. He immediately reasoned, very justly, that forage might come in at the gates of the palace lawfully, but could only go out from them unlawfully. He set on foot an inquiry, conducting the investigation himself, trusting to no one, and thus discovered a gigantic system of stable robbery. Those concerned in it he promptly punished.—Contemporary Review.

Madness In His Method.

By FLORENCE L. GUERTIN.

[Copyright, 1895, by the Author.]

Courtright went quickly up the steps, looking at his watch, and touched the bell. Her brougham was standing in front of the door, and he knew that she would be ready.

She came down stairs in a plain, dark traveling gown, with the violets he had sent her pinned to her topcoat, and with a maid bearing her satchel and umbrella behind her.

"To the Forty-second street station," he said to the man on the box, and the sleek looking cobs sprang forward.

It was about a year since Courtright had first met Miss Schuyler. The acquaintance had begun on board a train bound for California, and they had become very good friends. The following winter found him a steady caller at the Schuyler domicile, yet in no way receiving preference above the other men who called quite as frequently, and who were also more or less enamored of Miss Schuyler's healthy type of loveliness. At least, if he was preferred, it was not made known, and he was treated with the same cordial frankness that characterized her manner toward all. Some one had once sagaciously remarked that Constance Schuyler could not be a flirt, for she was too much interested in every man she met, and perhaps the secret of her popularity lay in the fact that she was interested in people, which always flatters and generally awakens interest in return. Courtright said she possessed adaptability in a very marked degree, and that it was that quality which enabled her to make friends with the oldest and crustiest of bachelors or with the youngest and most swaggering of college youths, and that with all her vivacity and high spirits there was an undercurrent of sympathetic womanliness that appealed to you, and he summed it up by saying that she was the most delightfully human and thoroughly lovable girl he had ever met.

In the absence from town of her father he said that he wanted the privilege of escorting her to the station, and as they bowled along in the snug little brougham he told her that there was something else he wanted and then repeated the sweet, ancient story in a manly, nineteenth century fashion.

It was no novel recital to Constance Schuyler, yet she wondered why it had never before been so hard to say "No." But she said it very firmly and decidedly, for if she loved him now she had not found it out, and it was much better to tell him how sure she was rather than to let him go on, deluding himself with the vain idea that some time she might grow fond of him. After her frank words Courtright, looking out of the window, replied meditatively:

"No, I should not want to hang around a woman for years, hoping that some day she might care for me and bothering her about it. I should want her to come to me gladly, and because she wanted to, and I would not marry Venus herself unless she loved me." Then he looked at her critically and continued with delightful audacity: "I think I could marry you, though, if I did persevere, but I should always feel that perhaps you were not giving me your best love. It seems to me that that sort of thing ought to be spontaneous. I shouldn't care to be married to be gotten rid of."

"But you believe that love is a gradual growth, don't you?" Constance asked, wishing in spite of herself to explore further into this partly known but still fascinating territory.

"Not necessarily," he answered. "Do you remember the morning that I first saw you, going out to California? The train had stopped, and Peters and I got out to walk up and down the station. You came out of the car and stood on the platform, talking to some one below the steps. I heard you laugh, and looked up, and saw you standing there with your head a little thrown back, and your white teeth and dimples showing. I think I succumbed on the spot. I couldn't get you out of my thoughts anyway, and didn't rest until I had met you. It entailed two days of conversation on the general state of the country with your father, in the smoking car, and the consuming of no end of cigars, but I was rewarded at last."

Miss Schuyler laughed.

"And all the time poor father never suspected the deep scheme you were laying and gave you no end of credit for being clever, because you listened to his views on the silver question, and the tariff, and everything else he was interested in. He used to come back from the smoking car to mother and me and tell us about the bright chap with whom he had been 'settling the affairs of the nation.'"

She congratulated herself that she had steered the conversation off dangerous ground and that it had taken a less serious turn. Personalities, above all, she felt were to be avoided. But Courtright evidently did not agree with her and plunged boldly in again.

"I saw something in your face that day, as you stood there, that I had never seen in any woman's before. I don't believe I could explain it to you"—as she looked at him inquiringly—"but"—coming down to what he could explain—"you know you're an awfully fetching girl, Miss Schuyler, and I think, even if I were married to you, I'd always be a little jealous. I used to want to make jelly of that young Whitney who tried to monopolize you in Pasadena. You're the sort of girl"—continuing to analyze her as if she were not present—"that will always attract men, without effort. I suppose it's magnetism, and besides"—turning and looking straight at her—"you're so peachy, and so—so—ridiculously kissable"—ending with a half apologetic laugh.

Constance Schuyler grew "peachier" and felt that she ought to frown, yet was conscious of a little exultant feeling within her, almost as if she were glad Courtright thought all those absurd things about her. But she said aloud she was very sorry he felt as he did, and that as long as he continued in the same frame of mind he must not come to see her, as it would hardly be fair for him, when she felt so very certain about herself. Then the carriage drew up in front of the big red station, and there was not time to answer this rather depressing remark. They passed through the crowded waiting room out into the vast skeletonlike building beyond and proceeded to "walk a mile" to the train.

Courtright thought of her last remark and made up his mind he would never adhere to it. He felt very downcast as he realized that he was giving her up, for a time at least, and that she was going to a place where, of course, every man there would want to marry her. He glanced down sidewise at her, thinking how sweet she was, and found that she, too, did not look particularly cheerful.

"Constance," he said quite low, "if this is the end, won't you let me kiss you goodby—just once?"

Miss Schuyler almost stood still with astonishment and grew at least three inches taller.

"Certainly not!" she replied in the most emphatic tones of which she was capable, looking at him so severely and with such utter consternation on her face that Courtright had to bite his lip and pull hard at his mustache to keep from smiling. She saw that he wanted to laugh and felt that she had not succeeded in properly snubbing him. She went on indignantly, taking the first argument that came into her mind, and in which her conventional training and desire for appearances asserted itself:

"What a frantic idea! What would the people on the train think of you?"

"Oh, they wouldn't think anything of it," he said and added drolly; "I'd say, 'Give my love to Maria,' or something like that, and then simply kiss you."

It sounded so absurd that Constance laughed in spite of herself, but had no fear. In her eyes it would have been a heinous crime, and Courtright, she knew, was a man to be trusted. Then the train made a feint of starting, and they ran a little for fear of losing it. There was but one chair vacant in the center of the car, holding out its arms to receive her, when they entered, and she dropped into it, panting a little.

"Goodby!" she said, looking up at him and holding out a neat tan gloved hand. "Goodby!" he answered, taking it in his own and holding it a second longer than was necessary, and then, before she knew what he was about, he stooped, and saying "Give my love to Maria!" lightly kissed her cheek.

It was only a very little kiss and landed almost on her ear, just above the high fur collar of her coat, and was taken through one of the little dotted veils she generally wore, but it was enough to send the hot blood surging to her eyebrows and to awaken indignation and rebellion within her.

He saw instantly the mistake he had made and regretted bitterly the spirit of mischief that had prompted him to the act. She was leaving him in anger, and there was not time to prevent it. The train was puffing and catching its breath, as if to collect enough to propel it, and was already slowly moving. He glanced down at her pleadingly.

"You will send me your card when you return?" he said.

"Never!" she replied shortly, returning his glance with a look that contained fire and swords and other deadly weapons and almost petrified him on the spot. He was obliged to leave the car or go with it, and he did the former, half dazed, realizing as he stood on the platform watching the receding train that he had gone a step too far. Of course she was hurt and insulted, and he called himself a cad and other hard names and said no penance would be too great for him. Then an idea came to his troubled brain, and, turning, he walked quickly back to put it into execution.

For one hour Miss Schuyler remained motionless in her chair, too stunned to move. That Courtright, of all men, should offer her such an affront had almost taken her breath away. It not only outraged her inbred ideas of propriety, but destroyed every particle of her faith in men, and she told herself she could "never forgive him." She was still wearing her heavy coat in the warm car till she felt of her forehead and found that it was feverish, and that she herself was almost stifling. Slipping off the coat, she hung it up, laying his violets scornfully on the window sill. She would not wear them. Then she resumed her former position, with her head on the back of the chair, repeating to herself: "How could he do it? How could he do it?"

The train was pulling into Stamford when a very small messenger boy boarded the car, calling in a voice that was a credit to his size:

"Is Miss Schuy! here?"

Constance sprang to her feet.

Her first thought was of home. Had her mother been taken suddenly ill and had they sent for her, or had her father met with one of those horrible accidents with which the papers abounded? A thousand awful possibilities flashed like meteors through her mind as, with trembling fingers, she tore the envelope open.

"Regret exceedingly my conduct on train.—Courtright," were the words that met her frightened eyes. In the reaction that came she felt almost grateful to Courtright for having something for which to apologize. Then the impropriety and rudeness of it rushed back, and she hardened her heart against listening to his repentance. Of course he regretted it, she would give him credit for that, but the act had been altogether unpardonable. She repeated this to herself a great many times for fear she might forget it.

The train was now at Bridgeport, but she was hardly conscious that they were stopping until her reveries were suddenly broken by again hearing her name. A second blue coated envoy stood at one end of the car, bawling, like the first, for "Miss Constance Schuyler!" With flaming cheeks she half rose and announced that she answered to that title, feeling that the eyes of every one in the car were fastened upon her and wishing that Courtright was out of existence. What did he mean, she asked angrily? Had he not made her conspicuous enough for one day? What would these people say of her—to board a train with a man who had kissed her goodby and sent her telegrams at every station? And what was old Mr. De Peyster, who sat near her and was a political friend of her father's, thinking of her as he lowered his paper and peered over his glasses at her, watching her open the yellow envelope? She glanced at it leisurely, knowing now that there was no cause for great alarm.

"I realize that it was rude and ungentlemanly.—C.," she read.

Constance's lip curled with disdain as she thought that she, too, realized it, and she took a novel from her bag and tried to lose herself in it. But her mind, in its present volcanic state, refused to follow the placid path of the heroine and would not concentrate itself. She kept her eyes on the open pages, preferring not to meet the inquisitive glances of those near her. She had never felt so uncomfortable and blamed Courtright more than ever. The very car wheels were singing a monotonous song, of which the refrain was, "Give my love to Maria; give my love—to Maria," at any other time appealing to her sense of humor, but now fanning her ire. But it was to rise yet higher, for at New Haven a third messenger entered and followed the example of his strong lunged predecessors. It was the first time she had ever wished to disown the proud name of Schuyler, and she felt a further strong inclination to throw the telegram unopened out of the window. It proved to be a continuation of the other two, reading:

"And sincerely beg your pardon. Please answer.—Courtright."

"And sincerely beg your pardon."

Peanut Flour.

A well known doctor, who has experimented with a number of diabetic flours in order to find suitable nourishment for diabetic patients, is satisfied in his own mind that peanuts prepared in the proper way furnish one of the most perfect flours for such patients. His method of preparing the flour is to put the peanut kernels with the inner coatings into a tin kettle with a perforated bottom. This kettle is uncovered, is fitted on or into a pan filled with boiling water, and the nuts are boiled for a half hour. This is done for the purpose of partially drawing out superfluous oil. The kernels are then thoroughly dried, and with a rolling pin pounded into fine particles. To prevent waste and scattering, it would be well to put the nuts into a linen bag until they are broken. The next thing to do is to put the bruised kernels in boiling water containing a little vinegar. When thoroughly boiled, the kernels are subjected to dry heat, but they must neither be browned nor roasted. When dry, powder with the rolling pin, and you will have a flour to be used in porridge, with a little milk added, in biscuits and in German pancakes.—New York Post.

THREE YEARS OF ACTIVE SERVICE.

Informal Reception Tendered to Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Richardson.

An informal reception was given to Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Richardson by the congregation of the Park Avenue Baptist church last evening in honor of the third anniversary of Rev. Mr. Richardson's pastorage. The church parlors were prettily decorated for the occasion with rugs, piano lamps, greens, ferns and potted plants.

The Ladies Aid Socieiy furnished the refreshments and assisted in receiving, while the Christian Endeavor Society provided the programme and served the refreshments.

The programme was an informal one and lasted most of the evening, the different numbers being interspersed with sociability and conversation. An instrumental trio by the Misses Livezey and Wheeler and Mrs. Jacobus was excellently rendered on the piano. Joseph Sattels on the violin and Mrs. Joseph Sattels at the piano, assisted by two other violinists, gave several selections. Miss Alice Coard, accompanied by a cousin on the mandolin, played a piano solo.

The evening passed very enjoyably and everyone was glad to welcome their pastor and his wife to another year of service and to celebrate the three years that had already passed away, leaving nothing but the pleasantest of memories behind.

The Ladies Aid Society did their work as one body.

Interesting Remarks.

Lederer makes some remarks this evening that are worthy of notice. Let our city's fair shoppers but read his striking ad and they will go directly to him. The variety and grandness of his bargains place them beyond the reach of other shops. They are indeed beyond compare.

Visit of Grand Officers.

Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A.M., held a regular communication last evening which was largely attended and was honored by a visit of the Grand Officers of the State. Very interesting addresses were made by several of the Grand Officers and Worshipful Master D. C. Adams, and the visit of the Grand Officers was greatly enjoyed.

H. S. Mason, of East Sixth street, collector of Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, is still very ill with nervous prostration, bordering on brain fever.

The following five members from Jerusalem Lodge, F. & A. M., met the remains at the station and acted as pall bearers: C. H. Rugg, Charles Yaeger, B. F. Coriell, David Pope, L. S. Pocock, and J. Harper's Magazine
IN 1896.

Briseis, a new novel by William Black, written with all the author's well-known charm of manner, will begin in the December Number, 1895, and continue until May. A new novel by George du Maurier, entitled The Martian, will also begin during the year. It is not too much to say that no novel has ever been awaited with such great expectation as the successor to Trilby. The Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc will continue and will relate the story of the failure and martyrdom of the Maid of Orleans. Other important fiction of the year will be a novelette by Mark Twain, under the title, Tom Sawyer, Detective; a humorous three-part tale called Two Mormons from Muddlety, by Langdon Elwyn Mitchell; and short stories by Octave Thanet, Richard Harding Davis, Mary E. Wilkins, Julian Ralph, Brander Matthews, Owen Wister, and other well-known writers.

Prof. Woodrow Wilson, will contribute six papers on George Washington and his times, with illustrations by Howard Pyle. Poultney Bigelow's history of The German Struggle for Liberty, illustrated by R. Caton Woodville, will be continued through the winter. Two papers on St. Clair's defeat and Mad Anthony Wayne's victory, by Theodore Roosevelt, with graphic illustrations will be printed during the year.

A noteworthy feature of the MAGAZINE during 1896 will be a series of articles by Caspar W. Whitney, describing his trip of 2600 miles on snowshoes and with dog-sledge trains into the unexplored Barren Grounds of British North America in pursuit of wood-bison and musk-oxen. Mr. Whitney's series will have the added interest of being illustrated from photographs taken by himself.

SWEET STRAINS OF MUSIC.

ENTERTAINING AFFAIR AT THE SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

Many Individual Numbers and a Large Chorus Make Up a Programme That Is Enjoyed By Those in Attendance.

Good music is enjoyed by everybody and the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church could not have better pleased the large audience which gathered in the church last evening by having a less musical programme than the one which was given at their musicale. The weather was not of the best, but a goodly number turned out despite the storm.

The programme opened with the overture "Bridal Rose" by an orchestra composed of Mr. Korff, first violin; James Petrie, second violin; D. E. Davis, trombone; Mr. Wallender, cornet; Miss Jessie Utter, piano; A. L. Titsworth, organ. The selection was excellently rendered and was loudly applauded. A selection by a male quartette, composed of Louis Bond, Elmer Runyon, Robert Gorton and D. E. Titsworth, entitled "Oh Ye Who Seek," was the next number, and was greatly enjoyed.

After a violin solo, "Legende," by James Petrie, rendered in his usual excellent manner, Mrs. George T. Mussen, of Brooklyn, sang "Come Where the Lindens Bloom," accompanied by Miss Jessie Utter. She sang "The Maid of Dundee" as an encore. The first part of the programme closed with Handel's "Largo," by the orchestra.

The second part opened with the "Gloria" from Farmer's Mass, sung by the conference club, which was composed of Mrs. Dunham, Mrs. George Stillman, Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, the Misses Bessie Titsworth, Maud Mosher, Ernestine Smith, Cartie Randolph and Mabel Maxson, sopranos; the Misses Demarest, Lena Tomlinson, Louise Lewis, and Nancy Randolph, altos; Elmer Runyon, Louis Bond, Mr. MacElroy, of Brooklyn, Frank Clausen, and Louis Rogers, tenors; D. E. Titsworth, A. L. Titsworth, Robert Gorton, A. J. Spicer, and Charles Randolph, basses. Elmer Runyon then rendered a tenor solo "Young Rose," after which followed a song and solo by A. L. Titsworth, both of which were heartily applauded. The orchestra played again and then the "Tar's Farewell" was delightfully rendered by the male quartette, when in response to the continued applause, sang a lullaby as an encore. The march "Amieitta" by the orchestra closed the evening's entertainment. Envelopes were found in the pews in which the contributions were placed and left at the door on going out.

SHOT IN THE HAND.

Harold Armstrong Cleaning a Revolver When It Was Discharged.

This morning Harold Armstrong, son of Capt. George P. Armstrong, residing at the Revere House, accidently shot himself through the hand while cleaning a revolver. The bullet was of 32 calibre. A moment before the shot was fired Mrs. Armstrong was standing directly in the direction that the bullet took, and had only moved back a moment before. The bullet struck the window sash and embedded itself in the shutters.

Dr. Endicott was hastily summoned and in a few minutes was with the injured boy. He dressed the wound and expressed the opinion that no serious results will follow. Mrs. Armstrong is quite prostrated with the shock.

Tea of King's Daughters.

The Daughters of the Cross, a band of King's Daughters in North Plainfield, will give a tea at the residence of Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., of Myrtle avenue, Friday, the 22nd inst, from three until six o'clock.

Spartans Convene.

The regular meeting of the Spartan Literary and Athletic Society was held Tuesday evening at the home of Raymond Carroll, of Westervelt avenue. Two new members were elected.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. ANOTHER COMMUTER COMPLAINS.

Thinks Trains Are Chronically Behind Time on the Central.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I was glad to see in your paper of last Thursday that our commuters are beginning to realize how poor the train service is.

First—It is very slow. The 8:27 reaches New York in 50 minutes. Allowing 15 minutes for the ferry, and it leaves 35 minutes as the running time for about 22 miles, with one stop. The 4:30 and 5:30 trains require 44 and 49 minutes respectively, with no stops.

Second—The trains are chronically behind time. The 10:04 has been from 5 to 15 minutes late at Plainfield several times lately. The 8:27 never arrives in New York on time and frequently is overtaken by the 8:31 which makes four stops.

Third—The trains are few and badly arranged. Between 7:53 and 8:48 there are five trains, three of them within 21 minutes; between 10:04 and 10:27 there are three trains; there is no train to New York between 8:48 and 10:04.

Fourth—The peddling on the train is a nuisance. In the Jersey City station boys and men are continually passing through the trains selling papers, puzzles, books, candy, chewing gum, cough drops, fruit, magazines, (some of which are almost obscene), and other articles. The vendors bawl through the cars and push and crowd the passengers. They confer no benefit on the regular passengers; their customers being, almost exclusively, the occasional travelers. They have been banished as an intollerable nuisance from the Pennsylvania and other first class railroads, and if the Jersey Central wished to be considered first class it must do likewise.

Fifth—Spitting on the floors of cars and ferrybcats. It is remarkable to see men, often well dressed, who will spit on the floor; they are as unconscious of wrong doing as an unbroken puppy. I believe that an effort to repress this filthy habit would be surprisingly successful. The company might well begin with its own brakemen, some of whom are habitual offenders. And right here let me say one word to the women. They are the principal sufferers and can assist in checking the habit by working on the men of their own families and others over whom they may have influence. The reforms needed then are these: Give us faster trains morning and evening; redistribute the morning trains or else put on one about 9:15; give us a fast train at 5 p. m.; abolish train peddling; try to stop spitting on the floor. A.

Next in the Star Course.

The next of the series of Y. M. C. A. entertainments will be given by Jere M. Cobb, elocutionist, Miss Kathryn Krymer, of Brooklyn, contralto, and C. Maynard Evans, whistling soloist, in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, November 28th, (Thanksgiving evening) at eight o'clock. These excellent entertainments are free to all $5, $8 and $10 members. Course ticket, $1; single admission, twenty-five cents.

Exhibition of Art.

It was decided at the meeting of the Camera Club Tuesday night to give a grand loan exhibition of art, and Messrs. Audsley, J. E. Stewart, H Stillman, J. Hervey Doane, Harold Serrell, G. Thorn and H. Squires were appointed a committee to arrange the affair which will be given about February 1st. One member was elected at the meeting.

New Fire Alarm Boxes.

Three new fire alarm boxes have been established within the city limits. One is at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Front street, and is known as number 14. Number 29 is located at the corner of Watchung and Woodland avenues, and number 49 is to be found at the corner of South Second street and Clinton avenue.

Want to Be Citizens.

The following have applied in the Union County Court of Common Pleas to become citizens of the United States: Thomas Kiernan, of Monroe avenue, James Traynor, of West Third street, John McPhillips, of South Second street, Cornelius Guinee, of West Third street, and John Corrigan, of South Second street.

Different Every Night.

Every night's entertainment will be different at the Firemen's Fair next month. The fifth night Madame Menzeli Bartlett promises the Park scene of Kathleen, also American national airs and tableaux, representing all the States. It will be grand, unique and beautiful.

High School Notes.

The following will be the special song at the Thanksgiving Day services of the High School:

THANKSGIVING.

To the giver of all blessings,
Let our voices rise in praise
For the joys and countless mercies
He hath sent to crown our days;
For the homes of peace and plenty,
And a land so fair and wide,
For the labor of the noonday,
And the rest of eventide.

For the splendor of the forest,
For the beauty of the hills,
For the freshness of the meadows,
And a thousand sparkling rills,
For the blossoms of the springtime,
And the memories they bring,
For the ripened fruits of autumn,
Do we thank Thee, O our King.

For the wealth of golden harvests,
For the sunlight and the rain,
For the grandeur of the ocean,
For the mountain and the plain,
For the ever-changing seasons,
And the comforts which they bring,
For Thy love so grand, eternal,
We would thank Thee, O our King.

Vacation for Borough Children.

The Somerset Teachers Institute will be held at Somerville on November 25th, 26th and 27th. As all teachers are required to attend the Institute, no sessions will be held in the North Plainfield public school on these dates and as November 28th is Thanksgiving day the Board of Education have decided to have no sessions of school during the week at all.

A Plainfield Artist.

The Thanksgiving number of Harper's Bazar will contain a handsome full-page design advertising Royal baking powder. The whole thing was designed and executed by W. Montgomery Smith, of this city, and when we state that the Royal people accepted his design from among several of the best designers in the country, including Mr. Bradley, we but give the credit due him for the beautiful piece of work accomplished.

Looking For Stolen Property.

A woman, residing on North avenue, visited the jewelry stores of this city yesterday in search of a pair of gold eye-glasses which had been stolen. She thought the thief would try to sell them and so she was on the lookout. She suspected some one of the theft, but would give no names nor a description of anyone whom she suspected.

A Fair Attraction.

Thomas Schaefer, who has just arrived from the Eastern States from a successful tour, has made arrangements to appear at the firemen's fair the week of December 9th. He will introduce his original club novelty.

Croup is a terror to young mothers. To post them concerning the first symptoms, and treatment is the object of this item. The first indication of croup is hoarseness. In a child who is subject to croup it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the rough cough has appeared it will prevent the attack. It has never been known to fail. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

HOW THE SEWAGE BEDS WORK

MANY VALUABLE POINTS ON THIS NEW CITY IMPROVEMENT.

Those Who Have Investigated and Studied Feel That the System Will be Satisfactory When In Working Order

One of the all important questions that is agitating the minds of Plainfield people is whether the system of sewerage that is being introduced is going to be a success. Now that the work of laying sewer pipe about the city has been completed they are anxiously awaiting the completion of the sewage beds so that they can have an opportunity of seeing the system in actual working order.

A Daily Press representative visited the beds yesterday afternoon, where he met Mr. Smith, who has charge of the work for Washburn & Washburn.

Mr. Smith is a thoroughly capable man and certainly understands his business. In a pleasant manner he extended to The Daily Press representative all the courtesy that lay in his power, and was very glad to explain his part of the work.

The grounds upon which the beds will be located cover a vast area and will certainly surprise the uninitiated.

Washburn & Washburn's work commences at the screen tank which is being built on Dunellen avenue close to the sewage bed property. This screen is twenty-seven feet and six inches long by thirteen feet and three inches wide. The sewage matter goes through an eighteen-inch pipe to this tank, where the solid matter drops in a receptacle prepared for it, while the liquid portion goes through an eighteen-inch pipe into three outlets and is fed to the beds.

The screening tank is lined with enamel brick and has a smooth surface, which prevents the solid matter from adhering to it.

Gates are provided at the tank to shut off the sewage matter so as to allow cleaning of the tanks.

The most interesting portion of the work perhaps is that being done on the beds, of which the are seventeen in all. The liquid that is sent to them from the three outlets is filtered through six feet of sand and one foot of gravel. In each bed there are five underdrains consisting of three and four inch tile, which are about one foot long. At each joint a poor quality of muslin is wrapped. The muslin very soon wears out and allows the liquid to pass through it from the six feet of sand and one foot of gravel, and from there it passes on through to the brook. Around the beds there are banks. On the Greenbrook side it is nine feet high, to prevent any overflow from the brook reaching it. The other banks will average eight feet in height and from two to three feet wide. At the brook there is a roadway on top of the bank ten feet wide. Underneath these roadways and banks there are eighteen-inch pipe which serve as outlets to the beds. Between Dunellen avenue and the brook there are two cross roads, which serve as embankments. In all there are nineteen underdrains. The sand used is of three qualities, fine, medium and coarse, and each bed is composed of one class of sand. Nineteen manholes are used, the drain from the upper beds run into them and has a fall of about five feet to the lower beds, where the liquid continues its course to the brook. In all sewage matter there is a quantity of bacteria, but the bacteria in the sand and gravel is so much stronger that all the poisonous substances are killed.

The underdrains are about forty feet apart, and there being five to each bed will allow perfect drainage. Just at present the men are at work getting the beds in shape, laying the underdrains and putting in manholes. In a few days the large steam shovel will be put to work on the hill where the upper beds will be located. The hill will be cut down ten feet. The fact that a quanity of clay has been found near the brook has given the idea that the drainage will be poor, but assurances are given that the liquid will not touch the clay. There is no possibility of the sand and gravel packing and once the beds get in working order there certainly can be no trouble in the flow.

When the beds are completed there will be nothing objectionable to the sight and if the system performs all that is claimed of it there will be nothing objectionable to the smell. A twenty-four inch underdrain pipe will be laid from the Clinton avenue pond 1,170 feet on West Front street to Rock avenue, where it will be run to the brook. This is done to take away the surplus water and improve the condition of the property. The lowlands on West Front street formerly the Smock property will be filled in and thus all objections removed.

Head off the cold wave with Peck's fine merino underwear.

PARTY OF MASQUERADERS.

Arranged by New Brunswick Young People for Plainfield Sociability.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shultise, of Manning avenue was last night the scene of a merry party of masqueraders, who came in upon the host and hostess about 10 o'clock. The party was arranged by a number of New Brunswick young peopie, who on a previous occasion endeavored to arrange a surprise party for Mr. and Mrs. Shultise, but were unable to reach Plainfield owing to an accident to their conveyance at Metuchen. The costumes were of a varied lot and made plenty of fun for those present until unmasksng time came. Music was furnished by Naylor. After midnight refreshments were served.

Those present from New Brunswick were Misses Jennie Gray, Lizzie Gray, Agnes McClelland, Nellie McClelland, Dena Bitson, Mary Knautsion, Julia Sullivan, Sadie Riley and Alice Hall. BORROWED, BUT NOT RETURNED.

Two Colored Women Have a Legal War About Clothes.

The case in tort of Maria Pleasant against Amanda Dunham was tried in Justice Newcorn's court this morning. Lawyer H. C. Runyon represented the plaintiff and Lawyer Geo. W. DeMeza the defendant.

The facts are that about a month ago Mrs. Scott, a laundress at the Revere House, had $4.50 stolen from her. Soon afterward Maria Pleasant purchased a coat and a pair of shoes. Amanda Dunham heard of it and going to Maria said she would like to have them as Mrs. Scott wanted to see them. Maria let her take them and that is the last they have been seen, though Amanda says she left them in the laundry at the Revere House. After hearing both sides of the case Justice Newcorn reserved his decision till Monday.

LITTLE GIRL'S SURPRISE.

A Number of Juveniles Give Alice Sharkey a Surprise.

Miss Alice Sharkey, of East Second street, was given a pleasant surprise last evening. Many of her friends were present. The children spent the evening in playing games. About nine o'clock supper was served. Among those present were: Lottie Chamberlain, Lucy Jennings, Irene Hope, Lendrum Jennings, Violet Hope, Agnes Wrentmore, Donald Bectal, Ella Atchison, Alice Sharkey, Katie Ryan, Walter Sharkey, John Ryan, Maggie Kenney, Lulu Kline, Mattie Kline, Anna and Alice McAfee, Margie and Leo DeCourcy, Gilbert VanHorn, Malisia Bird, Jack and Nellie Callahan, Frank Newman, Chester Allen, Edna Moore, Lewis Fisher, Leslie Palmer, Clarence Linbarger, Anna Morrison and Dan McAfee.

Last Sewer Pipe Laid.

Though Honan & Son expected to be able to finish their sewer contract with the city by last Saturday, they were not, owing to the unexpected obstacles which arose and prevented rapid progress with their work. They completed the laying of the seventeen miles of sewer pipe last night, the last section of which was on Ravine road. With the exception of a few odd jobs about the city they are practically through with their work.

Grocery Store for Evona.

Barnes Brothers, the West Front street grocers, have purchased a lot at the corner of West Front street and Clinton avenue through the agency of Wallace Vail, and will at once erect a building which will be used as a grocery store.

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhœa of long standing in six hours, with one small bottle of Chambertain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief. It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. R. Armstrong, Manager.

MINSTRELSY BY WHEELMEN.

CRESCENT CLUB PRACTICALLY DECIDE TO GIVE A SHOW.

It Will Be Made Up of the Best Local Talent and Will Be Staged in a Luxurious and Spectacular Manner.

Plainfield is to see another minstrel show this winter, or, at least, so it was decided at the regular monthly meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen last evening. After the regular routine business had been transacted, the entertainment committee made its report. The report was a favorable one and proved satisfactory to the members, for after some remarks on the subject it was decided that the minstrel show should be held some time soon after the Christmas holidays. It was announced that W. E. MacClymont and Plainfield's only William N. Runyon had consented to assist and that only home talent would be used. W. L. Price offered the club the use of the hall in the Columbia Cycle Academy and a vote of thanks was unanimously passed and ordered sent to him for his kind offer which will be considered.

The committee will go to work at once and the lovers of minstrelsy may rest assured that Plainfield will see something well worth seeing.

MUST WAIVE INDEMNITY

Waller May Be Released as a Matter of Grace.

Understood That France Has Refused To Furnish Ambassador Eustis a Copy of the Court Martial Record as a Matter of Right— ay Do So as a Matter of Courtesy.

Washington, Nov. 21.—While the state department refuses to furnish any information regarding the matter the impression exists here that the French government has notified Ambassador Eustis at Paris that it will not furnish a copy of the record of the court martial proceedings against ex-Consul Waller as a matter of right. Mr. Waller's counsel, Crammond Kennedy of this city, believes, however, that the record will be furnished to Ambassador Eustis if requested as a matter of courtesy.

May Release Him Through Courtesy

It is not improbable that Mr. Waller will be notified by the state department that the French government will release him from custody as a matter of grace if this government will waive the question of indemnity. So far, apparently, he is in ignorance of the fact. Mrs. Waller strenuously insists on a payment of damages in compensation for his imprisonment, but it is not unlikely that the whole matter will be referred to the ex-consul to decide for himself. Should he prefer to remain in prison upon the chance of obtaining the indemnity the state department and his counsel will do the best possible for him under the circumstances.

HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY.

Students Humphrey and Miller Fail To Secure Bail.

Schenectady, N. Y., Nov. 21.—C. G. Humphrey and C. C. Miller, the students who are charged with having committed many burglaries in this city and vicinity recently, appeared in the police court yesterday afternoon and through their counsel, H. G. Glen, waived examination. They were held for the action of the grand jury at the January term of the county court. Bail has not yet been obtained for the accused. The room containing the great variety of plunder stolen by the two students from stores and residences was thronged with people all the forenoon, hundreds coming from motives of curiosity, but scores of others from hopes of finding goods or articles that had been stolen from them. Most of the property has been identified and the ownership proved. In some cases canned goods, pictures, utensils and nicknacks that had not been missed have been discovered by the owners in the multitudinous collection. Some things, however, have not yet been claimed.

WHITTEN-TOMLINSON CASE.

Habeas Corpus Proceedings Argued Before the U. S. Supreme Court.

Washington, Nov. 21.—William H. Baker of Boston appeared in the United States supreme court yesterday for the appellant in the habeas corpus case of Dr. George E. Whitten vs. Tomlinson, sheriff of New Haven county, Conn. Whitten claims that he was held in the state of Connecticut illegally, not having been indicted by any grand jury there and therefore unlawfully extradited from Auburndale, Mass., and the appeal is from the decision of the Connecticut circuit court denying him the right to prove the non-existence of an indictment the fact of such non-existence appearing on the papers in the case. The state of Connecticut was represented by Edward H. Rogers of New Haven.

He Praises the Atlanta Exposition and the South in General.

Boston, Nov. 21.—Gov. Greenhalge, accompanied by Adjt.-Gen. Dalton and those members of the governor's staff who made the Atlanta trip, arrived in this city yesterday. The adjutant-general reports an excellent time and says that the exposition is highly creditable to the south. In speaking of the trip the governor referred to the kind greeting extended everywhere to the Massachusetts delegation, and said: "The southerners are warm-hearted and bright. It is a pleasure to address them on any occasion."

HALSEY-GRUBB WEDDING.

Celebrated in St. Mary's P. E. Church in Burlington.

Burlington, N. J., Nov. 21.—Charles D. Halsey, one of the best known men in Newark, son of Silas Halsey, former consul to Sonneburg, Germany, and Miss Euphemia Van Rensselaer Grubb, only daughter of E. Burd Grubb, ex-minister to Spain, were married in this city at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The wedding was solemnized in St. Mary's P. E. church and was quietly celebrated on account of the recent deaths of the bride's grandmother and aunt. J. Sebastian Mathews, the celebrated English organist, presided at the gaeat organ and performed a low, soft and inspiring wedding march as the bride entered the church with her father, attended by her maids and preceded by the ushers. At the chancel she was met by the groom and his best man. Miss Grubb wore a gown of very plain, white satin, trimmed with lace that belonged to her mother. A long tulle veil hung gracefully and was caught by a diamond crescent, the gift of the groom. White slippers and gloves completed the costume and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley, showered with violets. There was no wedding reception or breakfast. Mr. and Mrs. Halsey started on a wedding journey through the south immediately after the ceremony. The wedding gifts in silver and gold represent expenditures of thousands of dollars, including rare and beautiful designs carried out in most elaborate workmanship.

He is over 70 years of age. Mr. Vaux has had a great deal to do with the development of Central park in New York, and is well known all over the world as the author of several works on landscape gardening.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Boy Train Robbers Arraigned at Rome.

Plead Not Guilty and Their Hearing Is Adjourned—Hildreth, the Rich Man's Son, Recounts the Horror—Stood Ready, Revolvers in Hand, To Rob the Passengers.

Rome, N. Y., Nov. 21.—The train-wreckers, John W. Hildreth, Theodore Hibbard and Fred Bristol, were arraigned before the recorder yesterday afternoon charged with murder in the first degree in causing the death of N. M. Hager and Robert Bond. They pleaded not guilty and their examination was set down for Dec. 3. Yesterday a young man named Fred Palmer was arrested on suspicion of being connected with the railroad wrecking plan. He says that the prisoners talked to him some time ago about wrecking a train, but he refused to join them. At the continuation of the inquest held on the death of Nathan M. Hagar and Robert Bond, who were killed in the railroad wreck here Nov. 19, it was shown on the testimony of detective John Latham and others that the wreck in which the deceased lost their lives was caused by John W. Hildreth, Herbert Plato, Fred Bristol and Theodore Hibbard, who tampered with the track for the purpose of ditching the train that they might rob the passengers, dead and living. The inquest was adjourned until Nov. 26.

Bristol Still Refuses To Confess.

Bristol still refuses to admit his guilt, but the confession of the other boys, however, implicate him and makes him and Hildreth the leaders of the gang. The boys had all been reading sensational novels. They frequented Hildreth's room at the Temperance hotel, where they played cards and had boxing bouts. The also frequented the canal boat of Bristol's father, which is tied up here. In the the summer the boat is taken to Sylvan Beach, on Oneida lake, where it is used as a saloon. On the boat and in Hildreth's room they read novels.

Stood Ready, Revolvers in Hand.

About three weeks ago they went to Utica. There Hildreth, who already owned a revolver, purchased two more. The boys rode home in a boxcar and planned the wreck. They thought they would get about $30,000 from the dead and dying passengers. They matured their plans, as has been told, and not until the rails were loosened, and the train was nearing s he fatal spot did they seem to hesitate. "Then," said Hildreth, "we were on pins and needles and wished those rails were back in place. We stood on the north side of the tracks with our revolvers in hand, ready to run in among the people. When we heard the crash and the cries of the people we ran away through the woods.

Were Thoroughly Scared.

"We were thoroughly scared, and realized what we had done. We had not gone far before we decided to throw away our revolvers, because we were afraid if they were found on us we would be suspected. I lost my hat, but did not stop to get it." The loss of this hat was what led to the speedy arrest of the boys. The boys went home and made such excuses as they could for their absence during the night. Hildreth went with Hibbard, and the latter got him a hat to replace the one he had lost in the wood. After that he returned to the scene of the wreck and was walking about with a cane over his shoulder when arrested. The boys do not seem to feel any severe pangs of remorse. Hildreth was executing a song and dance in his cell at the police station when seen by a reporter.

MARY M'MILLAN'S TRIAL.

Testimony Closed—The Defendant a Witness in Her Own Behalf.

Auburn, N. Y., Nov. 21.—The taking of testimony in the trial of Mary T. McMillan of Chicago, charged with disposing of thousands of counterfeit two-cent postage stamps, came to an end last evening in the United States circuit court here. The defendant, who has maintained the utmost composure throughout the trial, was the only witness in her own behalf. She recited the history of her connection with the swindling concern in the same quiet, unostentatious demeanor which has characterized her behavior from the first. She re-affirmed the story she told the police when arrested in Hamilton, Ont., to the effect that she had been the innocent employe of Charles O. Jones, who is now in Joliet jail accused of the same crime.

London, Nov. 21.—The News says that Sir Philip Currie, British ambassador to Turkey, takes back with him to Constantinople a letter from Queen Victoria to the sultan.

Indispensable In Diphtheria

is Bovinine, as has been attested by thousands of physicians. One of the many testimonials we have received is one from Dr. Arthur P. Ginn of Omaha, which reads, "I used Bovinine in several cases of diphtheria, and was successful with the cases. This to me is sufficient evidence of its value, no other food being used during treatment, except the milk used as vehicle for its administration."

Bovinine

being a food product, made by a special cold process from lean beef, is easy to take, quickly assimilated, speedy in its life-promoting properties, is invaluable as a life-giver when it is necessary to maintain strength to carry a patient over the crisis of a disease. In diphtheria and other throat troubles where it has become impossible to take nourishment by the mouth, Bovinine has sustained life for weeks, administered as an injection.

TO PROTECT AMERICANS

Cruiser Minneapolis Ordered to Smyrna.

Numerous Appeals from Missionary Organizations Induces the President To Strengthen Our Fleet Where Missionaries Usually Assemble When They Are in Danger.

Washington, Nov. 21.—As a result of a consideration of the Turkish situation at yesterday's cabinet meeting the cruiser Minneapolis has been given orders to take on coal and other stores without delay and to sail for the European naval station. Her destination is Smyrna, Asia Minor, and her duty will be to assist the flagship San Francisco and the cruiser Marblehead in protecting the interests of American missionaries and other citizens of the United States. It was stated authoritatively to-day that there were no new developments in the Armenian situation involving this government, but from the general aspect of the present status of affairs it was deemed best to dispatch another United States war vessel.

In Answer to Numerous Appeals.

The action of the administration with regard to the Minneapolis was brought about through numerous appeals from missionary organizations and prominent men in this country to increase the United States naval force on the coast of Asia Minor. Scores of letters have been received by the state department representing that the lives and property of American missionaries were in jeopardy. The last few days have witnessed an increase in these communications, and the order just issued is the result.

Coaling at Norfolk.

The commander of the Minneapolis is Capt. G. H. Wadleigh. She is now at Norfolk, where she will take 600 tons of coal on board and then proceed to Hampton Roads to secure the 900 additional tons necessary to fill her bunkers. With this amount of coal the Minneapolis would be able to proceed direct to Smyrna without delay, but she will break the long voyage at Gibraltar to replenish the store.

To Sail About Nov 25.

The Minneapolis is the fastest vessel in the United States navy. On her official trial trip she maintained an average speed of more than 23 knots for the required time. It is not the intention of the navy department, however, to test her capabilities in this line and the vessel will proceed at a rate of between 15 and 16 knots an hour, which is her most economical speed from the standpoint of coal consumption. Ninety-seven tons a day will be all necessary to secure the rate given. It is expected at the navy department that the Minneapolis will be ready to sail from Hampton Roads by Nov. 25, and she should reach Smyrna about three weeks later. In addition to her officers the Minneapolis will carry a compliment of 400 blue jackets and forty-five marines. It is understood that Smyrna was selected as her destination because it is the best place for missionaries to gather in the event of danger to their lives.

MEETING OF AMBASSADORS.

United States May Join the Movement Against Turkey.

London, Nov. 21.—Prime Minister Salisbury yesterday received at the foreign office United States Ambassador Bayard and the ambassadors of all the great powers. The Chronicle today refers to this as a meeting of ambassadors and remarks that it is more important than usual. Mr. Bayard has not been at the foreign office in many months, and the Chronicle says it is believed that his presence there points to a desire on the part of the United States to join the European concert.

BATTLESHIP TEXAS.

Changes Will Not Be Made Until After a Careful Test.

Washington, Nov. 21.—The changes proposed in the Texas, involving the removal of the hydraulic pumps from their present position to the armor redoubt, will not be considered until the more thorough and careful test of the present machinery under the best possible conditions has been had. For this purpose certain recommendations of the constructor, which are expected to lower the temperature in the pump room, will be tried and the present system given a more thorough test and under more favorable conditions than has been practicable before. The Texas is regarded by the department, according to a statement received there today, as a good and efficient ship; so far as the reports of her officers show, she will, with certain minor changes, prove to be a very excellent fighting machine in every way. Constructor Bowles says that the ship showed no evidence of structural weakness. It is quite possible that she will be delayed some time longer at the New York navy yard than was originally contemplated.

MANHATTAN DAY.

Railroads Preparing for a Great Crowd to Atlanta.

New York, Nov. 21.—Special arrangements have been made by the railways running south to carry what is expected will be the largest delegation from this city that has visited the south. Troop A will act as escort of the mayor and will go on this train. Members of the board of aldermen and many city officials are also going. A special rate of $20.50 for the round trip has been made for November 21, 22 and 23, and extra cars will be attached to all through trains running south on those days.

Fire Destroys an Extensive Stock Farm at Princeton, N. J.

Princeton Junction, N. J., Nov. 21.—The long row of new buildings, large farm and extensive outbuildings on the stock farm of the well-known butcher and business man at Princeton, A. S. Leigh, were totally consumed by an incendiary fire yesterday including several head of valuable horses and mules, a herd of sheep, 200 tons of hay, 200 bushels of oats, valuable machinery, and a large quantity of dressed meat and poultry. Fortunately all the cattle, swine and live stock were saved.

EXCITEMENT IN COURT

David Hannigan Gives the Lie to the Prosecutor.

His Frail Little Wife Faints and His Sister Becomes Hysterical—Juror No. 8 Almost Collapses—The Long Drawn Out New York Murder Trial Will End To-day.

New York, Nov. 21.—The Hannigan murder trial will be given into the hands of the jury some time this evening. Excitement in the trial was at fever heat all day yesterday and far into the night. There was being fought out a tremendous battle for the life of the man who had, in the blood of the betrayer, avenged the wrong of an erring sister. On the one side was the law, just, but stern and inexorable. On the other eloquence and sympathy.

A Dramatic Scene.

For six hours and twenty minutes Lawyer Brooke argued eloquently and impassionedly for the acquittal of the prisoner. It was a remarkable speech, culminating in what was a practical defiance of the court and a peroration that recalled the best traditions of the best criminal bar in the country. Dramatic in the extreme was the scene when Mr. Brooke, exclaiming "As you deal by this man, so may God deal by you," closed his plea for the life of Hannigan.

An Exciting Moment.

Court had been in session continuously from 10:30 until 5:30, adjourning then even for only one hour. The nerves of all were tense. Women were on the verge of hysteria; the jury was worn out; the prisoner was in pitiable distress; the counsel were irritated by the wearing work of five weeks of supremest effort. It needed but little friction to set everything going awry. That friction came, but it was from an unexpected quarter. It was at the evening session, and took place during the summing up of Assistant District-Attorney McIntyre for the people. It came from Hannigan, who suddenly awakened from the stupor in which he has been throughout the trial at the words of the district-attorney. Mr. McIntyre, referring to the vital point in the case, said:

Gave the Lie to the Prosecutor.

"The defense in this case is insanity," said Mr. McIntyre. "Now, the law says that voluntary intoxication shall not be an excuse for crime. If, on the 23d day of May David F. Hannigan was drunk——" "You lie! you lie!" shrieked the prisoner, who, trembling in every limb, rose from his chair and pointed his long, emaciated finger at Mr. McIntyre. Instantly there was confusion. Dr. O'Sullivan, who so ably assisted in the defense, jumped for Hannigan and pushed him back into his seat. Then Hannigan's two sisters jumped forward and with their arms around his neck held him down until he became quiet, thought he kept insisting to his counsel that it was a cruel lie.

Prisoner's Wife Faints.

While this scene was being enacted a feeble "oh!" was heard, and a frail little woman, worn and pallid, sank in a helpless mass on the floor. She was the wife of the prisoner, and has been an object of pity ever since the long trial began. A stalwart court officer picked up the poor little woman in his arms, and carried her out of the court room, where a physician restored her to consciousness. One of Hannigan's married sisters soon became almost as bad as Mrs. Hannigan. She had to be helped out of the court room, and her hysterical shrieks and cries were enough almost to unnerve even a stern justice. Quiet had hardly been restored when C. A. Bentzer, juror No. 8, seemed about to faint. A short recess was had while he was taken out into the open air. He recovered quickly, and, returning, tucked his overcoat about him and said he felt strong enough to continue.

INJURED BY DYNAMITE.

One Man Loses an Arm and Another Made Totally Blind.

Wellsboro, Pa., Nov. 21.—Frank A Johnson, a prominent business man of this place, and his father-in-law, Mr. Raymond, were out yesterday afternoon on Johnson's farm, located near here, engaged in blowing out stumps of trees with dynamite. They went into a shanty to warm some of the cartridges over a stove, and a terrific explosion followed. The building was blown to atoms, and the men were hurled quite a distance. Johnson's left arm was blown off at the elbow, and his face, neck and head were terribly cut and burned. Raymond was made totally blind and was also badly cut and bruised by the flying timbers. It is thought that both will die.

Will Go on with the Work.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Nov. 21.—O. A. Schuellkopf, owner of the hydraulic canal, says that he will keep right on deepening the canal in spite of Attorney General Hancock's opinion, and that if any attempt is made to stop the work he will appeal to the courts.

Justice Mosher is said to be a candidate for City Collector.

The Somerset Messenger opines that New Jersey will go Democratic in 1896.

Thanksgiving is coming and Thanksgiving weather is here. It is an agreeable change.

Those who are talking about a Citizens' movement have not got much time to throw away if they put a ticket in the field.

There is every indication that George DeMeza will get the City Judgeship nomination from the hands of the Republicans this evening. Some of the older members of the party are averse to the policy of putting such a young man in that office, but while they have been sitting still and talking, Mr. DeMeza and his friends have been out hustling, and the delegates are for the young lawyer, though, of course, there is "many a slip betwixt the cup and lip."

A prominent Republican leader stated this morning that all was not serene for the re-nomination of City Collector Johnson. If some other Republican gets the nomination, and Mr. Johnson carries out his threats of contesting the right of any one to succeed him before his three years service expires, there will be a lively time. The city will be compelled to defend the tenure of office of whoever it elects, and Mr. Johnson will have hard odds to overcome an opponent in a municipal corporation.

"Clyde Line," From New York to Jacksonville, Fla., Reduces the Time Twenty-Four Hours.

The growing popularity of the "Clyde Line" has necessitated their building new, commodious and fast steel steamship which makes the run right through to Jacksonville, Fla., without change, in two-and-a-half days, including six hours' stop in Charleston. The "Clyde Line" steamers sail from Pier 29, East River, New York, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 3 p. m. If you go to Florida once by the "Clyde Line" you will always go that way. The "Clyde Line" is certainly an all around up to date concern, and is untiring in its efforts to give their patrons entire satisfaction. They are not afraid to spend a dollar, when by so doing they can add to the comfort or pleasure of their patrons. In fact they owe their great popularity and increase in passenger travel to this very liberal system, always contending that their passengers shall have the best regardless of cost, so that when they leave the steamer at the end of the journey they become itinerant advertisements for the "Clyde Line." Low rates; quick time; perfect safety. Write "Clyde Line," New York, for descriptive matter, mailed free.

"I FEEL IT IN MY BONES."

Rheumatic Persons Perfect Barometers.

Not a Foolish Notion But Explainable on Scientific Principles.

Some Account of a Painful and Deforming Disease.

Many persons claim that they can fortell changes in the weather, the only explanation for their knowledge being that "they feel it in their bones." This is not a foolish notion. The nerves of persons suffering from rheumatism are more highly sensitive than those of other people, and for that reason they are more easily affected by any change in the atmosphere. How few of us are exempt from this common disease. After some exposure to wet or cold, there are slight chills, lassitude, no appetite, bitter taste in the mouth, coated tongue, and excessive soreness, lameness and swelling in some joint, muscle or portion of the body. The pains shift from one place to another; sometimes the disease may settle in the back, or chest, and one can scarely breath without a sharp pain; the shoulder or arm may be affected, or the rheumatism may settle in the feet and legs. At any time there is danger that the rheumatism may attack some vital organ like the heart and carry off its victim.

The seat of the disease is in the blood and nerves. Get the blood and nerves right and you remove the cause of the trouble. Mr. Daniel A. Foster, of Wentworth, N. H., who had been suffering for years, at last found prompt relief from pain and describes it in the following letter.

"I have been in an extremely nervous condition," says Mr. Foster. "I had the grip so that I was unconscious for several days for most of the time. I have had the rheumatism for seven years enough to kill a man. When I had the grip everybody thought I would die, but I pulled through. I have used medicine, every kind that we could hear of, but that did not do me any good. I have had many doctors prescribe for me, but they didn't hit my case.

"I saw Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy advertised and watched the papers to see how people talked in the papers, and saw it so well recommended that I went down and got a bottle. That did me so much good that I went down and got another bottle, and that helped me still more. I have now used five bottles, and can truly say that it has helped more than all the other medicines and doctors put together that I ever used. I had the rheumatism so badly that I could not sit up nor dress myself, and I thought I knew what pain was, but not before. But now that is all gone. I do not have an ache or a pain and I work every day and do as much work as any man in town.

"Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy was what cured me, and I cheerfully recommend it to others as the best medicine I ever used."

Mr. John A. Davis, postmaster of the town of Wentworth, says:

"I am personally acquainted with Mr. Daniel A. Foster and have known him for forty years and can vouch for the truth of his story, for I have long known of his case.

Mrs. Daniel Foster also used the Nervura and adds her recommendation:

"I never take medicine if I can possibly help it, but sometimes I can't. My food distressed me and soured in my stomach, causing considerable gas. This gave me great pain. I was also very sleepless, and at times could not get the refreshing sleep so much needed. When these spells came on I used Dr. Greene's Nervura and the result was that I slept soundly and was refreshed. It also relieved me of the distress of dyspepsia. I cordially recommend it to all as the best medicine I ever used."

The immense benefit which Mr. Foster derived from the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura the great blood and nerve remedy, is shown by the quickness with which the pain disappeared. The entire system is nourished by the nutritive and strengthening properties of this sure, safe and valuable cure. Why not try it today? Do not wait for the pain to pursue you into every part of your body, leaving you with terrible deformities. Remember that this wonderful remedy is the discovery of the great specialist, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th st., New York City, who can always be consulted personally or by letter, free of charge.

Only Christian Endeavorers are invited to the rally of the delegates to be held this evening in the lecture room of the First Baptist church.

The ladies are taking a much greater interest in bowling this season than heretofore, and a great number of those who have clubhouse privileges try their luck on the alleys when the young men are not around. Match games between teams composed of young ladies may be expected soon.—Elizabeth Journal.

There is too much attention paid to the foul line and not enough to the placing of the pins. The variance of a quarter of an inch in the setting of a pin will not be noticeable from the bowler's position, but it will often spoil a true attempt for a strike.—Elizabeth Journal.

BASKET BALL.

The Y. M. C. A. team will open the season with out-of-town teams on December 14th, when a seven-men team will come from the Trenton Y.M.C.A. to play the Plainfield boys.

The regular basket ball season will open Tuesday evening with a game between the Spartans and the Defenders in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. Play will begin at eight o'clock. The Spartans are captained by Garfield Pike, who had considerable experience in the game on the High School team last year, while his opponents have Henry Jessup, who, though newer at the game, is a rattling good player. A lively contest is anticipated.

GOLF.

A new device for indoor golf has been introduced from England. It consists of a round metal disk, with a hole in the middle, which is placed on the carpet and permits putting shots to be practised to perfection. A number of the disks may be placed in one room, or, where the house is not large, in the hall and into adjoining rooms, forming a lengthy and interesting course. Putting games may thus be made quite an exciting amusement, but for the sake of the pictures and bric-a-brac, lofting strokes must be tabooed. Small squares of ivory form the tees for each disk.

John Keefe and and Fred Barker started on a tandem Tuesday for a trip into New York State. After going as far as Yonkers they found the fog so thick that they returned.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Those who are to participate in the hare and hound chase on Thanksgiving Day are planning to have a dinner no matter how it turns out. If three of the hares are caught then the hares will give the dinner, otherwise the hounds will have to stand the bill.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

The Spartan football team will play the Westfield second team on Thanksgiving morning at Westfield, and the Dunellen team in the afternoon at Dunellen.

Raymond Tucker, a member of the Elizabeth Athletic Club football team, had his left shoulder fractured on Saturday in the game with the Pennington Seminary eleven.

—All the Plainfield Christian Endeavor societies have been invited to attend the anniversary exercises of the German Reformed church society tomorrow evening.

—A horse attached to a meat wagon from Newark took a dislike to trolley car No. 6 yesterday morning on the switch near the public school on Somerset street, and showed his ability as a kicker. It was only through the forethought of Motorman Morris Higgins raising one of his fore feet and thus preventing his kicking, that the car was able to proceed.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

THEATRICAL.

Unquestionably the dramatic novelty of the season is "The Year One." It is the creation of that extremely popular comedian, Neil Burgess, and is a distinct departure from any of the conventional type of comedies. It is being presented at the Star Theatre, New York, on a scale of lavish grandeur never before attempted in a production of comedy. The story deals with the absurdly funny tribulations of a rather ancient vestal virgin, who, because of her marvelous resemblance to the Emperor, Octavius Augustus Cæsar, is called upon to impersonate the Emperor. She is in love with a charioteer in the Circus Maximus, and the indulgence of the gentle passion is forbidden to the vestal virgins. This, of course, adds to the complications, and affords Mr. Burgess full opportunities to develop all his well-known talent in the portrayal of such a character. The culminating effect is the chariot race in the Coliseum. It is run between two teams of four horses each, and they run apparently directly toward the audience. It is a scene which causes the most thrilling excitement, and is greeted with salvos of applause.

Atkinson's Comedy Company will appear here tonight in Music Hall in the musical comedy, the "New Peck's Bad Boy," a dramatization of the famous bad boy sketches of George W. Peck, editor of the Milwaukee Sun. The entertainment is in three acts or scenes—the grocery store, the policeman's home and the picnic grounds. The leading characters are the bad boy, his chum, his girl and his pa, the servant girl and the doctor. As Mr. Peck says: "The counterpart of this boy is located in every village in the land. He is wide awake, full of vinegar, and is ready to crawl under the canvas of a circus or repeat a hundred verses of the Testament in Sunday-school." An exchange says that he is only mischievous and has a good heart and is really one of the best boys in Milwaukee.

For the first time on any stage "The Cruiskeen Lawn," Dan McCarthy's new play, written by him, was produced in Harmanus Bleecker Hall, at both performances yesterday. The play is a comedy drama, in five acts, with the scenes and incidents laid in Ireland and is by far the best constructed and best written of all Mr. McCarthy's works—of which there are many. The plot is well and consistently drawn and the climaxes never over-reached. It tells a pretty story, with just enough sentiment, humor and pathos in it, and one cannot tell until the last act what the end is going to be. Mr. Dan McCarthy, in the role of "Old Paddy Mile," has a part that gives him a better chance to show his talent than heretofore, and that he made a most distinct hit was shown by the frequent curtain calls given him. Nagle Barry, as "Danrie," gave a most praiseworthy performance of a thankless role.—Albany Express, Friday, February 2d, 18 4. Will appear at Music Hall Saturday evening.

—The women who had charge of the Kirmess have donated everything left over to the firemen for their fair December 9th to 14th. The booths and decorations will also be left up for that occasion.

—W. A. Young, owner of that handsome plot of ground corner of Grove street and Craig place, has given the order to J. C. Dyer to lay a substantial stone sidewalk in front of said plot, and D. S. Berry, who owns the lot adjoining, will also have Mr. Dyer lay the same kind of a walk in front of his lot, thus making a good improvement.

Great Reduction in Time to California.

Once more the Northwestern Line has reduced the time of its trans-continental trains, and the journey from Chicago to California via this popular route is now made in the marvelously short time of three days. Palace drawing-room sleeping cars leave Chicago daily, and run through to San Francisco and Los Angeles, without change, and all meals en route are served in dining cars. Daily tourist sleeping car service is also maintained by this line between Chicago and San Francisco and Los Angeles, completely equipped berths in upholstered tourist sleepers being furnished at a cost of only $6 each from Chicago to the Pacific Coast. Through trains leave Chicago for California at six p. m. and 10.45 p. m. daily; after arrival of trains of connecting lines from the east and south. For detailed information concerning rates, routes, etc., apply to ticket agents of connecting lines or address: H. A. Gross, G. E. P. A., 423 Broadway, New York, or T. P. Vaille, S. E. P. Where Did I Get This Dreadful Cough?

No matter; the great question is, how shall I get rid of it? Use THE PINEOLA BALSAM, a soothing combination of the remedies nature has put in the pine and other balsamic trees. It cures the inflammation and tickling in the throat and if taken in time will prevent the spread of the disease to the lungs. Ely's Pineola Balsam is strongly recommended in cases of asthma. Twenty-five cents is the price. Tell the neighbors about it.

THE SUPERSTITIONS.

MOST PERSONS CHERISH A SECRET BELIEF IN SOME OMEN.

There Are Not Many Who Will Admit It, but Probably All Men Are to Some Extent Believers In Signs, Though They Fail In a Majority of Cases.

Every human being has his pet superstition. It came to him almost in the cradle and has remained with him, by a strange pertinacity, all his life. Man is too proud to admit a governing influence which has no real foundation and must fall to pieces when its stability is tested, but no matter how silly a superstition may be, once imbedded in memory by a single instance when it came true, all its signal failures will generally fail to loosen its grip upon the human being who has been taught it in childhood. A pet superstition will lose not a jot of its influence should it fail every time in a hundred, provided it proves true in one instance only. This fact shows how men are joined to their superstitious idols.

"Sing before breakfast, cry before night," is the most ridiculous of all old bogies and the most destructive of mirth, laughter and happiness. It is not difficult to prove its fallacy. Let every man, woman and child stand up against it, sing, howl, if they cannot give forth melodious sounds, laugh merrily and rejoice at the coming of day, like the birds, whose first thought upon waking on the appearance of the first streak of dawn is to sing happily with pure joy for the return of another day. Let each be as happy as the birds and make everybody else happy, and thus will this detestible superstition retire to the gloom of its inception and be heard of no more.

There is an old superstition that the left limbs should always be dressed first, but not completely at one time. Suppose that the man who manifests his indignation at the assertion that he is superstitious commences, cautiously, as it were, without letting himself know that he is being watched, with the first garment he puts on in the morning and learn what is the result. How surprised he will be to know, perhaps for the first time, that his left arm goes into his shirt first, his left leg in his trousers first and his left sock on his left foot first, to say nothing of continuing the observation as far as the shoe. There are men who will change a garment which has been put on unconsciously inside out, but there are many men who will not, for their lives, risk the old superstition concerning such an act. Kings have not dared it.

Where is the man or boy who, saving only in a spirit of bravado, will knowingly walk under a ladder? Even if done in a spirit of defiance of the old bogie, how expectantly and sometimes tremblingly he awaits the coming of the penalty! Try it, man, and if the penalty of sorrow or loss, disappointment or accident, does not result before the day has swept by you will not tell of it. If it comes to you, the rule will be followed, and you will never cease telling of it, this rare occurrence.

When a man returns to the house after once starting out, having perhaps forgotten to kiss his wife, or something less important, his natural inclination, without special prompting, is to sit down before starting again. It is said to be bad luck to omit this.

Even death may result if a human being should raise an open umbrella over his head within doors, it is said. Umbrella makers have been known to observe this religiously.

People who live in the country must be careful not to have around their homes a white nosed cow, for should the window be open and this cow with the white proboscis reach it over the window sill in search of information or something daintv there will be a death in the family before long. So says the old saw.

Why must we give a penny for any sharp instrument presented by a friend? Why do we seek a four leaved clover, and why must we pick up a dirty horseshoe from the street whenever we see it there? Why do men nail the horseshoe over their doors and ends down, too, invariably, when the original superstition, of which they seem to be in ignorance, asserts that it should be nailed up the other way, so as to catch within its embrace the luck which descends?

There is no longer any use of talking about the old bogie concerning one of 13 sitting at table dying within a year after the feast, for the Thirteen club exploded that foolish old saw by sitting thus month in and month out many years, many tables with 13 at each, and all lived out the dangerous year and more years added, but there are still living men who will not undertake a journey on a Friday, although, after coming to sum the matter up, multitudes of men have discovered that Friday, of all days in the week, is the most fortunate day for everything. And it is rarely, now, that a criminal is executed on Friday in any part of the world, thanks to that same Thirteen club, who laugh at superstition, knife and fork in hand. Yet there is not one of them who has not his pet superstition, either consciously or otherwise. The biggest man in the club carries a horse chestnut in his pocket to ward off rheumatism, and another is a spiritualist. They all put on the left sock first, and few of them dare sing before breakfast. But they are deserving of great praise for what they have done and must not weary in well doing.

When a valuable vase in the Tuileries fell to the floor and was shattered a short time before the great battle of Waterloo, Josephine prophesied disaster would follow—and it did. Napoleon met his fate there, but his "Book of Fate" never told him defeat was near and disaster hovering over him. But this wasn't the first vase broken by many in the Tuileries. What about the others and the old omen?—New York Times.

Blaine's Nomination.

The announcement of Blaine's nomination unleashed the latent insanity of 10,000 people within the hall. Hats were thrown high in air, umbrellas whirled around the state shields torn down and borne proudly upon filial breasts. The crowd outside caught the contagion and soon a shrill chorus of tug whistles could be heard from the Chicago river. The climax was reached when some one brought and laid upon the chairman's desk a floral helmet, with snowy plume of finest imported horsehair. The noise redoubled, men took off their coats and waved them, women laughed, or cried or fainted, impartially. —"The Plumed Knight and His Joust," by President E. Benjamin Andrews, in Scribner's.

FINNEGAN'S CRAZY MULE.

He Had Speed and a Habit of Not Turning Out For Hacks.

"Did you ever hear of Finnegan's mule?" queried Charles Mann, doorkeeper of the press gallery of the house of representatives, to a group of horsemen. "He was probably the greatest mule ever foaled. He could trot a mile in 2:40 if you could control him, but there was the rub. He unquestionably carried, on the dam's side, race horse blood. When I innocently purchased him, about ten years ago, I knew nothing of his past record. The truth is, my father wanted a mule to work in a treadmill, and I purchased him at an auction sale.

"One day I wanted to go to the Pimlico races in company with a friend of mine, and as no horse was at hand we patched up an old harness, borrowed an old, ramshackle gig and started for the track. The mule drove quietly enough and seemed entirely devoid of guile. When we drove up to the Pimlico gates, we found a line of hacks in front of us. The driver of one of the rear hacks happened to look back as we drove up, and after making a careful inspection of the mule suddenly shouted to his companions in front of him in a loud voice, 'Say, boys, here's Finnegan's mule!' Then began the greatest stampede you ever saw of hacks. Why, they fairly fell over one another in getting away.

"Subsequently I ascertained the cause of the stampede. It appears that the mule was well known in certain quarters in Baltimore and was known as Finnegan's crazy mule. He had a habit, when owned by Finnegan, of jumping on any vehicle in front of him and destroying the same. No one had been able to hold him when excited by racing him on the road or track, so that for driving or racing purposes he had, in other hands, become practically worthless. When I learned his history, I put a rubber bit on him instead of the cruel bits with which he had formerly been driven, and which lacerated his mouth to such an extent as to make him uncontrollable. When I got him in shape, I matched him against some of the fastest trotters in Baltimore.

"If he felt just right and did not get mad, it took a good trotter to beat him a mile. For some reason or other, however, he would not repeat heats. One mile was as much as he would stand, for when he was brought out for the second heat he would invariably bolt the track, and no man was ever found strong enough to control him when in one of his crazy fits. Myself and friends won a pot of money with him in single heats. He had as pretty a trotting action as any one cared to see, splendid knee action, and how fast he could put 'em in when he wanted to!

"His reputation extended to the surrounding country, and I sold him to some sporting parties in Norfolk for $500. He subsequently won some races in fast time for a mule and certainly was a wonder. He was the only fast trotting mule that we have any history of."—Washington News.

A NOVELIST'S BLUNDER.

Forgot He Had Killed Off a Character and Had to Resuscitate Him.

A great master of the art of throwing off stories by daily installments was Ponson du Terrail. When he was at the height of his vogue, he kept three running at the same time in different papers. His fertile imagination was never at a loss, but his memory frequently was. He was apt to forget today what he did with a hero or heroine yesterday. To help his memory he at first noted down briefly in copy books what happened to his men and women, but finding that often he could not read his own writing, he invented a new system. He procured little leaden figures on which he gummed the names of his characters as they were born. Supposing there were three stories running, there were three sets of figures in different drawers. When a character was settled off, the little man or woman in lead was taken away from its companions and laid aside.

One day when Ponson du Terrail was all behind in his work, he set himself to his task without examining the slain. His bad memory led him into a terrible blunder. He had forgotten that he had killed Rocambole—the still famous Rocambole—in the previous feuilleton, and, to the great surprise of the reader, he made him talk again as if nothing out of the common had befallen him. This resuscitation of Rocambole is one of the most curious things in the history of the romans feuilleton.—Boston Transcript.

Stars.

The modern astronomical principle on which stars are classified—namely, the resemblance and difference between their spectra—and the revelations characterizing this remarkable phenomenon, have led to various attempts to indicate the stage of advancement attained by each particular orb in its life's history or development. Remarking upon this a recent writer cites Dr. Scheiner as putting, in his late work on stellar spectroscopy, those stars whose spectra contain the bright lines of helium and hydrogen in the first subdivision of his first class in evolution, Beta Lyræ and Gamma Cassiopæ being two such stars. He regards them as having atmospheres composed of those gases, enormously extensive as compared with those of other stars and possibly hotter than the gaseous envelopes of their older companions. On the basis of this theory the query is considered pertinent as to how long it may be since our world was in the condition of Beta Lyræ, whether any helium now floats in our outer atmosphere, how that particular portion which is now embedded in the earth's crust got there, and other similar questions.—New York Sun.

Soup and Dyspepsia.

Frenchmen, who, as is well known, are particularly fond of soup, are dismayed to find a popular writer, M. Furetieres, declaring that that food or beverage is the cause of all the ills that dyspeptic nature is heir to. According to him, the practice of beginning dinner with soup causes a distension of the stomach that is fatal to the process of digesting the solids which follow. Moreover, as if this were not bad enough, the same writer declares that there is little or no nourishment in it, and that as it is usually eaten very hot, it injures the enamel of the teeth.—London News.

which give plenty of light (made in four sizes,) are as easy to light as gas, easy to wick, wick does not have to be "trimmed," chimneys are not "smoked" or broken by the flame, perfectly simple and safe.

The NEW IDEAS (our patents) used exclusively in "The Miller" make it the best and so the cheapest lamp made. If by accident any part is broken it can be replaced, so there is practically no wear out to a "Miller" Lamp.

We make more than a thousand varieties—all styles—in BEAUTIFUL and Staple designs suited to light House, Club, Store, Factory, Church, &c., &c. If your dealer will not supply genuine "Miller" Lamps come to our store.

FOR GIFTS nothing more beautiful or useful than a "Miller" Lamp, or an elegant Onyx and Brass Table.

scrofula

Any doctor will tell you that Professor Hare, of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, is one of the highest authorities in the world on the action of drugs. In his last work, speaking of the treatment of scrofula, he says:

"It is hardly necessary to state that cod-liver oil is the best remedy of all. The oil should be given in emulsion, so prepared as to be palatable."

He also says that the hypophosphites should be combined with the oil.

Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil, with hypophosphites, is precisely such a preparation.

Madness In His Method.

By FLORENCE L. GUERTIN.

[Copyright, 1895, by the Author.]

But she told the boy that there was no answer, and, signing the book, watched him depart, as he wondered what made the young lady's cheeks so red. There was no mistaking the fact that now she was an object of much more interest to the occupants of the car than the books and magazines they held. With one accord her traveling companions glanced curiously at her, and the young man with the checked clothes, who had stolen furtive glances before, now stared at her quite boldly, making her cheeks burn as if all the blood in her body had settled there. She thought her anger at Courtright had long since reached the boiling point, but it now bubbled over and effervesced. How dared he humiliate her so? She would give anything to escape those awful looks. Even the porter and the conductor were eying her suspiciously, conversing with heads together at one end of the car, she felt sure, about her. And when the latter moved toward her and stopped at her chair she almost thought he had come to request her to leave, and so he had, but merely to the car in front, as she had taken a seat in the wrong one. She welcomed gladly any escape, and he helped to move her things. She glanced at the violets on the window sill, hesitating about taking them. It was too bad to leave them there to fade, she told herself, and snatching them up hastily she followed the conductor.

She breathed a long sigh of relief when she was re-established in the preceding car, with her back to the "fresh" youth and his inquisitive neighbors.

When the train reached Hartford, Constance watched the door with anxious eyes, fearing to be confronted by a fourth telegraphic emissary, but was spared any further ordeal. The time from now on dragged wearily and was spent in ringing the changes on the proceedings of the morning and in bitter arraignment of Courtright for daring to kiss her, and for his inconsiderateness in sending her the telegrams. As she stepped off the train in Boston she felt that it had been the most uncomfortable journey she had ever taken, and that her visit in Boston was not commencing under the most auspicious of circumstances.

But after a busy week of rushing from one thing to another—recitals, lectures, teas and symphonies, mornings with Browning and afternoons with Ibsen, mental science, Darwinian and other clubs, with now and then a frivolous dance thrown in—she found, to her surprise, that Courtright still remained uppermost in her thoughts. Though his conduct yet awoke indignation, she was able to review it more calmly, and at length caught herself drawing comparisons between him and the men she now met, with the credit in his favor. She realized that he was a man of daring—one who would make his mark in the world by bold strokes—and was surprised to find how closely associated he was as well with the little things of her life. Her very umbrella suggested him as she recalled the morning they had chanced to meet on Broadway, when Courtright was up town buying a wedding present for some one and had turned to walk with her. They were caught in the rain that soon fell, and he had rushed her into Gorham's for shelter and had insisted on her choosing a pretty umbrella from the "affluence of selection" offered them, and she recalled how they had gone home together under it, in preference to taking a cab. It had been such fun, and she sighed to think it was all over. Then she went back to that last morning and found that out of the chaos of resentment that had then wrought such tumult in her soul one thing only now seemed to stand out clearly—Courtright loved her, and she had refused him, putting an end to all companionship whatever. She thought of the time when she would return home and would not see him, except to meet him occasionally at the big affairs to which they would both be invited. She thought of the walks and drives and box parties that would continue, but at which he would be missing, and was surprised to find how unattractive they appeared. Other men would be ready to step into the breach, but could they fill his place, she asked herself. Whom did she know as bright and amusing as he, or as thoughtful and kind, or even as good looking? she added, after exhausting all his other attributes. The idea of putting him out of her life entirely was so distasteful to her she resolved to think no more about it—a little way she had with things she considered unpleasant, and which proved that she was, in her fashion, something of a philosopher.

* * * * * *

Two weeks after Miss Schuyler's arrival in Boston Mrs. Mortimer Stanton gave one of her famous dinners. When all were established in their places, she glanced around the mahogany board at her guests and the perfect appointments, drew a little sigh, breathing content, and said that "it was well." She eyed Constance critically, affirming she had never seen her look better, and admiring again that proud little poise of head, more noticeable now that the curves of her neck and shoulders could be seen. Young Searles, who sat on her right, and between whom and Constance Mrs Stanton hoped to make a match, said that he had never seen a head so well set, and that the poise was "birdlike" and made no secret of his admiration of it, and, although Miss Schuyler had accepted and found rather pleasant his devotion on her previous visit and knew that the Searles' ancient family tree and the golden apples that hung from it were hers if she chose to but reach forth her hand for them, she felt a little wearied now by his constant chatter and turned to the man on her left, who was new material and, she hoped, more interesting. Since those repentant telegrams she had received no word from Courtright. To be sure, he did not know her address, but he might easily have obtained that, she said, of her father or mother if he had really cared for it, and she almost regretted not having sent him some little reply.

The enlivening hum of conversation around the table was broken by Mr. Stanton, who glanced across at his young guest and said:

"By the way, Constance, a rather mysterious episode occurred in the office today that concerned you." The laughter and talk almost ceased.

"Some one called me up on the telephone and said, 'Is this Mr. Mortimer Stanton of —— Beacon street?' 'Yes,' I answered. 'Good,' he said. 'Is Miss Schuyler visiting you?'" In the silence now the soft tread of the servants moving around the table was the only sound.

"I asked him what he wished of you, but he said, 'Oh, nothing—merely a package I have been commissioned to have delivered to her, and I wanted to make sure of her address!' He was going to shut me off, but I told him to hold on a minute and tell me who he was. Then he said his identity didn't make the slightest difference, as he was simply acting for another party."

Miss Schuyler's heart gave a bound, but she calmly reached for an olive.

"I pressed him still further," Mr. Stanton went on, "and he replied, a little impatiently, that it wasn't of the least importance, but that he was from the treasury department."

Every one looked at Miss Schuyler to see if she could solve the riddle, but she laughed and said that it was probably a joke. Young Searles suggested that

"No—I didn't, but—I will."

"perhaps the package was bank notes," and some one else asked if she "couldn't include them all in her 'pull' in the treasury department?" But in her heart she felt sure that Courtright was the "other party," and that, with the aid of a friend in Boston, he was hunting her out. The package, she thought, might be bonbons or some conciliatory token, and she felt that in a few days she would hear from him, and the thought caused the dimples to break around her mouth and young Searles' conversation even to seem not so exhaustingly insipid.

She had wavered long between her strong inclination to forgive Courtright and the very just cause she felt she had to be angry with him. But she knew now what she should do.

The next day, when Mr. Stanton's solemn faced "inside man" knocked on her door and silently presented a salver with a box upon it, she knew that her heart had told her truly. The box contained clusters of great double purple and white violets and a note, with the inscription in Courtright's masculine hand. She tore the envelope open, letting it drop to the floor, while she read the contents almost breathlessly. He said that as she had not answered the telegram ("sent in serial form to see if he could not amuse her and take away from the seriousness of the situation"), nor written him even one line to say she forgave him, he supposed that she was still annoyed, and when he thought why he blushed with shame at what he had done and could say nothing in justification unless it was that their conversation in the brougham had made him not quite himself. And he sent her the violets, knowing she loved them, and hoped that they, in their sweetness, would plead for him better than he could for himself.

Miss Schuyler read the note through, then read it again, going over it as she used to a difficult page of her psychology in her schoolgirl days, until she could almost have repeated it backward. She put the flowers in a cut glass bowl and set it among the silver things on her dressing table. Then she went to find Mrs. Stanton, humming a snatch from the opera the Bostonians were singing, and told her that she really could not remain any longer than till Saturday.

* * * * * *

The Van Houghtons gave a large reception in New York a few days after Miss Schuyler's return, with "Dancing after 11" on the cards. Constance attended with her mother and held quite a little court of people who said they were more than glad to see her at home again and who asked the usual sarcastic questions about the Boston "savants." She chatted with them charmingly, listening all the while to the names announced at the door and glancing occasionally in that direction. But midnight came, and Courtright had not appeared. She took an arm that was offered her and moved slowly toward the ballroom, stopping in a small conservatory, for the moment vacant, while her escort went to bring her an ice. Her throat was parched, and she confessed to herself that the evening had not been a success. Then the buried her face in a cool bowl of roses standing near, half wishing that she were one of them. As she stooped there some one moved swiftly across the floor and a dark head almost touched hers on the other side, while a repentant voice inquired, "Did you give my love to Maria?"

Lifting her head, Constance saw Courtright standing before her, looking at her with twinkling eyes. Their expression was irresistible. She struggled with herself but a moment. Then she threw back her head and laughed as she had done when he first saw her in Colorado. When she stretched out her hand, it was to put it in his, as she replied, "No—I didn't, but—I will."

THE END.

Breton Superstition.

Although nominally converted to Christianity in the same century as the Irish, the Sein islanders continued many of the practices of Druidism down to quite modern times. In the seventeenth century, when Pere Maunoir undertook their reconversion, the paganism of the old Celtic world was still strong upon this rock. It was after his mission that the church was built. Even now there is a current of Druidism that runs side by side or mingles with the fervent Christianity of the people. They imagine that they hear their dead speaking to them by the voices of the waves, and the fancied messages that they thus receive from disembodied spirits tinge their interpretation of the doctrine of the communion of souls sanctioned by their missionaries with a superstitious mysticism that is only tolerated by the Roman Catholic clergy, because any violent attempt to correct it might do more harm than good.

This habit of living with the dead and looking for signs from them is to be especially observed among the women, who fall so under the sway of it that most of the time that many of them spend in prayer is in the cemetery, not in the church. The men attach great importance to birds as omens of weather. There is a beautiful sea bird with black and white plumage and an orange colored beak, shaped much like a parrot's, which in their belief always brings fine weather. The notion is probably warranted by the bird's habits, but the name which they give it, Doueic, "little god," is a distinct legacy of paganism.—Temple Bar.

Influence of Music.

In the investigation of the influence of music on man and animals Professor Tarchanoff of St. Petersburg used the ergograph of Mosso and found that, if the fingers were completely fatigued, music had the power of making the fatigue disappear. It appeared that music of a sad and lugubrious character had the opposite effect and could check or inhibit the contractions. The author is inclined to suppose that the voluntary muscles, being furnished with excitomotor and depressant fibers, act in reference to the music similarly to the heart—that is, joyful music resounds along the excitomotor fibers and sad music along the depressant or inhibitory fibers.

Experiments on dogs showed that music was capable of increasing the elimination of carbonic acid by 16.7 per cent, and of increasing the consumption of oxygen by 20.1 per cent. It was also found that music increases the functional activity of the skin. The author claims as the result of his experiments that music may fairly be regarded as a serious therapeutic agent, and that it exercises a genuine and considerable influence over the functions of the body.—Popular Science Monthly.

Evil Enough.

There is evil enough in man, God knows! But it is not the mission of every young man and woman to detail and report it all. Keep the atmosphere as pure as possible and fragrant with gentleness and charity.—Dr. John Hall.

SOMETHING HEATS US

Our Blood is Fuel as Well as Nourishment for Our Body.

How It Keeps Us Warm.

The Healthier Our Kidneys, the Purer Our Blood; the Purer It is, the Better.

Some Striking Medical Facts.

Warmth and Health, Colds and Sickness, Cold in the Kidneys and What It May Lead To.

The Way to Be Warm and Healthy.

Somebody has said that taking cold is the cause of half our diseases.

It is probably true.

What is cold?

It is a fever and inflamation.

It attacks unhealthy parts of the body. Unhealthy because not properly nourished by the blood.

Not properly nourished because the blood is not properly filtered.

Here we have the whole thing in a nutshell. If our kidneys were perfectly well we would hardly ever catch cold.

Our blood heats us.

It keeps us fat, and warm, and strong, and hearty.

If it dosen't, it is only because our kidneys prevent it.

They're not filtering as they ought to be.

What is filtering?

It is taking out the poison in the blood: the uric acid. the waste matter, the stuff that makes the blood poison us instead of nourishing us.

This, the kidney, are there to do.

People with thin, pale sallow faces and blotched complexions, people who are nervous and headachy, rheumatic, neuralgic, anæmic. These are the people who seem to catch cold if a breath of wind blows over them.

They are not well nourished.

Their blood is not filtered.

They need Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills. They need them because their kidneys need curing, to make them filter the blood.

This filtering of the blood is one of the most wonderful facts of our body.

Who would ever suppose that you had a filter inside you?

But everybody knows it now, thanks to the discoveries of modern medicine.

And, thanks to the discoveries of Dr. Hobb, everybody knows how to cure these filters when they are sick.

A few doses of Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will relieve. A few boxes will cure.

Some people are always taking cold in their kidneys, just as others are getting coughs and sore throats.

It is because they are weaker there.

Warmth is healthy; chills are dangerous. Cold is only healthy when it makes us warm afterwards.

Cold in the kidneys may bring on many dangerous diseases.

It should be stopped at once with Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

The best thing to do with a cold is to prevent it, and this you can do by keeping well fed and well clothed, by not overworking, by seeing that your kidneys filter your blood.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will aid you in this. They will keep your kidneys in health, and cure them if they are sick. They will do this when no other medicine will cure you or relieve you.

By filtering your blood they will keep you warm and healthy and cure such disorders as Bright's disease, rheumatism, gout, anæmia, chlorosis, neuralgia, nervousness, dizziness, hysteria, etc.

Sold by all druggists or mailed prepaid for 50 cents a box.

Write for valuable free medical pamphlet about the kidneys: "A Filter for Your Blood." Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago or San Francisco.

Annual Meeting of the Brotherhood.

The annual meeting of Holy Cross Brotherhood was held last evening in their rooms adjoining the church. Logan Murphy; Vice President, Harry Bartling; Secretary, Clarence L. Murphy; Treasurer, Charles C. Western.

Mrs. Fay for a City Missionary.

There is a strong probability that Mrs. Nora Fay will be engaged as missionary for this city and that a home will be provided for her here. Mrs. Fay is in one of the Deaconesses Homes in New York. and is one of the most earnest and successful workers in the metropolis. She is well known in this city and her engagement for the position of city missionary would please a large number of church workers.

Those Who Work Among the Poor.

Captain March, assisted by Miss Van Norden, both of New York city, will hold a very special consecration meeting at the Salvation Army Hall next Tuesday night at eight o'clock. Mr. Harris, of Orange, Chief Secretary of the Auxiliary League, will also be present and tell some interesting facts about the work. A general invitation is extended to all to attend this meeting. Captain March was the officer in charge of the Plainfield Corps for almost a year. For the past six months she has been at No. 9, Bowery Corps, New York. Miss Van-Norden, the banker's daughter, has recently returned from Europe, and is going to tell how the Army is progressing there.

Brisk Weather Makes a Frisky Horse.

The change in the atmosphere was too much for Woolston & Buckle's horse this morning and he thought he would take some exercise. Accordingly he started from Fairview avenue, passed through Westervelt avenue to Front street, down the latter street to Somerset, where he was caught by Richard Warneck in front of C. Frank French's feed store. The horse and wagon were not damaged in the least. Mr. Warneck returned the rig to the owners and received their hearty thanks.

New Glass in the Postoffice.

The large plate glass in the front window of the postoffice, which was cracked, was taken down yesterday by the representatives of the insurance company in which it was insured and a new one put in. The question of who is to pay for the lettering on the broken pane of glass, is still a matter of dispute.

FREEHILL'S TRIAL CLOSED.

The Case Given to the Jury Today, Who Are Still Out.

The trial of Frank Freehill in Elizabeth, charged with the murder of Alfred H. Jewell in Rahway last March, was finished last evening, except the summing up of counsel for each side, which was done today.

The aged father of the prisoner was the last witness called by the defense. He testified that he fought in the Union Army in the first battle of the war and belonged to the Fourth New York Regiment. Also that he was now in a soldiers' home in Virginia, had a son in the United States Navy, a daughter who lived in Morris county, and that he had not seen his son, the prisoner, in six years.

The counsel for the defense then informed the Court that this was their case and that they would not put Freehill on the witness stand. By this move they shut out from the hearing of the jury all the evidence the State had been at so much trouble to get regarding the previous character of the prisoner.

THE NAUGHTY WIND.

It Steals Hats and Does Considerable Damage on Park Avenue.

The weather bureau told the truth yesterday when it said that a cold wave was coming, but it said nothing of the hurricane that struck Plainfield last evening at about eight o'clock. There was a scurrying for hats among the evening pedestrians, while everything else that could seemed to take wings and fly away. Park avenue seemed to get more than its share. The wind, indignant that its approach had not been heralded by the weather bureau, took out its revenge on the weather signal flags and snapped the rope which held them aloft on Shaw's building. Collier's showcase, which stood in front of his store, was a tempting prey, and in a short time it was food for the storm. J. H. Tier's large banner which hangs in front of his store and is valued at $35, was torn into shreds by the fierce blasts.

BIG CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT.

Prominent Members From All Over the State Say They Are Glad Plainfield Got the Convention—Paterson '97.

If the great, growing and influential Christian Endeavor Society is anything, it is everything that the name implies, and more too, as everyone who was present at the First Baptist church last evening can testify.

A more fitting and proper event could scarcely have been arranged than the rally of the delegates who attended the State Convention held in Atlantic City last month, and the enthusiasm there obtained was evidence to the fullest extent.

Paterson may have beeu sorry that she did not get the Convention for '96, but it's safe to say that she is more than pleased now that Plainfield secured the coveted prize. A place better adapted for the rally could not have been found. The prevailing colors were green and white and the effect was very pleasing. In the centre of the large room tables were arranged in such a manner as to form the all important letters "C. E." The festive board was decked in white, signifying purity, while at convenient intevals large banquet lamps, daintly entwined with smilax and wax leaves, shed their soft rays on all beneath them.

A pleasing arrangement of green streamers around the room added very much to the scene, while large displays of chryanthemums at various points gave the desired effect, one of beauty. In one corner the lettters "C. E." attracted considerable attention.

At seven o'clock the home delegates, with those as guests from other places in the State, sat down and enjoyed a genuine Christian Endeavor supper, which only the fair ones of the society can provide.

After the inner-man was supplied the room was cleared and President E. E. Anthony, whose geniality extends through many counties, made the announcement that the State President, Dr. French, had sent a telegram stating that unavoidably he was detained at home and could not be present.

Dr. Brett, of Jersey City, who is Vice-President, was present and he was introduced. Among other things he said: The task of filling Dr. French's shoes on this occasion is preponderous and almost a hardship, but I am glad to be with you. We are here to talk about Plainfield for '96 and tonight we expect to launch that convention.

The Atlantic City convention was grand, but it must be surpassed by the one in '96. We will then go one better—Paterson in '97. Our motto must be "Advance Endeavorers." Let juniors advance to seniors and seniors advance till the hair is gray and we are placed on the honary list. This gathering is not simply to look forward for a year, but to plan for the winter campaign. One hundred souls will pass away before we meet in convention again, and "Now is the accepted time." I greet you all and wish you Godspeed.

Mr. Anthony then stated that the meeting was first, a reunion of delegates, and secondly, to plan for winter work, and hoped that all Christian Endeavorers and Epworth Leagues would follow the meek and lowly Jesus. Thirdly, that all might become better acquainted and be sociable. He then called on Dr. C. R. Barnes, who is chairman of the Minister Committee on Young People. He spoke in part as follows:

"I can't talk much about conventions, for I don't like them. I would rather get outside and look on. The young people in our city said they would like to go to work, so when Mr. Anthony appeared at our minister,s meeting and stated the case, Dr. Richards, Dr. Yerkes and myself were appointed a committee to look after the matter. I understand that you have planned to to place yourself at the disposal of the ministers. I read a paper at the minister's meeting which stated there was a lack of evangelistic spirit in our churches. One of the ministers denied it, and I told him it might not be so from his standpoint, but it certainly was from a Methodist point of view. On Sunday morning our Christian people sleep and don't get to church. The sinners, they go to the North Avenue station and buy the newspaper. In the evening the sinners attend church principally. Do you go to church in the evening? I don't mean to meet your girl, but for the good you will get. Pleasant afternoons during the summer you see Christians sitting on their front porch smoking a cigar or reading a newspaper. I never knew a strong church who had poor Sunday evening congregations. The weekly prayer meetings is the steam engine of the church. Show me a church without a prayer meeting and I will show you club.

"Let the Kirmess go. Don't talk about it now. Weren't the dances lovely? Mayby they were. I don't know. You should be as enthusiastic as they were over the man who danced the clog on marble. Let the people talk revival and work for it."

Rev. Mr. Sullivan, of Paterson, was the next speaker and his remarks were substantially as follows: A lady just inquired of a friend who I was. The reply was that I was the under dog in the recent fight. Plainfield was a whole team and Paterson was the dog under the wagon. It's nice to be thrashed and then to be treated so well. Every other person at Atlantic City was a Plainfielder. One night I was returning late to my stopping place when I saw a party of three. One was a lady member of the executive committee and on each side of her was a Plainfielder. All I heard was what will Paterson do? We lost the convention but not everything. The hand of God was in the affair. Paterson was not prepared to receive the convention this year. Next year she will be.

Rev. Mr. Davis, of Bound Brook, was the last speaker. In part he said: I wondered why Mr. Anthony wanted me to speak. The State officers, Plainfield and Paterson have been represented. There is such a thing as All Saints Day, and I suppose I am to represent All Saints. Somerset county is the garden of the State and Bound Brook is the hub. We did feel sorry for Paterson, and we love her yet. Figuratively speaking, we could embrace them all but I will turn that over to Mr. Anthony. It is not for Plainfield '96 and Paterson '97, but for Christ and his church.

After the hymn "Blest be the Tie" was sung the balance of the evening was devoted to sociability.

After the Rev. Mr. Davis read a letter from the man in charge of the life saving station at Atlantic City, which was very encouraging to those who attended a prayer meeting at that place last month.

Those who arranged the affair, had charge and served as waitress were as follows: Missees Ida Randolph, Lizzie Dunn, Emily Coriell, Laura Runyon, Carrie Miss Mehl, Morse, Miss Fish, Mrs. E. E. Anthony, Mrs. H. W. Marshall, Mrs. Wheaton Lowry, Mrs. J. H. Tier and Mrs. Gifford. Mrs. E. E. Anthony sat at the table in the centre of the "E" while at each end of the "C" were Mrs. Wheaton Lowry and Mrs. A. C. LeBoyteaux. They poured coffee. Tne waitresses were: Seventh-day Baptist: — Misses Lou Clawson, Lizzie Allis, Ernestine Smith; Trinity Reformed — Misses Alice Needham, Bertha Needham, Susie Woodland, Mary French; Congregational—Misses Winckler, Howe, Butler, Beekman; First Presbyterian —Misses Blair, Bittenbender, Petrie; Park Avenue Baptist — Misses Henrietta Cumming, Ellen Cumming, Mary Giles. Representatives were present from Paterson, Westfield, Dunellen, New Market, Bound Brook, Reading, Somerville, Newark and Jersey City.

FRIGHTS GALORE.

C. E. Hepburn Has an Exciting Cycling Trip to Somerville.

C. E. Hepburn, of Grove street, had an exciting experience Wednesday. He rode his wheel to Somerville and back and during the trip the excitement happened.

On his way to Somerville he frightened a pair of mules almost into a runaway and was nearly thrown from his wheel. When he returned he met a man near Bound Brook driving a team and leading a cow. His wheel frightened the cow so that she broke loose and jumped a fence. While the owner was after the cow his team was frightened and started to run away. Mr. Hepburn by this time was fully a quarter of a mile away, and hearing a strange sound turned around and saw the team coming down the road at full speed. He jumped from his wheel just in time to catch the team. He held them till the owner appeared with his cow and took charge. From that place to this city the trip was uneventful.

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhœa of long standing in six hours, with one small bottle of Chambertain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief. It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. R. Armstrong, Manager.

DISSATISFIED ONES UNITE.

THE CITIZENS' MOVEMENT TAKES A DEFINITE FORM.

New Nominees to Be Made for Nearly All City Offices—Johnson for Collector and Angleman for City Judge.

The prospects are today that the coming charter election will be as exciting as the one in which the "Big Six" were turned down several years ago. Although the Republican city convention last evening appeared to be a unanimous thing all through, yet the discontented faces of some of the prominent Republicans showed a tendency toward revolting. All through the past week there has been mutterings from both Republicans and Democrats and vague rumors of a Citizens' ticket and a wheelmen's party have floated around. But now since the Republicans have made their nominations the opposition has united and another ticket, to be called the Citizens' ticket, is to be placed in the field.

The contest for nomination for city judge has aroused considerable feeling in the ranks of the Republicans and here was one of the causes for the split. The Fourth ward has been George W. DeMeza's stronghold and he has been supported by others all over the city. But a number of the prominent men of the party prefer Winfield S. Angleman and he has been selected as the candidate for city judge on the Citizens' ticket. The wheelmen will not have much choice between the two, for no matter which one is judge he must obey the ordinances made by the council.

The new ticket is also to contain the name of John S. Johnson for tax collector instead of Elias H. Bird. Bird is at present a Councilman, but his term runs out this year, and he is known as one of the best men in his party. Johnson, however, has a large following who believe the present collector should remain in office.

The wheelmen's share of the citizen's ticket is to be in the choice of the councilmen at-large. The selection has not been definitely made but, at present, the general choice seems to be Joseph A. Haynes, S. P. T. Wilbur and Leonard Spangenburg. Mr. Haynes is a prominent wheelman, at one time captain of the Crescent Wheelmen. He is also Jersey Central agent at the North Avenue station. Mr. Wilbur is also a member of the Crescent Wheelmen, and was, at one time, a prominent Republican in the First ward. He then identified himself with the Democratic party during the time of the "Big Six," but then returned to his old friends. Mr. Spangenburg is a Democrat of the Second ward, he was one of the "Big Six" and prominent in advocating the street railway when it was first introduced.

The ward Councilmen will be endorsed except in the Second and Fourth wards. In the Second ward comes the greatest surprise of all. Here William H. Drayton will run against George H. Frost. Drayton is a Republican. Vincent L. Frazee, the present Councilman from the Fourth ward, will be put on the ticket against W. A. Westphal. Frazee's great run of two years ago promises that he will make things lively for his Republican adversary. Frazee is a Democrat. The other candidates on the Republican ticket will be endorsed.

The backers of the Citizens' ticket say that their ticket is in the interest of good government, and the wheelmen are hustling for less oppressive bicycle ordinances and better roads. The influential men which support the new ticket are drawn from the ranks of both Democrats and Republicans, and they are all hard at work pushing the new ticket.

A Daily Press reporter was assured by one of the leading men in the new party that the ticket would take definite shape this evening, and appear before the public in a short time.

Dinner at Scotch Plains.

Harry Honan and M. Honan, together with their associate-helpers on the sewer work, enjoyed a fine dinner at Emery's Hotel, Scotch Plains, last night. Those present from Plainfield were M. Terrill and Harry Werner.

Croup is a terror to young mothers. To post them concerning the first symptoms, and treatment is the object of this item. The first indication of croup is hoarseness. In a child who is subject to croup it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the rough cough has appeared it will prevent the attack. It has never been known to fail. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE SLATE WAS UNBROKEN.

CITY NOMINEES ARRANGED BEFORE THE CONVENTION WAS CALLED.

George DeMeza Gets the City Judgeship Nomination, While John Jonnson is Turned Down For Collectorship.

The Republican city convention was a remarkably short one last night, as it took only seventeen minutes to select their ticket.

The real work, however, was done between last Tuesday evening and last night and the wire-pulling did not cease until ex-Judge Codington called the meeting to order. The Republican Association rooms, in which the convention was held, began to fill long before eight o'clock and the delegates and their friends grouped themselves about the room and discussed the coming convention. The question of who will be the next City Collector was one of the most important. There were a number of candidates in the field, among whom were John S. Johnson, the present Collector, V. W. Nash, J. E. Mosher and Elias H. Bird. The Second ward's delegates were Johnson men, but Bird had the support of the First and Third wards, while during most of the contest the Fourth ward men remained on the fence, as it were. The City Judgeship has been the cause of considerable talk. George W. De Meza has been in the campaign from the first, and had the Fourth ward at his back. As the delegates from this ward equal in numbers any two of the other wards, he had a powerful friend. None of the other candidates could begin to think of getting all three of the other wards, so De Meza was nominated without much trouble.

The delegates were all present except M. S. Ackerman and J. P. Laire, of the Second ward, whose places were respectively filled by Howard Tracy and E. H. Ladd, Jr.

The meeting was called to order by ex Judge W. R. Codington, chairman of the city executive committee. John B. Dumont was unanimously chosen chairman and W. A. Westphal secretary. The secretary read the call and then it was decided by votes that the election officers should be appointed by the chairman. Chairman Dumont appointed the following: Judge, Geo. W. Rockfellow; inspector, John H. Tier, Jr.; clerk, W. W. Coriell.

The list of the delegates was then read and the nominating began.

The three members at large of the Common Council were the first to be selected. D. S. Dunavan, chairman of the First ward delegation, stated that his ward had no nomination to make. Stephen A. Ginna, chairman of the Second ward party, nominated John B. Dumont. Jacob Kirkner, as the Third ward chairman, nominated A. C. Stebbins, and Harold Serrell was nominated from the Fourth ward by Justice William Newcorn, chairman of that delegation. No other nominations were made and a motion was made by Mr. Newcorn and carried that the secretary cast a ballot for the three men named.

The city treasurer was a cinch for Alex. Titsworth, as he was nominated from all the wards except the First On motion of Mr. Ginna the secretary cast a ballot for him.

Elias H. Bird received the nomination for collector from the First and Third wards, while Mr. Ginna and Mr. Newcorn made no nominations for their respective wards. Mr. Newcorn moved that the ballot be cast by the secretary, which motion was carried.

The city judge was the next office for which a candidate was to be named. There was silence from the first three wards, and then Justice Newcorn, in a few well turned sentences, nominated George W. DeMeza as the Fourth ward's choice.

The secretary cast a ballot for him after a motion to that effect by Mr. Ginna was carried.

The First and Second Wards, respectively, nominated J. B. Coward and E. C. Mulford for the two commissioners of appeal. Mr. Mulford is one of the present incumbents. Mr. Dunavan moved that the secretary cast the usual ballot and the motion was carried. Charles F. Abbott was nominated by the Third ward delegation and was elected without opposition, his opponents having seen the futility of running against him. Mr. Ginna made the usual motion that the secretary cast the ballot, which motion was carried.

The two chosen freeholders were the last to be selected and John H. Tier, Sr., and J. Frank Hubbard, the choices respectively of the First and Third wards were chosen to succeed themselves, Mr. Ginna making the motion to have the secretary cast the ballot.

Mr. Kirkner then moved that the chairman of the meeting and the chairmen of the different delegations be given power to fill all vacancies should any occur, which motion was seconded and carried. The convention then adjourned.

The convention was a very quiet one as well as short. There was considerable applause, however, when the councilmen at large were nominated and when Mr. Abbott was selected as school trustee.

MUSIC TO HELP LITTLE ONES.

Appreciative Audience Attend the Children's Home Benefit Concert.

Over three hundred and fifty people gathered at the Casino last evening to hear the concert given there for the benefit of the Children's Home. The different numbers were of more than ordinary merit, and the audience showed its appreciation of them by their long and hearty applause. Several encores were given. Miss Annie P. Hardenberg was troubled with a severe cold and was unable to take any part except in the quartette.

The programme opened with an instrumental trio from "Barcarolle" by Miss Nellie Udelle, violinist, Phillip Egner, violoncellist, and Frank J. Smith, pianist. Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith then gave a recitation entitled "The Spanish Dancing Girl," which especially pleased her hearers. A tenor solo "Adieu Marie" was beautifully rendered by Elmer E. Runyon in his usual excellent manner, after which Phillip Egner showed his skill on the violoncello in "Simple Even" and "Caprice Hongrois."

"Ava Maria," written as a soprano solo, was next sung by Miss Emily M. Banta with violin obligato by Miss Nellie Udelle. Another amusing recitation by Mrs. Smith closed the first part. In this selection her imaginary knitting was especially good.

A violin solo, "Second Tantaisie Ballet," by Miss Udelle, opened the second part. "'Was April," a soprano solo by Miss Banta, followed and then Mrs. Smith recited another selection entitled "The Marriage of the Flowers." Charles Lewis' bass voice was appreciated in the solo "Toreador Hale," and after the applause for that had died away the regular quartette of the Crescent Avenue church choir, Miss Banta, Miss Hardenbergh, E. E. Runyon and Charles Lewis, sang "O, the Sad Moment of 'Parting" as a closing selection.

The concert was given by the choir of the Crescent Avenue church and their friends. Mrs. Charles Lewis and Frank J. Smith were the accompanists. The ushers were F. W. Walz, H. W. Beebe and W. E. Gilbert.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. A YOUNG GIRL ASSAULTED

GRABBED BY A MAN RIGHT IN THE HEART OF THE CITY.

She Screamed in Her Fright and the Strange Man Ran Away—The Police Notified But Have No Description of Him

When walking along Richmond street last evening shortly after half-past seven, Miss Agnes Boyd, of 843 Richmond street, was held up by an unknown man. She escaped before he had a chance to accomplish his apparent object of theft. Miss Boyd is a young girl about fifteen years of age, and her home is close to Watchung avenue. Last evening she wanted to see a friend residing on Fifth street and started off on a run. When about half way to the corner of Putnam avenue she heard footsteps behind her and stopped.

The next instant a hand grasped her by the shoulder. Supposing it to be her younger brother she looked around, but before she could see who it was another hand was clapped over her eyes and then placed over her mouth. She saw a fleshy man, rather short and with a sandy mustache. After struggling in the grasp of the stranger she, at last, forced his hand away from her mouth and screamed. The man released his hold and fled in the direction of Putnam avenue, while the badly frightened girl ran as fast as possible toward home where she startled her family with the intelligence that she had been held up.

The man is supposed to have been partially drunk as Miss Boyd smelt the fumes of whiskey on his breath. The police were notified by Mr. Boyd but with the slight description it will be hard to find the culprit.

MANSLAUGHTER IS THE VERDICT.

Freehill Will Get Off With a Term in State Prison.

Lawyer Craig A. Marsh, senior counsel for the defendant, Frank Freehill, in the Rahway murder case, began to sum up for his client at ten o'clock yesterday morning, and was still talking at 2:15 in the afternoon. The lawyer put up a masterly argument for the accused man, and the general impression was that a verdict of manslaughter, or, at the most, murder in the second degree, would be rendered.

Lawyer Marsh dwelt strongly on the fact that Freehill had committed no overt act when the Rahway police went in pursuit of him and that, as the officers wore no uniform or insignia to show they were police, the prisoner was not supposed to know them to be such. The lawyer claimed that Freehill, when he found himself hunted down by strange men, flourishing clubs or sticks, had a right to think his life was endangered and that his using the revolver was only in self-defence after he had warned them to fall back and not follow him.

The jury took the case at 4:30 yesterday afternoon and came into court this morning with a verdict of manslaughter. The maximum punishment for this crime is ten years. Freehill will be sentenced the first Wednesday in December. Craig A. Marsh, attorney for Freehill, was warmly congratulated on the outcome of the case.

LOST HIS OVERCOAT.

A Sewer Inspector Leaves the Garment Beside a Manhole.

Franklin P. Noble, a sewer inspector, lost an overcoat yestesday afternoon in a mest aggravating manner. A part of his duties is to inspect the outfall sewer, which necessitates his creeping through a large section on his hands and knees. Yesterday afternoon he had 3,200 feet of the outfall pipe to go through, and he left his overcoat and gloves beside the manhole into which he descended to commence his ttip. While he was on the journey through the pipe some individual came along the road and spied the garment. The individual either took it for safe keeping, fearing that some one had lost it, or else purloined it with the intention of appropriating it to their own use. Mr. Noble shivers with indignation at his experience.

—Leggett, the druggist, says he is selling large quantities of the witch hazel soap, some people buying ten and twelve pounds at a time. He sells it at ten cents a cake.

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE ARCH MURDERER

Turkey's Sultan Denounced at a New York Meeting.

Responsible for Innumerable Massacres and Outrages—His Letter to Salisbury Causes Only Laughter—Resolutions Calling for Determined Action.

New York, Nov. 22.—There was a large gathering of representative men and women of this city in Chickering hall last night at a mass meeting under the auspices of the Armenian Relief association for the purpose of making a formal protest against Turkish barbarities. Chairman Lowe presided. The meeting, he said, should make it plain to the authorities at Washington that the American people expected them to protect American interests and American citizens in Armenia. Mr. Low then read telegrams from Gov. Morton, Bishop Doane of Albany, Gov. Greenhalge of Massachusetts and others regretting their absence from the meeting, after which he introduced Dr. William H. Thomas.

Made the People of Turkey Laugh.

He said he could not imagine a broader grin than was spreading throughout Turkey than when they read the letters of the sultan to Lord Salisbury. That the Christians should believe this sultan who was responsible for innumerable atrocities and outrages, made the people laugh. The speaker here told of the massacres perpetrated by the Turks which, he said, were orignated in Constantinople. Mohammed had founded a religion of the sword which had never been sheathed. It was lawful according to the laws of Mohammed, anywhere in Turkey excepting under the guns of foreign warships, even at the present time, to shoot a Christian. It was a religious duty of the Moslems to embitter the life of the Christians. In concluding, the speaker said that his experience in Turkey thirty years ago had prepared him for the subsequent massacres. No other death no matter how horrible could compare with the death of a Mohammedan slaughter. The speaker urged the audience to give their sympathy in putting an end to the chronic national criminal, the Turkish government.

Prince of Robbers and Murderers.

Herout M. Kiretchjian was introduced. He made an eloquent and fervid address in which he graphically pictured the oppression of the Armenians, and the outrages to which they were subjected. He arraigned the European powers, which, he said, in substance, paid respect to that prince of robbers and murderers, the sultan of Turkey, from motives of policy. It was the duty of these powers to suppress the arch murderer; it was the duty of the church to see to it that the blot of Turkish atrocities was swept from the earth. America would not have finished her mission until every nation in every land was free, and out of the meeting should sweep over the continent of Europe the American condemnation of the apathy of European governments in the face of Turkish atrocities.

Resolutions Adopted.

The following resolutions were then adopted: Resolved, that we, citizens of New York, in a mass meeting assembled, solemnly declare: that in our opinion the sultan of Turkey has forfeited all right to rule over the Armenian people; that we respectfully urge our government to make every effort possible to induce the governments of Christendom to rouse themselves from their apathy and put an end to this intolerable state of affairs which threatens with extermination thousands and thousands of innocent fellow Christians; that we urge upon our government also to do everything in its power to preserve the fruits of American missionary toil; that we express our ardent sympathy with the unutterable sufferings of this persecuted race, and that we call upon the people of Christendom to insist that these unutterable sufferings shall cease.

LOSS, HALF A MILLION.

Five Hundred Lives Imperilled by a Fire in Chicago.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—A fire which caused a property loss of $500,000 and imperilled the lives of half a thousand persons, mostly young women, originated at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon on the third floor of Charles Emrich & Co.'s feather and down goods factory, 175-181 South Canal street. The conflagration was attended by scenes of intense excitement and a score of firemen narrowly escapod being killed by fire and falling walls. When the flames were raging most furiously, in spite of all the best efforts of the twenty-five engines and a small army of firemen, firebrands were carried by the wind to adjoining manufacturing buildings and it looked as if many more would have to go, but heroic efforts of the firemen confined the flames to a small area.

COMMISSION APPOINTED.

To Investigate Alleged Ill-Treatment of Negroes at a Navy Yard.

Washington, Nov. 22.—Secretary Herbert has appointed a court of inquiry, consisting of Commander Maynard, lieutenant-commander Richard Wainwright and lieutenant W. W. Kimball, with ensign W. J. Terhune recorder, "to inquire into allegations of maltreatment of certain members of the class of enlisted men under instruction in ordnance at the Washington navy yard by certain other members of the same class." The secretary's action is based on an outcropping of the color line among the ordnance apprentices at the yard, which resulted in alleged ill-treatment of the negro members. The court will meet at the Washington navy yard on Monday next.

HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER.

Reed Gave Whiskey to a Typhoid Patient, Causing Death.

Salem, Mass., Nov. 22.—In the district court yesterday, John Reed was charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Xavier Genest by admistering whiskey while Genest was suffering with typhoid fever and was held in $3,000 for the grand jury. Reed told the sick man that the doctors were no good and forced him to drink half a pint of whiskey. Genest became delirious and died later. Reed said that he had lived seven years with the Indians and knew their medicines, and he was also a seventh son. He was drunk when he administered the liquor, and explained that he was "smarter" to give medicine when he was drunk.

THE SULTAN'S ORDERS

Valis Must Maintain Peace and Protect Foreigners.

Failing in This They Will Be Held Personally Responsible—The Substance of Telegrams Sent to the Governors of Provinces — Bahri Pasha's Appointment.

Washington, Nov. 22.—The Turkish legation has received from the sublime porte the following telegram under yesterday's date: "All news about plots against his imperial majesty, the sultan, are absolutely and entirely false. I transmit you the substance of three telegrams that have been sent to the valis and the military commanders of those provinces where trouble lately took place and I beg of you to give them the widest publicity. They are addressed to the governors general of the vilayets of Trebizonde, Erzeroum, Bitlis, Van, Diarbekir, Manonretoul-Axize, Sivas, Adana and Alep, dated November 15, 1895:

Warning to the Valis.

"Although repeated instructions were given to the valis with a view of adopting in their vilayes all necessary measures for preventing all possible troubles and all shedding of blood, and of forbidding as well that one class of the population attack the other, or that acts contrary to justice should occur, such cases, however, continue to take place. One of the most important attributes of the valis being, according to the formal orders of his imperial majesty, the sultan, to secure public peace in the provinces they are warned that if, after the receipt of the present telegram, there should occur acts like fire, seditious movements, perturbations of public order, or shedding of blood, such an omission of duties cannot by any means be forgiven and would carry with it a grave and absolute responsibility.

To Protect Foreigners.

"Such responsibility falling also on the meutessarefs and calmacams, the valis must also put themselves in accord with the commanders for the adoption of the necessary disposition. The valis will principally look with the greatest care after the protection of the consulates and foreign subjects in order to place them out of any danger and to avoid any motive for conflict on their part. All guilty parties should be arrested and punished according to law. The valis will telegraph in plain words every twenty-four hours to the department of war, to the grand vezirat and to the imperial palace the situation of the vilayet."

Bahri Pasha's Appointment.

Dispatches from Constantinople represent that the political situation in Turkey is not as bright to-day as it was yesterday on account of the appointment to be military commander at Aleppo of Bahri Pasha, who was removed from the governorship of Van on the demand of the British ambassador. The bad impression which this has produced can hardly be exaggerated, for the ambassadors feel that it will be almost impossible to prevent him from pursuing the same tactics at Aleppo that he did at Van, in which case the Christians of the Aleppo district will suffer severely for their outbreaks against Turkish rule.

Warning Note from the Powers.

When the news of Bahri Pasha's appointment was confirmed, the representatives of the powers held a meeting and discussed the matter from all its standpoints. The result was that they joined in a note to the Turkish government saying that they cannot answer for the consequences which may ensue should the Armenians of Zeitun be massacred after their surrender, which the Armenian patriarch, at the instance of the representatives of the powers, is endeavoring to bring about in order to prevent further bloodshed.

Escort for Missionaries.

United States Minister Terrell, at the request of the American missionaries at Kharput, has prevailed upon the Turkish government to telegraph orders to the Turkish commander at Kharput to furnish the missionaries with an escort of troops to conduct them to the nearest point on the Black sea coast, possibly Trebizond, in order that they may embark for Constantinople. Mr. Terrell has also advised the missionaries in other disturbed districts to retire from their posts for a time, in order that their presence may not be made the excuse for further disorder. It is believed that this suggestion will be adopted at least in several cases.

Suffering and Famine.

So far as known, there has been no change in the attitude of the powers towards Turkey since an apparently sincere attempt at reform began, and, excepting the Bahri Pasha incident, there is no fresh trouble in sight. But although further rioting may be avoided, the approaching cold weather is certain to cause terrible suffering and famine among the thousands of homeless Armenians, and money, food and clothing for their sustenance will be urgently needed.

Concord of the Powers.

At the cabinet council of the French government, M. Berthelot, minister of foreign affairs, said that the agreement between the powers was revealing itself with the utmost clearness and persistency. In the Hungarian diet Premier Baron Banffy said that complete unanimity existed among the powers in regard to the maintenance of peace in Turkey and the protection of missionaries. He said that the Christian powers had pledged themselves to the preservation of peace, and the pledge would be kept at all hazards.

HER LETTER

TELLS A WOMAN'S STORY.

Written for Eyes of Other Women.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

There is inestimable pleasure in doing good to others, and joy in a grateful recognition of the act.

On the old York Road, Huntington Park, Philadelphia, dwells Miss M. Downs, whose portrait we give. She desires that her case may be stated as a means of benefiting others. She says: "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me of Kidney trouble, painful menstruations, and headaches. It is truly a wonderful medicine. I cannot describe my feelings before I took it. The pain in my back was dreadful, and during menstruations the agony I suffered nearly drove me wild; and then my head would ache for a week, and now this is all over, thanks to your good remedy. I trust my testimonial will lead others to take it and be cured. They can find it at any drug store. Our druggist says the demand for it is very large, it is helping so many sickly women."

HANNIGAN ACQUITTED

The Aged Father Robbed of His Joy by Death.

Passed Away Five Minutes Before the Jury Liberated His Son—Solomon Mann's Slayer Leaves Prison a Broken Man—Sad Home-Coming of a Sister's Avenger.

New York, Nov. 22.—David F. Hannigan was acquitted at 11.25 o'clock last night of the murder of Solomon H. Mann. The verdict was "Not guilty on the ground of insanity." The case was submitted to the jury at 5 o'clock in the evening, and after more than four hour's deliberation they came into court with a verdict releasing the slayer of the man who betrayed his sister. While the jury was still deliberating as to whether the law should take the life of David Hannigan another life passed away, five minutes before the verdict was announced in the courtroom.

Sad Home-Coming.

William Hannigan, the aged father of the young man who avenged his sister's ruin, died at his home while all the members of the family were in court awaiting the verdict which should either deprive them of or give back to them a son and brother. It was a sad home-coming of the son, for the father who stood so faithfully by his side, although feeble and near death's door, was not one of those who hailed David's return from the prison in which he has so long been confined. For weeks the poor old man has labored under a fearful strain while attending the son's trial. Twice he succumbed to the ordeal of hearing his son arraigned as a murderer of a human being. Last night, before he could have had his last hours made peaceful by hearing of his son's acquittal, he passed to a happier world.

His Last Words for Dave.

The last words that the old man uttered were a heartrending appeal to let him see his son before he died. He died, however, without even knowing that his son had been freed and would come home, only to find a new sorrow awaiting him. At 11:15, when the reporter reached the house, both women were hysterical, and begged him not to let Dave know, as it would kill him. Mrs. McGowan said that the last words her father uttered were in an appeal to see Dave before he died. The women's grief was so intense that they seemed perfectly oblivious to David's position, and did not seem to realize what was being said to them when the reporter told them that the jury was still out, and the impression seemed to prevail that David would be acquitted.

Permitted To Visit His Home.

When the jury entered the court the prisoner rose from his seat and leaning over his tiny little wife, who has so faithfully kept beside him, kissed her tenderly. The verdict was then announced and a mighty cheer went up in the court room, notwithstanding a previous stern warning from the judge. Hannigan broke down utterly. The Hannigans, except the prisoner, then hurriedly left the court room for the house of mourning. Justice Ingraham refused to discharge the prisoner, but after an eloquent appeal by Lawyer Brooke, and after being informed of the sad event at the Hannigan household, finally consented to permit Dave to visit his home accompanied by officers.

THE GOLD RESERVE.

Further Reduced by Withdrawals at New York City.

Washington, Nov. 22.—The treasury department is informed of the withdrawal of $500,000 in gold at New York for export to Europe. This reduces the treasury gold reserve to $86,304,557. Of this reserve about $32,000,000 is in gold coin, against which there are no gold certificates held. The gold coin holdings at New York, because of the recent heavy exports of gold, have become less than it is customary to have in the sub-treasury, and gold coin has been ordered shipped from the Philadelphia mint to replenish the depleted stock of gold coin on hand at New York. The Philadelphia mint is now at work on full time, and has been for several weeks past, in turning gold bullion into coin. The coinage this month at the mint will be unsually heavy.

SHE IS A PYROMANIAC.

Mrs. Munden, the Somerville Firebug, Sent to the Insane Asylum.

She was not arraigned in court but was examined by Drs. Dearborn and White in the police station. At the conclusion of the examination Judge Storey was informed that the women was insane in the particular of having a mania for setting fires. The physicians made out affidavits to that effect and as a consequence Judge Storey signed papers for her committment to the asylum. Mrs. Munden took her examination coolly.

KILLED IN COLD BLOOD

Women and Children Wantonly Murdered in Cuba.

Massacred by Retreating Spanish Troops Because of a Sneering Remark—The Leader May Be Court-Martialed and Sentenced to Death—Gomez Takes a Fort.

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 22.—The letter received by Col. Figueredo, the Cuban leader of this city, giving details of atrocities alleged to have been committed by Spaniards in Matanzas province, Cuba, is confirmed by another letter received by a prominent American sympathizer with the Cubans in their present struggle. The substance of these letters is as follows: "Col. Melino, who commands a Spanish regiment, recently encountered the advance guard of Gomez's army in Matanzas and was defeated. While soldiers under Melino were in retreat they met a group of about ten women and a dozen children near a little town called Cayopino.

Butchered Every One.

"As the soldiers passed one of the women made a sneering remark about the Spaniards. This so enraged them that they fell upon the women and children and butchered every one of them. The letter says that after shooting down their victims the Spaniards stabbed them with bayonets, inflicting the most horrible wounds.

Col. Melino Made No Report.

"One baby was killed at its mother's breast, and the bullet that passed through the infant also passed through the mother. Col. Melino made no report of the butchery, but it happened that two of the women murdered were wives of Spaniards engaged in the sawmill business in Matanzas.

May Be Sentenced to Death.

"When the husbands learned how their loved ones had been slaughtered, they wrote to Martinez de Campos, demanding that Col. Melino be punished. It is said that Campos has ordered that Melino be court-martialed. It is thought the butcherer will be sentenced to death, as the massacre is condemned as bitterly by Spaniards as by Cubans."

Skirmishes in Santiago de Cuba.

There have been several skirmishes in the province of Santiago de Cuba, during which the insurgents lost fifteen men killed, four wounded and one prisoner. The Spanish troops lost one killed and had thirteen wounded.

Gomez Takes a Fort.

Gen. Maximo Gomez has captured Fort Paleyo, on the river Zaza, in the province of Santa Clara. No details are given of the engagement.

Rebels Wreck a Train.

While a train conveying Gen. Suarez Valdez was nearing Santa Rita the insurgents fired a dynamite shell at it. Four wagons and the engine of the train wese destroyed. Two soldiers were seriously injured and twelve others were slightly wounded. The car in which the general was riding was not injured, and he went on horseback to Esperanza.

Insurgents Put to Flight.

The insurgents in addition to derailing the train blew up with dynamite the railroad bridge at Santa Rita. The rebels opened fire on the troops on the train and an engagement ensued. The insurgents were finally put to flight. Ten Spaniards were wounded.

REPORTED REBEL VICTORY.

Insurgents Capture the Cuban Leader of the Spaniards.

New York, Nov. 22.—According to information received at the Cuban revolutionists headquarters another battle was fought between the Spanish troops and Cuban insurgents on November 14. About 1,500 soldiers were in each army and the fight occurred in Manzanilla in the western part of Santiago district. Maj.-Gen. Gonzales Munoz commanded the Spanish troops, while Gen. Radi led the revolutionists. It is not known how many were killed. The insurgents captured Gen. Munoz, who is himself a Cuban by birth, though he commanded the Spanish troops. The Cubans appear to have been victorious, for they got possession of 500 rifles belonging to the enemy.

There is fear that Senator Voorhees will be doomed to defeat in his candidacy for President of the Senate.

It was harmony in the Republican city convention last night with a vengeance. But the calm which characterized its proceedings is brewing a storm in the political sea which may wreck the voyage of a candidate or two, though it is doubtful if a Citizens' ticket will meet with sufficient support from Republicans to be successful, for it is from them that they must depend for any sort of a showing at the polls on election day. Some Republicans are unquestionably dissatisfied with their party's ticket, but that they will bolt it in sufficient numbers to jeopardize it is doubtful. There is plenty of time to cool off before the election.

Congratulations by mail and telegraph have poured in to C. A. Marsh for his brilliant victory in the Freehill alias Sloane murder trial. To save the life of a tramp who was seen by many witness to shoot down a police officer after firing three shots, while the tramp, as a fugitive from justice, was trying to escape arrest, having his pockets filled with a kit of burglar's tools, fuses and dynamite cartridges, may probably be regarded as a great professional triumph. No one can justly criticise Mr. Marsh for his successful effort to reduce the verdict to manslaughter, as he was assigned by the court, and it was his professional duty to make the best possible defense for the accused. No doubt he persuaded himself as well as the jury that the accused did not deserve death. His speech to the jury occupied three hours and a half in its delivery. The prosecuting attorney made an able and eloquent reply, and the judge charged the jury impartially. After being out all night the jury this morning rendered a verdict of manslaughter.

Pleasing Programme.

The proprámme for the Methodist sociable in Vincent chapel, this evening is as follows:—Violin solo, Master Clarence B. Mills; Reading, Mr. J. R. Joy; Duet, "Maying," Mr. L. S. Bond, and Miss Margaretta Barnes; Recitation, Miss Grace Overton; The above will be interspersed with one or more short talks of five minutes each and instrumental music.

—The Independent Fife and Drum Corps are planning to hold a dance next month. It will probably be held in the Olympia.

A TALK ON MINUTE OBJECTS.

Stephen A. Krom Instructs an Audience on Bacteria.

There were many other attractions in the city last evening and the attendance at the lecture in the Y. M. C. A. Hall was not very large, but many of the best educated people were there and received from the words of Stephen Arthur Krom a very instructive as well as a very interesting lecture on bacteriology.

Mr. Krom's discoure was divided into two parts. The first part of the evening the lecturer treated his subject in a general way, stating in brief words the office which the different bacteria hold in the life of man. The reasons for the many contagious diseases which affect humanity were shown by the lecturer in very plain facts, and Mr. Krom said the time is coming when the cures for these diseases will be found and contagious diseases will be wiped off of the face of the earth.

Mr. Krom also stated to the great amusement of his audience that there were other kinds of bacteria besides the disease-producing ones, and it depended greatly in the kind of bacteria which the milk contained as to whether the butter and cheese would be of a good flavor or not. If all of the same kind of bacteria were used to sour or ripen the cream, the butter would be of a very much finer quality than if a mixture of many species were used. Thus the bacteria hold an important office in the manufacture of some articles of food.

The latter part of the evening was spent in darkness and the audience was asked to follow with the lecturer the classification of the microbes which was shown by a diagram which was cast upon the screen by a stereopticon. This diagram at first was to the audience as a page of Xenephon is to a child in one of our grammer schools, but in a short time it was explained and everyone was well informed of the meaning of it.

The second picture showed the three different forms of bacteria, namely the micrococci, bacilli and sparilla. These bacteria vary from 1-250,000 of an inch in length to 1-25,000 of an inch. The third picture showed the different forms which are the causes of the different diseases.

Mr. Krom spoke very strongly for the use of the individual communion cups, stating that in a recent investigation made by an American that after the single communion cup had circulated through the congregation it contained just twenty-two different species of bacteria.

FAIRYLAND FOR CHILDREN.

The Toy Department of Edsall's Commercial Palace.

One of the great features of Edsall's Commercial Palace is the toy department, which is really a store by itself. In descending the stairs to the basement one is given the idea of Alladin's cave.

In this department the eye is first attracted to the mechanical iron toys, such as railroad trains, running on a circular elevated track, wagons, engines and a host of other kinds. From there one is brought to the doll apartment, where all kinds of dolls are to be found. They have been imported direct from Europe. Among the wooden toys special features are the pneumatic sulky and horse that goes, singing birds, cabs, talking dolls and Chrismas ornaments of all kinds for trees. In the other departments there are children's wagons, velocipedes, wheelbarrows, hobby-horses, sleds and violins. A very novel toy is a cow, which does everything but give milk.

Then there are steamboats, circus wagons, tin toys consisting of fire engines, express wagons and magic lanterns. Among the important features are the fire and sailor uniforms for boys, and a complete line of the latest styles of mechanical banks.

Thomas A. Neely has charge of the basement, and no one should fail to visit this department, for he has a large stock of goods that will interest all.

Great Reduction in Time to California.

Once more the Northwestern Line has reduced the time of its trans-continental trains, and the journey from Chicago to California via this popular route is now made in the marvelously short time of three days. Palace drawing-room sleeping cars leave Chicago daily, and run through to San Francisco and Los Angeles, without change, and all meals en route are served in dining cars. Daily tourist sleeping car service is also maintained by this line between Chicago and San Francisco and Los Angeles, completely equipped berths in upholstered tourist sleepers being furnished at a cost of only $6 each from Chicago to the Pacific Coast. Through trains leave Chicago for California at six p. m. and 10.45 p. m. daily, after arrival of trains of connecting lines from the east and south. For detailed information concerning rates, routes, etc., apply to ticket agents of connecting lines or address: H. A. Gross, G. E. P. A., 423 Broadway, New York, or T. P. Vaille, S. E. P. A., 112 South Fourth street, Philadelphia, Pa. tf.

FOR THE COLES' BRONZE.

Bishop Williams Suggests that the Donor's Father's Name Be Inscribed.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. John Williams, Bishop of the Diocese of Connecticut, Chancellor of Trinity College, etc., in a recent letter to the son of the late Dr. Abraham Coles, referring to the bronze and its pedestal to be unveiled in Lincoln Park at 12:30, noon, on Thanksgiving Day, says:

"An inscription of the last stanzas of your father's beautiful National hymns, "Columbia the Land of the Free," and "My Native Land," upon the marble pedestal of the bronze historical group you are about to present to the city of Newark, N. J., would not only be a graceful tribute to your father's memory, but would also give a National as well as local value to the gift."

In 1666 Newark was settled by people from Connecticut. The Bishop's suggestion will be carried out.—Newark Advertiser.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

BASKET BALL.

Basket ball practice and games are held every evening from 9 p. m. to 9:30 p. m., at the Y. M. C. A., except Fridays, which is reserved for the football team.

Quite a number gathered at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Wednesday evening to practice basket ball. A game was played between the Spartans and a picked team, in which the former came out victorious by a score of 18 to 9. The boys are rapidly learning all the ins and outs of the game, and a lively contest may be expected Tuesday evening, when the first of the regular games will be played.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

It is not probable that the Rutgers College 'varsity football team will play again this season. There has not been any formal disbandment, but action in this direction will probably be taken within the next week. The cause of the failure of the team is the lack of interest on the part of the students. The team was scheduled to play the naval cadets at Annapolis, but this game has been cancelled.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

The hunting party, consisting of J. A. Blatz, Henry Haurand and Fred Hui, that started into the wilds of Pennsylvania after game, have been heard from. They are having a glorious time, and have been quite lucky. They return tomorrow.

THEATRICAL.

"The Cruiskeen Lawn," a new Irish comedy by Dan McCarthy, was presented for the first time in Jersey City, at the New Opera House last night. "The Cruskeen Lawn" is the latest production from the pen of the favorite actor, Mr. Dan McCarthy, who is also the author of the "Rambler From Clare," "The Pride of Mayo," etc., but whilst these plays are popular with the public, and have been great money makers, "The Cruiskeen Lawn" is undoubtedly his masterpiece, and judging by the enthusiastic manner in which it was received yesterday speaks well for a successful run.—Jersey City Evening Journal, March 2d, 1894. CHARACTER IN LEGS.

Uncertain, Sloppy Lower Extremities Mark Their Owners as Failures In Life.

"Did you ever notice," asked the observant Jerseyman, "that you could never tell what the general character of a man for efficiency and ability is simply by seeing his head and face and the upper part of his body? It is a fact. You have got to see a man's legs to be able to give a fair estimate of him, and if this rule applies as surely to women—and of that I can't speak with anything like certainty from lack of chances to make observations—then the quicker the rage for bicycle riding comes in the better it will be for the young men who are seeking wives—that is, of course, supposing that they are going to exercise some judgment in making their selections.

"The manner in which I was first led to observe this was through a man who occupied the humble place of cashier in a cheap restaurant. Why a man with such an intellectual face should be occupying such a cheap place was a fresh source of wonder to me every time I saw him there. His head was well formed, his voice and manners were those of a man well brought up, his hands were shapely, and the whole of his body, so far as could be seen as he stood behind the cash counter, was that of an active, well formed, vigorous man.

"But one day I saw him out on the street, and there was then no room to question why he was a sort of menial. It was all in his legs. There was no lack of mere physical strength in his legs apparently, for he walked all right, but the trouble is best expressed in the term sloppy. They were uncertain, indeterminate legs, that had a sort of unfinished look about them, and the man's feet, instead of matching his hands, were just as sloppy in form as his legs. I have seen many such pairs of legs in an idiot asylum.

"Since that time I have noted the appearance of the legs of many of the persons whom I know and compared their character with the known histories of those persons, and in no case have I failed to find that a sloppy pair of legs was the mark of the men who were failures in life, despite the possession of good health, good habits, good natural talents and these often combined with all the advantages which education and well off parents could give to them in beginning the world.

"On the other hand, whenever I see a man with a good clean cut pair of legs answering to those of a race horse, or with a sturdy, emphatic pair of legs, I am just as certain as I can be that that man is going to get there. Can it be, do you suppose, that it is because of an instinctive knowledge of this that we seek so naturally to see what sort of ankles the women have and will spend hours in that study on a rainy day without wearying? Applied by my rule it would certainly be a profitable study, and the coming days of bloomers and knickerbockers will aid it, but still I fear that we shall never be able to make sure of the character of the women we see unless the law were to step in to aid us."—New York Sun.

Didn't Go to New York to Die.

A policeman at the Grand Central station came quite near getting himself into a fierce fight through a ludicrous misunderstanding. The day express from Buffalo had just rolled into the station and the passengers were making their way through the gates to the street. An Irishman dressed in overalls and jumper emerged from the crowd and walked up to the policeman. Said he:

"I'm a 'lectrician. I works with linemen laying of wires. I do be comin down here to get wurrick with the Wistern Union. Cud ye tell me where they have their buildin?"

The fellow seemed to be a good natured sort of a chap and the policeman took extra pains to set him right. He took the fellow by the arm and walked him out in Forty-second street, where he could see the elevated station of the Sixth avenue line. Then the policeman said:

"You go down there and get on an elevated train going down town. Get off at Park place station and then walk up to the corner of Broadway and Dey."

"Oi'll do nothin of the koind!" shouted the Irishman. "Go down to the corner of Broadway and die yerself! I am from the counthry, and maybe I luk green, but ye nor any other mon can make fun of me. I'd have ye to understand that."

He began to make hostile demonstrations and was with great difficulty restrained from assaulting the officer, but finally he was made to understand.—New York Tribune.

Vermont's Volcano.

People who live in the vicinity of Gassetts are all familiar with the story. The region is peculiar geographically, and one who examined it even slightly would not feel surprised to hear that an earthquake swallowed it, or a volcano had poured forth sufficient lava to bury it. The hills about Gassetts are continuations of Hawk mountain, which orginates in Weathersfield and extends somewhat southwesterly into Chester. At Gassetts it is broken and gashed by gulfs and chasms, evidently left by violent convulsions ages ago. A stone has been found which experts declare to be of volcanic origin. There is some question as to whether in the present age there has ever been any disturbance, most of the stories to that effect originating from some one seeing a burning brush heap. Geographically, however, it is one of the most interesting spots in the state.—Burlington Free Press.

The Genuine Article.

Guest—Do you keep champagne?

Landlord—Yes; the genuine article at 4 marks a bottle.

Guest—Why, that can't be genuine?

Landlord—Besides we have some still more genuine at 6 marks, and, lastly, some supergenuine such as you won't get in the province of Champagne itself. We sell that at 10 marks a bottle. Which will you take?—Humoristische Blatter.

Akin.

"Do you think that marriage is a failure, Mr. Askin?" said Miss Elder to a young man whom she knew to be engaged.

"I haven't got that far yet," was the frank reply, "but I'm pretty well convinced that courtship is bankruptcy."—London Tit-Bits.

Friends should not be chosen to flatter. The quality we prize is that rectitude which will shrink from no truth. Intimacies which increase vanities destroy friendship.—Channing.

"I have generally found that the man who is good at an excuse is good for nothing else," said Franklin to a servant who was always late, but always ready with an excuse.

A Curious Find.

Mr. Bryce, well known as a publisher in Glasgow, relates how the late Mr. Crowther of Manchester, a famous collector of rare books, asked him to republish an old seventeenth century volume called "Essays on Several Subjects, written by Sir Thomas Pope Blount, London, 1691." The copy which Mr. Crowther had was so rare that he believed only two others were in existence—one in the British museum and the other in the Bodleian library. "A copy," he wrote, "is of priceless value," and he gave minute instructions as to the care which must be taken of that which he was sending. Thinking, however, that Mr. Crowther might be mistaken as to the exceeding scarcity of the book, Mr. Bryce advertised, and after the lapse of several weeks he received notice that one could be had for 1s. 6d.

When the volume came, he hurried to compare it with that of Mr. Crowther, which he had in his safe, and, to his delight, he found it equally perfect, except that the contents pages were wanting. On further examination he discovered that there were duplicate contents pages in Mr. Crowther's copy. So that the mistake made by the binder of these two volumes in 1691 was now rectified by the chance coming together of the two once more—the copy in which the contents pages had been omitted and the copy in which the missing pages had been placed.—Good Words.

Capt. Jones of the Rose

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

[Copyright, 1895, by the Author.]

Seven men sat in a gloomy wooden cave. Under a massive beam that ran athwart the ceiling swung a sort of coffeepot, from the spout of which sputtered a smoking and stinking flame, whose disgusting fumes were to be everywhere tasted in the atmosphere of the darksome wooden cave. The seven men were seated, not on morocco chairs or velvet sofas, but on rude boxes, whose lids were scored by the cutting up of cake tobacco. There were one or two pillars or stanchions in this gloomy wooden cave, from which dangled several oilskin coats and oilskin leggings, and under the ceiling hung a number of bags called hammocks, with here and there a ragged blanket peeping over the edge or an old shoe showing through the meshes. In the midst of the ceiling was a square hole called a hatch, down which this day there floated very little daylight owing partly to the hatch being small and partly to the sky being overcast with clouds.

Had these seven men seated in this interior been cleanly shaven and had they been appareled in well washed colored shirts, sleeved waistcoats, comfortable trousers and caps with naval peaks, they would have passed as a harmless, respectable body of seafaring men—persons who would say "mum" to a lady when addressed by her and answer intelligently and respectfully when asked about the weather. But, as they now sat, they looked as sulky and wild a set of fellows as one could imagine—strangely and fearfully attired, grimy of face and hairy, booted with half Wellingtons and belted in Wapping fashion—and timid people would have thought that they carried a murderous air because each man wore a sheath upon his hip, in which lay a very sharp blade.

The wooden cave in which these men sat rose and fell as though it were the extreme end of a long board violently seesawed, and this motion, combined with the smell of the fumes of the slush fed lamp and a vapor rising out of a small tub of boiled pork, not to mention other odors, such as might be produced by well worn, newly greased sea boots, bedding which had made several voyages around the world, sooty clay pipes, old ropes, stale salt water and many mysteries of malodorous commodities stowed below in the hold and forepeak, must instantly have upset the stomach of any landsman who out of curiosity should have put his head into the little hatch to see what was inside of it.

This cave was indeed a ship's forecastle, but the seven men who sat in it were mariners who had for many years been tossed by the various oceans of the world and could not possibly have been made seasick, even though they should have been offered a handsome reward to try. One of them was a large, strong man, with a shaggy head of hair and a beard like rope yarns. He looked as though he had taken a "header" and come up again to blow crowned with seaweed. This strong man suddenly and with a sulky fury of gesture whipped the knife out of the sheath that was strapped to his hip, and plunging it into a lump of pork lifted the horrid block into the air and cried out:

"Here it is again!"

As he pronounced these words the little square of hatch was obscured by the interposition of a man's body.

"The smell of that there pork," said the voice belonging to the body in the hatch, "is something to sit upon—something strong enough to lean agin. Why, a man might turn to and chop them fumes into first class bunk boards. Talk of strength!"

"Come below, cook," bawled one of the seven men.

"No. I've got to see to the capt'n's dinner. But I'm of ye if ther's to be trouble. When I signed, it was for wittles and a dry bottom and a ship's company. Pump, pump, and nothin to eat! Nothin to eat, and pump, pump! Here's logic as don't tally with this covey's reckoning for one." And the man, violently smiting himself upon the breast, disappeared.

The powerful sailor who had held the pork aloft while the cook discoursed shook it off the blade into the tub again and spat.

"It's about time," said he, "that all hands was agreed."

"All hands is agreed," said one of the sailors, "'cepting that blooming Dutchman Peter. But if he don't come into it it'll be a bad job for one of us if on some dark night him and me happens to be aloft together."

"That there Peter," said a sailor, "was a-boasting to me that he'd ha' shipped for a pound a month. D'ye know, he'd eat a shipmate's shirt if by so doing he thought he would airn a shilling by saving his allowance."

"This is sweet meat for Peter," said one of the seven, pointing to the pork, "and a pound a month is good money to Peter, and if Peter and the likes of him could get their way, then if ye wanted to see what sort of a man an English sailor looked like, ye'd have to ask the master of the fust workhus as hove in sight to show ye him."

"What a blazing fool a fellow makes of hisself when he goes to sea!" exclaimed a man with red hair and a broken nose. "I might ha' been a market gard'ner had I staid ashore. Think of that! What did I run away for? For the likes of this for a parlor," said he, waving his hand round the forecastle, "and for the likes of you," pointing to the hammock, "for a bed, and the likes of that muck," he added, pointing to the pork, "as a meal. But no growling's allowed. Ho, no! Tell 'em that pickled dog ain't pork, and that wermin ain't ship's bread, and you're taken afore the magistrate and committed and locked up and left to rot, whilst the blooming Dutchmen are getting all the jobs, because pickled dog to them is pork and wermin a relish." He struck his fist heavily upon the chest on which he sat and fastened his eyes upon his huge knuckles while he turned them about, as though he were inspecting a sample of coal.

"No use keeping all on grunting," exclaimed a quiet looking seaman, addressing the others over his folded arms. "What's to be the horder of the day?"

"A bust up," answered the strong man, who bore the nickname of Black Sam. "Here we are, 16 days out, two hands overboard and not enough men by six able seamen to work the ship; wessel making water and requiring to be pumped every four hours; meat fit to make a wulture ill; ship's bread old and wormy and the rest of us men's stores shop sweepings. Now, this being so, I'm a-going to knock off work for one."

"And me for another," "And me for another," went in a growl from mouth to mouth.

"There's the mate, and there's the carpenter," continued Black Sam. "If the capt'n can work the ship with them two, well and good. But Peter he shan't have. Rather than that cuss of a Dutchman should be agin us and on the capt'n's side I'd"— He projected his arm and seemed with his powerful hairy hand to strangle something in the air.

At this point the square of hatchway was again darkened, and the salt, husky voice of the carpenter called down: "Be-low there! Hain't the starboard watch got their dinner yet? Tumble up! Tumble up! The wind's drawed ahead, and the yards want trimming."

"Tumble up!" exclaimed Black Sam. "Don't ye be holding your nose too long over the hatch, or it'll be ye as'll be tumbling down. Can't ye smell it? Oh, it's nothin but us men's dinner! There's plenty left if ye've a mind for a bite."

"Tumble up!" exclaimed Black Sam.

"Who's that a-jawing?' exclaimed Mr. Chips, who combined the duty of second mate with that of ship's carpenter. "Tumble up, I tell you. The wind's drawed ahead."

"Catch it and smell it for yourself," shouted a seaman, plunging his hand into the mess kid and hurling a lump of pork through the hatch. The sailors heard the hurried steps of Mr. Chips as he went aft.

"He'll be telling the old man," said Black Sam. "Let's go on deck and have it out, lads. I'll do the talking part, with yer good leave. We don't want no language. Civility's a trump card in these here trawerses. We all knows what we mean to get, and I'll say it for ye."

He led the way. His shipmates followed. They gained the forecastle and stood in a group gazing at the after part of the ship.

The vessel was the Rose, from Liverpool to an East African port. She was an old fashioned composite ship, but her lines were those of a yacht, and there were few vessels then afloat which could look at her on a bowline. Her yards were immensely square, and she carried swinging booms and main skysail mast, and her burden was between 600 and 700 tons. Such a ship as this demanded 20 of a crew at the least, not to mention master, mates and "idlers." Instead of 20, the Rose had sailed with ten men in the forecastle and a cook in the galley, and the others were a carpenter, who acted as second mate, an only mate and the captain. Of the slender crew two had been swept overboard in a gale of wind. They were foreigners, and the English jacks did not lament their shipmates' end, but, on the contrary, grinned fiendishly when it was discovered that the foreigners were gone, and they hideously wished that all Dutchmen who signed articles for the red ensign of England would go and fall overboard as those two foreigners had, and as promptly, too, so that nobody concerned might be kept waiting.

During the gale in which the two Dutchmen had perished the ship had been so strained as to oblige the hands to serve the pumps every four hours. Undermanned, leaky, the provisions rotten! There must be a limit to patience and endurance, even though the sufferer be a sailor. The seven seamen lumped together on the forecastle of the Rose stood staring aft. The cook, a pale man, lounged in his galley door, half in and half out, and his face wore an expression of sour expectation. The carpenter, as I may call him, was talking to the captain, and the only mate was slowly rising through the companion hatch as the body of seamen stood staring.

The captain, whose name was Jones, was a tall, lean, gaunt man, his face of the color of sulphur, his appearance decidedly Yankee, though he happened to belong to Limehouse. He wore square toed boots, a cloak that might have been taken from the shoulders of a stage bandit and a sugar loafed hat. The hair on his face consisted of a beard that fell from under his chin like a goat's, and his eyes were black, brilliant and restless.

The only mate, whose name was Johnson, was about half the captain's height. The ocean had done its work with him—had withered up his face, dried the marrow out of his bones, put a turn in either leg, so that his walk was like a pantomime clown's. Instead of being an only mate he should have formed the eighth part of a mate. You would have thought that eight at least of such men as Mr. Johnson should go to the making of an only mate for the Rose had you sent your glance from his dried and kinked figure to the body of men forward, more particularly to the giant Black Sam, who, with the rest, continued to gaze aft.

The carpenter, or second mate, was a brown faced man of about 50, but brine had taken the place of blood in his veins, and he looked 60, with his white locks and rounded back and long, hanging arms, whose fingers were curled in the manner of fishhooks. At the wheel stood the Scandinavian seaman Peter, the like of whom you may see any day blowing in a German band in the streets of London, veal colored, freckled, yellow haired, a figure loosely put together and as meaningless an expression of countenance as a dab's

The captain was pulling at a long cigar that drooped between his lips. Presently he pulled his cigar from his mouth and shouted: "We don't want all hands. The starboard watch can trim sail. Trim sail, starboard watch!" And replacing his cigar he fell to swiftly striding the quarter deck to and fro.

A LOSS OF $80,000,000!!!

Labor-saving inventions or discoveries have often been violently opposed on the ground that they take workingmen's bread out of their mouths. Although experience has shown the fallacy of that theory the feeling, or fear, was natural.

But it is not so much the lack of work as the inability to work that causes poverty and suffering. In England and Wales every workingman averages ten days of sickness every year, with a total loss of wages for all of about $ 0,000,000 per year. In this country the loss is much greater. In all countries the prevailing disease is indigestion and dyspepsia and its consequences—such as rheumatism, and other ailments resulting from impure blood; a result of dyspepsia.

No thorough, rapid and trustworthy cure for this universal and obstinate malady existed until the Mt. Lebanon (N. Y.) Community of Shakers placed upon the market their now famous remedy called the Shaker Digestive Cordial. It is prepared from roots and herbs cultivated solely by them. Nothing more certain, safe and palatable can be imagined. It expels the impurities from the body by means of the bowels, kidneys and skin, and imparts vigor and tone to the stomach—upon whose proper action all our strength, activity and endurance depends. For many years the Shakers have given earnest attention to this subject, and their final success is thankfully admitted by the multitudes who have been cured by the Cordial after all other means have failed. Their high reputation for skill as herbalists, for honesty and religious sincerity guarantees whatever they recommend.

No invention can ever take your work from you if you are able to work. Health and strength are the vital consideration.

DANCING BY THE HIBERNIANS.

They Tender a Ball to The Ladies Auxiliary Last Night.

The first sociable of Division No. 4, A. O. H., that was tendered to the Ladies Auxiliary, No. 1, in the Columbia Cycle Academy, last evening, was a pleasant affair. It was precisely 9:30 o'clock when the grand march took place, the same being well executed by those taking part. The large and spacious dancing surface was well filled during every dance and those who tripped the light fantastic step to the strains from O'Reilly's full orchestra kept it up until early this morning. Those in charge took great pains to see that the best of order was maintained, very much to the satisfaction of those who had come to enjoy a pleasant evening. At 12 o'clock supper was served, and after supper dancing was again resumed.

The officers of Division No. 4, and those who had the sociable in charge were: P. Casey, President; E. Birmingham, vice-president; W. Carty, secretary; C. Reagen, financial secretary; M. Nugent, treasurer; D. J. Shea, floor director; P. O'Keefe and Chas. Lang, assistants; P. Reagen, M. J. Winn; J. Cullinane, Aids; E. Ryan, W. B. Smith, J. Galbraith, committee of arrangements.

THOSE WHO WAIT AND WORK.

DR. LEE TALKS ON THESE POINTS TO CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

Second Anniversary of German Reformed Church Society Held Last Night—Beautiful Floral Decorations.

The German Reformed church was filled with bright and cheerful faces last evening te celebrate the second anniversary of the Young Peoples Soiety of Christian Endeavor. The decorations were designed by F. G. Bach. They consisted of a large orange crescent with the motto of the C. E. Society, "For Christ and the Church," worked upon it in gray; under this was the pledge which was surrounded by evergreens, forming a very pretty border and from this was suspended a large C. E., the design of the society pin. The floral decorations consisted of a large and handsome collection of chrysanthemums, while a beautiful bouquet of roses stood upon one end of the pulpit. The flowers were furnished by Peter F. Doeringer, Mr. Samuel McCutchen's florist, and were exceedingly beautiful.

The meeting opened with a fifteen minute song service, during which many of the favorite C. E. hymns were sung. Rev. Cornelius Schenk offered prayer. After the singing of a hymn Mr. F. G. Bach, secretary of the society, gave his annual report. Five new active and five new associate members were added to the membership list during the year. The financial state of the society is remarkably good.

The address was given by the Rev. Dr. Lee, of Newark, and was very interesting. The subject of Dr. Lee's address was "Waiting and Working." Dr. Lee quoted as a standing example the laying of the great Atlantic cable by Cyrus W. Field, how he was nearly discouraged by the breaking of the cable but with all this discouragement Mr. Field waited, paying no attention to the sneers and scoffings of the world, and finally succeeded. Dr. Lee said, "So it is with this society society although you are not many and although you may be jeered at by the people of the world, it is for you to wait. It is your duty to cast the seed into the furrow and await the harvest; you may not be here to reap, but God will furnish the reapers and we are only to do the work of the present and are not to look fook forward to great results, God will look after them."

The meeting closed with the old hymn, "Blest be the Tie that Binds," and every one went away feeling greatly impressed by the excellent meeting.

Objects to Building a Sidewalk.

Street Commissioner Meeker instructed Contractor Michael Powers to lay a stone walk along the property of William Palmer Smith on Belvidere avenue, to comply with a city ordinance. Mr. Smith and family were in New York, and upon learning the fact Mr. Smith at once came on to Plainfield to consult with his lawyer and succeeded in having an injunction served on Commissioner Meeker. The work is at present at a standstill, and the result may be a lawsuit between Mr. Smith and the city.

After the conference the carriers were banqueted by Branch 67, N. A. L. C., of Elizabeth, at Miller's Cafe.

RAPID TRANSIT IN 1835.

A Rare Old Specimen of Plainfield's Early Days.

Freeholder L. E. Barkalew, of the borough, is the possessor of an old family relic in the shape of an advertising poster which his father had printed in 1835 to announce to the Plainfield public his intention to start a stage and express line to New York. It was printed by Isaac Cole, who then had a small printing office where the store now occupied by Gavett & Co. stands. Typographically it is a good specimen of work for those days. The poster has been nicely framed and will be put on exhibition in the postoffice window this afternoon. It reads as follows:

NEW LINE
from
PLAINFIELD TO NEW YORK VIA ELIZABETH-TOWN POINT.

The subscriber has commenced running a two-horse stage daily between Plainfield and New-York by the way of Elizabeth-Town Point, to leave his Public House in Plainfield at 5 o'clock in the morning, so that Passengers may go by the 8 o'clock Boat to the City, and leave New York in the 3 o'clock Boat in the afternoon—so as to arrive in Plainfield just at the close of the day.—FARE, 75 cents.—Way Passengers in proportion.

The subscriber intends to continue running every day so long as he can obtain Passengers enough to justify the expence. If any change is made timely notice will be given. On this Plan there will be 5 hours to do business in New York, and return home the same day. The subscriber will drive his own Stage—Or, when he may not—will employ a trustworthy person, for whom he will be accountable—they will go into the City, and attend to any errands or Business entrusted to them for a moderate compensation. Believing such a line as this will be a great accommodation to many—and intending to exert himself to give entire satisfaction, the subscriber hopes for general patronage, and especially that of the citizens of Plainfield, and their friends in New York.

☞He will take charge of letters or parcels from the pupils of either of the Plainfield Seminaries, or from their Parents and friends in the City. VINCENT BARKALEW.

Plainfield, July 28, 1835.

The public house referred to in the announcement was located on the corner of Front and Somerset streets where Charles Smith's saloon is now situated.

TIME OF GREAT SOCIABILITY.

A PLEASANT EVENT HELD IN THE METHODIST CHURCH.

Arranged by the Ladies Aid Society and the Epworth League—Programme Rendered and Names of Participants.

The first regular sociable of the season at the First M. E. church was held last evening under the combined auspices of the Ladies Aid Society and the Epworth League. Quite a number of the congregation were present and everybody appeared to enjoy themselves. After allowing the audience to be seated, Robert Davis, President of the Epworth League, as master of ceremonies, announced that James R. Joy would give a reading entitled "Patsy in the Kindergarten." The selection was a humorous one and Mr. Joy's manner of reading, especially the dialect parts, sent his hearers into roars of laughter. A violin solo by Clarence Mills was artistically rendered and an encore was given. Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes then made a few remarks, after which a duett was pleasingly sung by Miss Margaretta Barnes and Louis H. Bond. The programme closed with a recitation entitled "A Cup of Tea" by Miss Grace E. Overton.

After a brief interval in which to allow those present to gather in groups all about Vincent chapel, ice cream and cake were passed and a period of sociability followed.

The programme was produced by the social and literary committees of the Epworth League.

The social committee consists of Miss Elsie Horne, Chairman, Miss Lucie P. Davis, Miss Sarah Douglass and the Misses Day, F. W. Rittenhouse, J. V. Rittenhouse, R. A. McGee, Ralph Campbell and J. A. Stafford. Those on the literary committee are D. S. Dunavan, Chairman, J. R. Joy, Miss Angleman, Miss Gertrude Sharp, Miss Cora Shephe.d and Miss Etta Raybert.

The refreshments were under the charge of a committee from the Ladies Aid Society which consisted of Mrs. C. R. Barnes, Miss Tillie Alexander, Miss Dolly Bolsterle, Miss Melissa Angleman, Miss Ida Angleman and Mrs. S. C. Baker. Robert Davis presided over the ice cream freezer while the young men passed it. Those who assisted were W. B. Rittenhouse, J. V. Rittenhouse, Robert Douglass, Garfield Pike, J. A. Stafford and Alvah Davis. The following young women passed the cake: The Misses Grace Barnes, Margaretta Barnes, Florence Barnes, Lizzie Day and Elizabeth Cornwell.

Death of Mrs. Gedney.

After a long illness from a complication of diseases, Mrs. Gedney, wife Dr. Gedney, V. S., died very suddenly at her home, 427 Orchard place, last evening at 6:40 o'clock. Decedent had been failing in health for sometime and her death was not unexpected. Her husband is now confined at Muhlenberg hospital by illness. She also leaves a son, who lives in Elizabeth. Mr. Gedney was in the eightieth year of her age and was very well known throughout Plainfield.

Pleased Everybody.

Prof. E. L. Leonard, business manager of Pennington Seminary, writing to Jere M. Cobb the elocutionist says: "It is my experience that students are the most exacting audience a lecturer could have. When I say, therefore, that you not only gained the attention of our school, but highly pleased them, I consider it the strongest testimonial I could give." Mr. Cobb will appear in the second entertainment of the Y. M. C. A. Star course, Thanksgiving evening, Nov. 28th.

To Be Wedded At High Noon.

The invitations have been issued for the marriage of Miss Leafer Belle Page, of Naugatuck, Conn., and William Hall Miner, formerly of this city, but now of Naugatuck, which is to take place at St. Michael's church, of that place, on Wednesday November 27, at high noon. A reception will be held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Page, after the wedding.

Croup is a terror to young mothers. To post them concerning the first symptoms, and treatment is the object of this item. The first indication of croup is hoarseness. In a child who is subject to croup it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the rough cough has appeared it will prevent the attack. It has never been known to fail. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong. Manager.

CAMPAIGN OF DECLINATIONS.

THREE OF THE PROPOSED CITIZENS' CANDIDATES REFUSE TO RUN.

But the Managers of the Movement Hustle Around and Get Other Candidates—The Petitions Being Circulated Now.

The Citizens' ticket for the coming charter election is still alive, at least it looked so at the headquarters on East Front street this morning, but there are several changes on the ticket since it was made up yesterday. The appearance of an opposition to the straight ticket has aroused considerable comment, but the new ticket will not run the way it was planned at first.

Leonard Spangenberg objected strongly to running on the ticket, so his name was crossed and that of George O. Stevens, the popular coal merchant, substituted in the nomination of councilman-at-large.

William H. Drayton told a Daily Press reporter this morning that he would not take the nomination for councilman in the Second ward and declined to run against Councilman Frost.

When seen by a Daily Press reporter this morning Councilman V. L. Frazee stated that he did not intend to run for re election and, although a number of people from the Fourth ward had asked him to accept the nomination, he would not be a candidate this year.

The nominations will be made by petitions, and when a Daily Press reporter visiting the Citizen's ticket headquarters, he found them being prepared.

There was a general tendency towards silence, but it was admitted that Mr. Spangenburg had withdrawn and Mr. Stevens substituted. Nothing would be said about the Second ward except that it was undecided yet. Those at the headquarters seemed to think that Frazee would run.

So after the petitions were ready and the work of circulating them among the voters of Plainfield was began. The party has until Monday night to file the nominations with the City Clerk.

In conversation with a Daily Press reporter this afternoon, one of the prominent backers of the new ticket said that there would be no ward ticket except in the first ward, where Dennis Carney will run against C. W. Nichols, the Republican nominee for justice of the peace.

R. I. Tolles, Republican nominee for first ward councilman, has allowed his name to be put on the citizens' ticket. Neither Mr. Drayton nor Mr. Frazee will be put up as candiates for the new party.

String Music.

At the grand banjo concert at Music Hall, Tuesday evening, November 26th, under the management of George Jenkins, of Somerville, there will be some of the best talent in this country. Dore, Farmer and Dore and Brooks, Denton and Ossman, the world's greatest trios. The famous metropolitan quartette, William Josh Daly, humorist, Master Francis Hastings, of Brooklyn, the child elocutionist, George F. Holloway, guitarist and Prof. Charles L. Van Barr, the composer of the Yale two-step, and J. Silberberg, pianists. The programme promises to give the music loving people of Plainfield a rare treat, as Mr. Jenkins has carefully selected his artists and is working earnestly to make this musicale a success. There will be a banjo orchestra of fifty banjos mandolins and guitars, in the opening.

The Rig Came Back.

Yesterday a Westfield man hired a rig at Roberts' livery stable on North avenue and, in company with a Plainfielder, drove to Scotch Plains, intending to return early in the evening. The Westfield man went on to Westfield with the rig and the Plainfield man came home on the stage. As the evening progressed Mr. Roberts began to have fears that the rig had been stolen. He telephoned to the surrounding towns to the police, and at last located the rig at Westfield, where it had been driven by the man who hired it and who had become inebriated. The property was returned and proper explanations made.

SAN SOUCI WHIST CLUB.

Second Meeting for the Season Held Thursday Evening.

The San Souci Whist Club held its second semi-monthly meeting Thursday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Murray Burtis, of Sandford avenue, under the auspices of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Lowe, and a very enjoyable evening was passed. After the game was over a collation was served and the prizes awarded. Mrs. B. Darby won first lady's prize, a handsome sofa cushion, while Mr. Darby was successful in securing the second prize for the gentlemen, a valuable penknife. The booby prizes were very significant. The lady's first prize was an egg beater and the second a whisk broom.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hamilton, Fanwood; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stater, Mr. and Mrs. Neil, Mr. and Mrs. B. Darby, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Messersmith, and Mr. and Mrs. Murray Burtis. The next meeting will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Darby.

RED MEN DEBATE.

Miantonomah Tribe Discusses an Important Lodge Question.

At the meeting of Miantonomah Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., last night, an interesting debate was enjoyed. The subject was "Whether the Great Council of New Jersey Should be Made a Representative Body." Slips of paper were handed to every member and all were blanks except seven. Those receiving the latter were chosen as follows: Affirmative—Past Sachem Walsh, of Newburgh, D. C. Allen and W. A. Westphal; Negative—Fred TenEyck, C. L. Holstein, P. Krog. Judge, David Morning.

The question was decided in the affirmative, after which there was a general discussion by the members. The pipe of peace, cigars, sandwiches and coffee brought to a close an enjoyable evening.

DOGDOM MOURNS.

The Colonal Eats Poisoned Meat and Leaves This World.

All of Plainfield dogdom mourns this morning. The cause of the bowwows tears and meek expression on their shaggy faces is the untimely demise of Colonel, the leader of the 400 of Plainfield's canine population. He was an intelligent collie-shepherd dog, the property of Druggist J. Howard Leggett, and was known all over the city as a dog who made friends with everybody. But some brute with the meanest kind of a disposition fed Colonel with beefsteak sprinkled with some poisonous substance, and yesterday Colonel turned up his toes, gave a few kicks and went to the place where all good dogs go. Peace be to the remains of Colonel.

For the Library Fund.

A benefit concert to take place on December 3d, will be tendered to the Ladies Aid Society of the Monroe Avenue M. E. chapel by E. Arthur Jenke and P. Ludwig Conde. The proceeds of concert will be used in furnishing the new library building, adjoining the chapel. Mr. Jenke, who has recently come to Plainfield, is a pianist of high ability, and the opportunity of listening to his rendering of classical numbers is anticipated with much pleasure by his friends. Messrs. Mason & Hamlin have generously offered one of their grand pianos for the occasion.

University Extension Lecture Studies.

Arrangements have been completed for the delivering of six of these lectures by Prof. Riggs, of Rutgers college, New Brunswick. Its the intention of the committee in charge to make these popular lectures by putting them at the low price named (75 cents for the six) to bring them within the reach of those who are attentives excluded from sources of education by the high prices charged for concerts and lectures. Tickets can be had on application to Major Wm. D. Miller, Mr. Isaac L. Miller, Rev. E. M. Rodman, or at Estil's book store.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. A SHIPWRECKED TRUNK.

CRAIG A. MARSH GETS A TRUNK LOST IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL.

Went Down With the Ill-Fated Seaford, But Was Water-Tight and Drifted to the Holland Shore—Returned to the Owner.

J. C. Pope & Co., agents for the Hamburg-American Line Steamship Company, were informed by the latter some time ago that a trunk belonging to Craig A. Marsh had been found in the North Sea, off Holland, it having been picked up by a pilot's crew and delivered to Paul Smith, United States Consul agent at Flushing, Holland. It will be remembered that Mr. Marsh was one of the passengers on the Seaford, which collided with another vessel in the English channel last summer, and had a narrow escape from going down with the sinking ship. In reply to enquiry of a Daily Press reporter this morning, Mr. Marsh said:

"Yes, I learned of it several weeks ago and gave an order to have the trunk forwarded. All of the trunks were down in the hold of the Seaford when the vessel was foundered in the English Channel last summer. My theory is that the pressure of air caused the bursting of the deck as the ship went down, liberating the heavy luggage. The trunk in question was a new one and water-proof, which explains the fact that it floated. The first intimation that I received concerning the trunk was through Dr. Lassar, of Berlin, who was a fellow-passenger on the steamer to Spitzbergen this summer. Dr. Lassar is as eminent in Europe as the late Dr. Loomis was in America. He had given me a letter of introduction to a friend in Paris and this letter was found in the trunk. Dr. Lassar was at once communicated with and he in turn communicated with me, and thus I secured the trunk which is in excellent condition."

Donors Thanked.

The committee of the Venitian booth thanks the following donors for sending dolls to the fair:

Sykes, Fahnestick, Mumford, Hastings, Harper, McKelvey, Hall, West, Huntington and VanBoskerck.

The following donated cash:

James Clark, Mesdames Booth, Wills, Ackerman, Squires, Brokaw, McGee, Davies, Fisk, Rushmore, and Miss Gorsline.

Progressive Euchre.

The Young People's Progressive Euchre Club, of Dunellen and North Plainfield, met at the home of Miss Jessie Haynes, of Dunellen. After a very exciting game the first prizes were won by Miss Janie Churchill and Charles Boice. Miss Emma Marlowe won the second feminine prize, while Robert Giddis and Charles English tied for the second prize for men. Mr. Giddis won on the play-off. After the game, dainty refreshments were served and the rest of the evening was spent in dancing.

Train Broke In Two.

Just as the train due at Plainfield at 8:27 passed Grant avenue, the rear draw head in the second car broke and the train was divided into two sections. The locomotive brought the first two cars to Plainfield and left the damaged one the siding. The train due at Plainfield at 8:31 was close behind the other train and pushed the rear section all the way to Plainfield where its regular locomotive awaited. No serious damage was caused by the accident althoug both trains were delayed about ten minutes.

Able Counsel.

The Elizabeth Daily Journal, the leading newspaper in Union county, thus speaks of Craig A. Marsh, of this city, who defended Murderer Freehill: "The prisoner had able counsel. Mr. Craig A. Marsh, who made the address to the jury, spoke for three hours and a half yesterday, and his eloquent and forcible interpretation of the law as applied to the case was endorsed by the Court in the charge."

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

CONDITION OF BUSINESS

Check to General Trade Still Continues.

Demand for Staples Increases—Business Failures—Exports of Wheat. Bank Clearings—Railroad Earnings—Larger Orders for Woolens, Shoes and Holiday Specialties.

New York, Nov. 23.—Bradstreet's to-day says that the check to general trade which has been conspicuous for the past few weeks still continues. Unseasonably mild weather and rain have intensified this feature, which is more conspicuous south, where the decline in the price of cotton and consequent check to shipments are held to be partly responsible. But the demand for staples increases on the appearance of seasonably cold weather, the result being larger orders for woolens, shoes, rubbers and holiday specialties.

Various Manufactured Products.

While Philadelphia textile manufacturers are fairly well employed, they declare it is without material profits. Boston advices are that foreign woolen dress goods are well cleaned up, and the advance on men's heavyweights is sustained. Wool remins quiet, with a fair inquiry, although manufacturers are not adding to stock. Uncertainty as to prices of leather checks buying of shoes by retailers, which depresses the manufacturing industry. There is less demand for iron and steel, and prices for standard varieties are lower, about one-half of the year's advance having been lost. It will be borne in mind, however, that most of these declines are on sales from stock. A considerable order if placed with makers might have a different effect.

Business Failures.

Business failures show a marked increase, numbering 323 throughout the United States, against 279 last week, 295 in the week a year ago, and 358 in the third week of November, 1893. In the corresponding week, 1892, the total was only 185. The bulk of the increase is in the middle and western states. Exports of wheat from both coasts of the United States from Montreal this week, wheat flour included as wheat, amount to 2,916,000 bushels, against 2,325,000 bushels last week and 4,083,000 in the like week in 1891.

Bank Clearings.

Notwithstanding continued evidence of a moderate reduction in the volume of business in recent weeks, the total value of bank clearings continues of large proportions — $1,126,000,000 — which, while it is 3.7 per cent. less than last week, is fully 10 per cent. larger than in the third week of November, 1893, and 2 per cent. more than in the corresponding week of 1892. When contrasted with the like period in 1891, this week's total shows a decline of only 10 per cent.

Prices of Staples.

No less striking than a week ago is the comparatively long list of decreases of prices for staples, among them Bessemer pig iron and steel billets, wheat, corn, oats, pork, lard and among food products and cotton, petroleum, hides and live cattle and hogs. Practically unchanged quotations are reported for turpentine and rosin, tobacco, leather, lumber and coal.

Railway Earnings.

Net railway earnings of roads representing 75 per cent. of the railroad earning capacity of the country point to a steady, sustained growth in the volume of net receipts for nine months of the year as compared with a year ago. This favorable showing is not confined to any one group of companies, but is shared to a greater or less degree by the roads generally, so that the position of the railroad interests of the country generally is much better this year than a year ago. The central western, coal, southwestern, trunk, eastern and granger roads show the heaviest increases in net over a year ago in the order named.

TRANSFER OF MAILS.

Disagreement Between Steamship Companies and the Government.

New York, Nov. 23.—The postoffice department has not yet been able to make arrangements for the transfer of mails from the steamers at Quarantine by tugs to the railway stations. The department and steamship companies cannot agree upon the proportion of the amount to be paid by the companies and the government for the service.

Capt. Lothaire To Be Tried.

Brussels, Nov. 23.—The authorities of the Congo Free State have decided that Capt. Lothaire, who is charged with irregular execution of the English trader Stokes, is to be tried before a Belgian court-martial.

DEBS FREE.

Enthusiastic Reception Accorded Him on His Release from Prison.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—Eugene V. Debs for five minutes yesterday was literally "in the hands of his friends." It was just at the arrival of the train load of enthusiastic admirers of the strike leader at the little town of Woodstock, where he again breathed the air of freedom for the first time in half a year. There was a preliminary thunder of hurrahs and then the storm of bottled-up admiration broke and there was a scene which has hardly ever been duplicated in the annals of labor affairs. Without giving him a chance to speak the crowd rushed upon their hero, dragged him from the steps and in a few moments had him high in the air and he was passed from hand to hand while all the others struggled to get near him. Debs took it all in the good natured spirit in which it was meant, and when he was put down began a handshaking soiree that lasted until the train was nearly ready to start for Chicago, where another enthusiastic reception was held.

MARYLAND DAY.

Efforts at Baltimore To Make It a Great Success.

Baltimore, Nov. 23.—A committee of fifty of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association are hard at work in an effort to take to Atlanta on Maryland day, Dec. 6, the largest crowd that has yet visited the Southern States and International exposition from any one state. Gov. Brown and staff, Brig.-Gen. Stewart Brown and staff, and Commander Emerson and the naval reserves and staff will officially represent the state. The "Metropolis of the South" will be represented by Mayor Hooper and other Baltimore officials. The Fourth and Fifth regiments and the Fifth Regiment Veteran corps have accepted invitations and will muster about 900 men. The ladies are also interested in the movement and quite a number have signified their intention of joining the party of Marylanders who will invade the Queen City of the south.

STRANGLED TO DEATH.

An Old Woman Murdered in Bed for Her Money.

Pottsville, Pa., Nov. 23.—Mrs. Catharine Gorman, a recluse, aged 74 years, was found dead in her bed yesterday in her home at Mill Creek, a small village near this place. The coroner's physicians are of the opinion that the woman was strangled to death. It is believed that the murder was committed bytramps who had learned that the old lady had some money in her possession. An empty purse was found upon the table in the room and the house had been ransacked.

EX-CONSUL WALLER'S CASE.

Denial of the Report That Secretary Olney Has Decided Against Him.

Washington, Nov. 23.—Government officials absolutely and emphatically deny that there is any truth in the statement published in a New York paper to the effect that the state department has decided that ex-Consul Waller has no case, that the department finds that his trial in Madagascar was fair, and holds that the United States has no substantial ground on which to base a demand for indemnity.

700 ITALIANS COMING.

The Immigrants Are Expected To Settle on Austin Corbin's Land.

Washington, Nov. 23.—Commissioner General Stump has detailed Immigrant Inspector Howard to assist in the inspection of some 700 Italians, expected to arrive at New Orleans within a few days. The Italians expected will come to this country on the steamer Chateau Yquem. They are to settle on lands near Sunny Side, Ark., the property of Austin Corbin of New York.

REV. F. H. SMITH INSANE.

He Will Be Sent to the Federal Asylum at Washington.

Boston, Nov. 23.—Rev. Frank Hyatt Smith was adjudged insane in the United States circuit court, and will be committed to the federal asylum at Washington. He was to have been tried for sending scurrilous letters to members of his former congregation at Cambridge, Mass., from Denver.

FIVE LOSE THEIR LIVES

Four Firemen and a Girl Killed in Chicago.

Members of an Engine Company Buried Beneath Tons of Falling Debris—The Girl Dashes Herself to Pieces on the Pavement—Heroic Rescues and Fearful Deaths.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—A fire, disastrous to life and property, swept through the dry goods and woolen exchange buildings yesterday. Five firemen, in the active discharge of their duty and totally unmindful of danger, were carried through a floor and buried under tons of wreckage from the five floors above. Four of the men lie dead but the fifth was not seriously injured. One girl fell from a window and received injuries from which she died.

Rescued from Imminent Death.

A dozen other men, women and girls were hurt or overcome by smoke, and many were rescued from imminent death. The property loss to the building and contents is estimated at $400,000. The dead are Patrick J. O'Donnell, lieutenant of engine company No. 8; Thomas J. Prendergast, pipeman; John Downs, pipeman; Martin Sherreck, pipeman; Kate Landgraf, employed in A. Stern & Co.'s garter factory.

His Perilous Position.

All the dead and injured firemen were members of engine company No. 2. Their captain, Lewis Fieene, escaped the awful plunge to death only by hanging to the sill of the window on the second floor, until released from his perilous position by firemen on a ladder.

All Excitement and Confusion.

The fire started on the fourth floor of the seven-story building in the garter factory of Stern & Co., where many girls were at work. They ran screaming and fainting from fright to the windows. All was excitement and confusion in a moment and the rapidly increasing crowd of spectators stood gazing upward at what seemed the impending doom of scores of working girls. Engines hose carts and ladders came to the rescue with brave firemen, who in a twinkling had scrambled up the fire escapes or put the extension ladders in position to bring the panic-striken people to the ground.

In Fear of a Double Death.

The frantic girls were determined in their half crazed mental condition to hurl themselves to the stone flagging, but were partly restrained by the shouts of the citizens on the street and the quick work of the firemen. One small extension ladder was run up under where the girls were standing in fear of a double death.

Fell Headlong to the Pavement.

A fireman mounted it, but when his feet touched the rungs of the second section either his weight or some defect in the ladder caused it to slip back to its orignal position, bringing its top four or five feet below the sill of the fourth-story window. Either crowded from behind or frenzied with fear Nellie Turner, Kittie Landgraf and Harry O'Neil made a wild attempt to lower themselves so that they could touch the top rung of the ladder. In doing this the foolhardy ones slipped and fell headlong.

Kittie Landgraf's Death.

Capt. Hermanson tried to grasp the dress of Kittie Landgraf as her body flew past him, but he failed, and she struck the sidewalk with a sickening sound in sight of thousands. A few seconds elapsed and the same spot upon which Miss Landgraf's body had struck was covered with the unconscious form of Nellie Turner, who had taken the terrible plunge in the effort to save herself. She was saved from death, however, by being momentarily held by three firemen in her descent, thus breaking the force of her fall. Three other girls, who had more presence of mind, succeeded in reaching the ladder by dropping from the window sill.

His Heroic Act.

The flames had now taken possession of the four upper stories of the building and at a window stood Olga Keller and Harry O'Neil, hemmed in on three sides by flames and smoke. The frightened girl stood on the narrow window ledge holding to the sash with one hand. She was almost suffocated by smoke and had braced herself as if to make the leap of a forlorn hope. "Don't jump, climb down to me," shouted Captain Hermanson from his perch on the upper part of the ladder, but the girl, frantic from terror, did not hear his voice. She was seen to drop and fortunately her body came within reaching distance of the captain. He seized one of her ankles as she turned in the air and the heroic act almost threw him from the swaying ladder. Before he was forced to loosen his hold or be carried down himself, two firemen below him seized the girl and carried her down the ladder mid the plaudits of thousands who watched every move in the tragedy.

The Second Tragedy.

Then came the second tragedy. After practically extinguishing the flames six members of engine company No. 2 were ordered to the fourth floor. Not one of them dreamed of danger, but they had scarcely reached there than, with an artillery-like roar, like an avalanche tons of timber, fireproof tiling, merchandise, safes, radiators, fixtures and a mass of other stuff fell upon and buried the firemen. A cry of horror arose from the spectators. Capt. Fieene clung to a window-sill and thus escaped the awful fate of his companions, and then joined in the work of rescue. Finally pipeman McNally, who was the only one alive, was released. The others had been instantly killed.

A MOST MERITORIOUS GRANT

MADE BY THE

United States Government.

The fact that the Government owns all of the Springs at Hot Springs, Arkansas, and four beautiful mountains, containing over 900 acres, which are forever reserved from sale, may not be generally known to the public, and the fact that the United States Government, under grant, have permitted the world-famed healing waters of Hot Springs, Arkansas, to be used in the preparation of "Pura Blood," must meet the hearty approval of sufferers who cannot spare time or expense to visit that famous sanitarium, where so many people from all over the world have been permanently cured of Rheumatism, Gout, and all Diseases of the Blood.

Those who cannot go to Hot Springs, Arkansas, can now have at home this same treatment, which has received the highest indorsement of Leading Physicians.

"Pura Blood" is specially prepared at Hot Springs, Arkansas, and is sold by all Druggists at One Dollar per bottle. Billups & Co., of 26 Cortlandt street, New York, are Sole Agents, and they will send descriptive book free to any address.

VICKSBURG BATTLEFIELD.

Efforts To Have It Set Apart as a National Military Park.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—A dozen generals and other officers who wore the blue have left for the south to meet representatives from among the leaders of the gray to arrange details for asking congress to make the battlefield of Vicksburg a national military park. They form together the officers and directors of the Vicksburg Military Park association, organized last month. The battlefield will be accurately located, and the ground occupied by both armies in the contest will be gone over by the members of the association. It is hoped that by this united action congress may be induced to make an appropriation sufficiently large to convert the battlefield into a suitable monument honoring the soldiers of both sides who died on the historic spot.

OFF FOR ATLANTA.

Mayor Strong of New York and Party Leave for the South.

New York, Nov. 23.—Mayor Strong, City Chamberlain McCook, Job E. Hedges and President Seth Low of Columbia college left for Atlanta yesterday afternoon. They will have a special car to themselves. The party will reach Atlanta this evening. Manhattan day will be celebrated at the exposition on Monday, when 500 New Yorkers are expected to be present. A couple of carloads of them left yesterday.

THE HANNIGAN CASE.

Still in the Tombs, Awaiting Proceedings for His Release.

New York, Nov. 23.—David Hannigan, who was acquitted of the murder of Solomon H. Mann, is to-day in a cell in the Tombs awaiting the action of his counsel in an effort to secure his release. Hannigan's counsel will probably allow him to be committed to an insane institution, and then sue out a writ of habeas corpus, and ask for his release on the ground that he is now sane.

DANBURY'S BIG BLAZE.

Most Destructive Fire That Has Happened in Two Years.

Danbury, Conn., Nov. 23.—The most destructive fire that has visited Danbury for the last two years started in a brick building known as the Keeler block. It was probably caused by an explosion. The building was completely gutted, together with the Hawley block on Main street adjoining. At least fifteen families are rendered homeless, and the loss is estimated at fully $75,000.

CATTLE ARE DISEASED.

Hides from South America To Be Disinfected.

Washington, Nov. 23.—Secretary Morton has officially informed the treasury department that the foot and mouth disease has appeared among the cattle of Brazil. He, therefore, has recommended to the treasury department that all hides coming from all countries of South America be disinfected before being allowed to enter the United States.

SCHLATTER LOCATED.

He Is in Seclusion and Is Thought To Be Fasting.

Denver, Nov. 23.—Francis Schlatter, "the healer," who mysteriously disappeared in the night last week, has at last been positively located. He is resting in seclusion on Joseph Wolf's fruit farm, near Boulder, Col., and it is presumed that he is fasting. The man riding the gray horse in the southern part of the state who pretends to be Schlatter is an impostor.

A MANIAC'S ACT.

Tried To Wreck a Train by Putting Ties on the Track.

Altoona, Pa., Nov. 23.—An unknown man, supposed to be insane, tried to wreck a passenger train on the Clearfield & Cresson railroad by placing a pile of ties on the track at a point between Frugality and Fallen Timber. The obstruction was discovered in time to avert a wreck and the man was arrested and placed in Ebensburg jail.

At the end of his term Governor Werts will resume the practice of law at Jersey City.

The amount of money left in the hands of the State Treasurer at the end of the fiscal year, October 31st, was $893,747.88.

The new school law in New Jersey, which brings all the schools of every township under one management, has compelled a readjustment of school taxes, which in many instances has caused a very large increase in the tax rate in some sections, and thus has given rise to great discontent. This discontent called out a mass meeting of the citizens of North Vineland on Monday evening, which passed a resolution condemning the new law and directing that a suit be brought to test its constitutionality.

Ex-Councilman Spangenburg requests The Press to state that his name was used on the Citizens' ticket without his knowledge or consent. He wants it strictly understood that he is strictly non-partisan in city elections, and says that if we are to have good government this is the way to get it. He will support the Republican ticket this campaign. He believes that Councilman Frost should be returned to the council on account of his good work in carrying through the legislation necessary for the construction of the sewerage system, and believes that it is for the best interests of the city for him to remain in office until the system is completed. To that end he is advising his friends to vote for Mr. Frost.

—For Rheumatism and Gout take "Pura Blood" which contains Hot Springs, Arkansas Waters, under grant from United States Government.

—The choir of Trinity Reformed church will take up the study of Christmas music this evening, under the direction of Organist A. L. Titsworth, and choir leader, Fred S. Cutter.

—Special Thanksgiving services will be held in ths Congregational church Sunday evening by the Christian Endeavor Society. The special music will be furnished by the organ, piano and three violins. The church choir will also assist.

—Fred Breen, of West Second street, one of Manager Mills' efficient city drivers for the U. S. Express Company, has been transferred for a few days to the position of messenger on the Long Branch Railroad between New York and Long Branch.

—A special Thanksgiving service in charge of the Y. P. S. C. E. will be held in the Congregational church next Sunday evening. Rev. James F. Riggs, D. D., of the Theological Seminary in New Brunswick, will make the address, and an instrumental sextette will furnish the music.

A PRETTY PICTURE.

Two Little Children Made Strong and Well by Dr. Greene's Nervura.

The Mother Also Restored to Health By That Grandest of All Medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

MRS. H. SILVER'S LITTLE ONES.

Strong, vigorous and healthy children are what we all want, and how to keep our little ones in good health is a question of the greatest interest to us all. Children are peculiarly liable to nervous disorders; they become nervous, restless, fretful, cross and irritable; their night's sleep is not calm and restful, but they toss restlessly from side to side, murmur or talk in their sleep and wake tired and unrefreshed in the morning. They have an irregular appetite, grow thin and pale, look slight and puny, and their growth and development become stunted.

If your children are sick, give that greatest of all children's remedies, Dr.

MRS. H. SILVER.

Greene's Nervura the great blood and nerve invigorant and health restorer. This wonderful remedy is above all, a family medicine, and its name is a household word in thousands of homes all over the land. It is made from pure and harmless vegetable remedies, is calming, soothing and healing to the nerves, and at the same time strengthens and invigorates the entire system, restoring a healthful color to the cheek, refreshing sleep, strong nerves, stout limbs, and that bounding health and vitality, which all children should have. It is perfectly safe to give children of any age, and its curative and restorative effects are wonderful.

Mrs. H. Silver, of 142 Lewis street, New York City, was not only restored herself to health by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, but her two children, whose portraits are here given, were made strong and well by this grand medicine. Mrs. Silver says:

"I was nervous for four years so that I could do nothing. I went to different doctors, but none could help me. I read so much in the papers about Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy that I thought I would try it. After the first bottle I felt relieved, so I used a couple of bottles more and now I am all right again. I thank Dr. Greene's Nervura for the good it did me.

"I also have two little girls who were sick, weak, and run-down, to whom I gave Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It did them so much good that I cannot be thankful enough. It made them well and strong again, and they are now, thanks to this wonderful remedy, healthy and vigorous. Before I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy I could not eat or sleep. I could not do my housework, but now I am like a different woman. I give this testimonial that other sufferers may read it and know the good Nervura did me and my children."

Use Dr. Greene's Nervura in all nervous diseases of infants and children, and see them improve in health and strength every day and hour.

It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City. He has the largest practice in the world, and this grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is a guarantee that his medicine will cure, and the fact that he can be consulted by anyone at any time, free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this wonderful medicine.

The Cranford bowlers will play the Crescent Wheelmen in this city next Tuesday.

The Casino bowling team requested the Cranford Athletic Club to play the game scheduled for Friday evening on Thursday evening. For some unaccountable reason the Cranford team not only refused to allow the change to Thursday evening, but would play on no other date than the one previously agreed upon.

"Revenge is sweet," and the Crescent bowling team certainly had it last night when they met the P.C.C. bowlers on the alleys of the former. The P. C. C. brought a large crowd with them and were determined if possible to win, but as one of their members remarked afterward, they were stage frightened, and went all to pieces. It was a good game, however, with lots of enthusiasm, and everyone had a jolly time. The Crescents won by 117 pins, as the following score will show:

CYCLING COMMENT.

George P. Smith and Wyatt Barnes took a spin on the Cleveland tandem yesterday afternoon, going to Elizabeth, Rahway and Metuchen.

Advice from Minneapolis are to the effect that the racing men of Minnesota, Iowa and North and South Dakota, are moving for the formation of a professional cyclers league, which shall have its own circuit of meets, and be in every way independent of the L. A. W. At present the plan is only to cover the States named, but if other racing men desire to come in, the league will eventually become a National affair.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

The Y. M. C. A. football team will meet for practice at the Plainfield Bicycle Club house Monday evening.

The Alis football eleven will not play this afternoon, but Captain Phillips is trying to arrange games with the Hamilton Juniors, of New York, and the third team from Pingry's School for next week.

The officials of the New Jersey Athletic Club are looking forward with great pleasure to the annual Thanksgiving Day game on their grounds at Bergen Point, this year. For the second time the New Jersey Athletic Club strong eleven will meet the Pennington Seminary team. Last year the game was very interesting, and the Pennington boys won. This year the New Jersey Athletic Club expects to turn the tables.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

During the deer season of twelve days, which has just closed in South Jersey, at least thirty-five deer were killed in Atlantic and Cape May counties, a greater number than during any previous season for the last twenty years.

—Wm. H. Bohl is building a barn on his property at the corner of Stone street and Greenbrook road.

—Marsh, Ayres & Co. have the contract to paint the house and barn belonging to Mrs. Emma Darling at 120 Rahway road.

—The crosswalk over Crescent and Watchung avenues at LaGrande avenue, which was ordered by the Common Council sometime ago, is now being laid.

—A carload of choice winter apples has just been received by Neuman Brothers, the popular Watchung avenue grocers, and they are selling delicious Greenings and Northern Spies at $2 a barrel.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

THEATRICAL.

"Cruiskeen Lawn," Dan McCarthy's new comedy-drama, which was produced at the Third Avenue last night, proved to be an Irish play of the good old sort. In the role of old "Paddy Myles" Mr. McCarthy has provided himself with a character which gives him ample opportunities to dance jigs and make love. The play was received with enthusiasm.—New York Evening Sun, Tuesday, March 13th, 1894. At Music Hall tonight.

"The Capitol" will be seen at Music Hall on Wednesday evening. This is the latest play written by Augustus Thomas and produced by J. M. Hill. It has just finished a very prosperous run of nine weeks at the Standard Theatre, New York, where its strength and unconventiality were much commended. It deals with Washington society life and is both comic and pathetic. Three characters in it are quite new to the stage—the priest, the lobbyist, and the woman leader of the Royal Cross Society.

—The new overcoats for the borough marshals have arrived.

—Peck has got an extraordinary stock of merino underwear and hosiery, and if you want these goods he can use the room.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Where Did I Get This Dreadful Cough?

No matter; the great question is, how shall I get rid of it? Use THE PINEOLA BALSAM, a soothing combination of the remedies nature has put in the pine and other balsamic trees. It cures the inflammation and tickling in the throat and if taken in time will prevent the spread of the disease to the lungs. Ely's Pineola Balsam is strongly recommended in cases of asthma. Twenty-five cents is the price. Tell the neighbors about it.

Back Again.

Dr. E. B. Lighthill

of New York City,

whose practice in Plainfield has proved such a wonderful success has opened an office at

134 Crescent Avenue

(next door to his former residence) where he can be consulted from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., on Tuesday and Friday

of each week.

DR. LIGHTHILL makes the treatment of deafness, catarrh and diseases of the throat, lungs and heart a specialty.

Piles radically and permanently cured in a few weeks without the use of the knife, ligature or cautery and without pain or detention from business. The most desperate cases yield unfailingly to Dr. Lighthill's unique method of treatment, with guaranteed success. Fistula, fissure and ulcers of the rectum are also completely and permanently cured without the knife or other surgical operation.

Diseases of the bowels, bladder and stomach, mental and nervous derangements, diseases of the skin and blood and all chronic and obstinate complaints affecting the human system, of whatever name or nature, are successfully treated.

DR. LIGHTHILL refers with pardonable pride to the remarkable cures of his former practice in Plainfield and to the reputation which he established throughout the State. He has in his possession hundreds of testimonials from well-known residents of Plainfield and vicinity, which can be seen at his office.

"ONLY SKIN DEEP", yet freckles, sunburn and tan don't add to one's beauty! What then, aside from the dangerous and poisonous "skin cures" so freely advertised, can we use to clear and bleach a bad complexion? Well, why not try your grandmother's cure—lemon juice? It will unite do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. Sprinkler bottles 25 cents at

Capt. Jones of the Rose

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

[Copyright, 1895, by the Author.]

The seven sailors marched aft and came to a stand a little abaft the mainmast. Black Sam advanced himself by a step and exclaimed:

"Capt'n Jones, us men don't mean to do no more work until our wrongs are righted."

The captain, speaking with the cigar in his mouth, halted opposite the men and said: "What are yer wrongs? Are ye too well fed? Are ye growing too fat for the want of work? Say the word, and I'll right them wrongs for ye fast enough."

"Ye've got a sow under that there longboat, Capt'n Jones," said Black Sam. "Would ye give her the wittles us men have to live on and work hard on? No? And why? Because the life and health of a sow is of more consequence to the likes of such men as ye and the owners of this wessel than the life and health of a sailor."

Captain Jones clinched his fist and glared. But what is the use of one man clinching his fist and glaring at seven savage, hairy, resolved British seamen, and the captain might well know that he was but one man to the whole ship's company, for the only mate stood at the rail looking over the side as though he were a passenger willing to listen, but rather anxious not to be "involved," while the carpenter had stepped aft and was dividing his attention between the compass card and the main royal. The captain looked around him. He then puffed a few moments at his cigar, while an expression entered his face that would have persuaded shrewder observers than the sailors he confronted that he intended to keep his temper.

"What have you to complain of?"

Several sailors spoke at once. Black Sam elevated his immense, hairy fist.

"We complain of this," said he. "First, the ship ain't seaworthy."

"Lie number one," said the captain.

"She ain't seaworthy," continued Black Sam, with a menacing note of storm in his deepening voice. "Ye're as good a sailor as we are, I suppose, and ye must know that a ship that needs to be pumped out every four hours ain't seaworthy."

"Next?" said the captain.

"All the wittles is rotten to the heart. Is this food for a man?" And Black Sam, putting his hand in his breast, pulled out a biscuit and extended it to the captain. But the captain looked elsewhere, and Black Sam, with his face full of blood, dashed the biscuit on to the deck at the captain's feet, on which one of the sailors cried out, "See how they run!"

"Lie number two," said the captain. "Next?"

"Yer ship's stores are rotten to the heart," said Black Sam. "The vessel's taking in water faster than she should, and ye know it. The crew are about seven less than the complement of such a vessel ought to be, and that ye know also. And here we are to tell ye this—that we're willing to go on pumping the vessel out for the next three days for our lives' sake, but not for yourn, but that we don't do another stroke of work unless ye shifts yer hellum and heads for the nearest port, where ye can ship more hands and wittles fit for men to eat. But if at the end of three days nothin's done, then we shall give up pumping, take the boats and leave ye and Mr. Chips and the mate to keep the ship afloat by yerselves if ye can. That's yer mind, mates?"

"That's our mind!" was echoed in a hurricane chorus.

The captain looked up aloft at his canvas, then around at the sea, then at his only mate, and at Chips, the carpenter, and at Peter at the wheel. His sulphur colored face was dark with temper. Nevertheless he spoke deliberately:

"This ship's going to make her passage. The leak's nothing, the stores are first class, and there are more of ye than are wanted to do the work of the vessel."

He called to Mr. Johnson, the only mate, who approached him with a glance at the men that was certainly not remarkable for spirit.

"Mr. Johnson," said the captain, 'you've head what's passed?"

"I have, sir," answered the only mate.

"These fellows will go forward," continued the captain. "They will swing in their hammocks, and they will smoke their pipes, but no more stores are to be served out to them—no, not so much as a fragment of that excellent bread which lies wasted on the deck here—until they consent to turn to. Then, I don't doubt, it will be all plain sailing again. Go forward now!" he cried in a voice the sudden ring of which was like the report of a pistol. "Mr. Johnson, I'll take the wheel, while you, Mr. Chips, and Peter trim sail."

"Peter," roared Black Sam, "we men have knocked off work till we're righted. If ye lend the capt'n a hand and side with him agin us"—

And again he advanced his enormous arm and caused his fist to writhe.

"Mr. Cheeps," said Peter, "take this wheel. I am onwell." And letting go the spokes the Dutchman marched forward and joined his shipmates, who roared out a defiant huzza as the whole eight of them, with the cook in their wake, made their way to the forecastle and disappeared.

Sailors have no friends, and Captain Jones knew it. There are societies in Great Britain for the prevention of the ill usage of most things living, from women to dogs, from children to dicky birds, but there is no society for the prevention of cruelty to sailors. Captain Jones knew that he had the power to starve his men into compliance. Nevertheless he passed a very uneasy night. When the morning broke, he and the only mate and Mr. Chips were nearly dead of fatigue, for wind had risen in the hours of darkness, and the ship was a big one, and there were but two men, the third being at the wheel, to let go and clew up and haul down and make snug as best two men might.

When the morning broke, Captain Jones looked as if he had just come out of hospital. Mr. Chips, who stood at the wheel, might readily have passed for a man of 70, and the only mate, who was lighting the galley fire, showed as if he had been towed overboard during the greater part of the night.

"Those blackguards in the forecastle will be wanting their breakfast," said the captain, "and you'll have them laying aft presently and asking to turn to."

The men, however, did not show themselves. They perfectly understood that the ship could not be navigated as things went, and that the captain must come round to their views before the day had passed, and indeed long before the day passed should a change of weather happen presently, and they grinned, man after man, as they furtively peeped through the scuttle and saw old Chips at the wheel looking 70 years old, and Captain Jones as though he was just come out of hospital, and the only mate as though he had been towed overboard, and they preserved their grin, man after man, as they looked aloft and saw the unfurled royals and topgallant sails fluttering, and the staysails hanging loose, and the yards very ill braced indeed.

"We've got yesterday's muck of pork," said Black Sam, "and the bread locker ain't empty. If the old man were the devil himself, we'd weather him out. But the ship mustn't be allowed to sink this side of three days," and forthwith the sailors grimly rose through the hatch and in silence walked to the pumps, which they plied until they sucked, and then returned to the forecastle. But there was no novelty in this proceeding, for they had kept their faith with the captain, and at every four hours throughout the night a gang had turned out to pump the ship.

While Captain Jones, sitting on the skylight, was drinking some coffee which the only mate had boiled, the carpenter, Mr. Chips, munching a biscuit at his side, and the only mate munching another biscuit at the wheel, a sail hove in view. The breeze was light and the sea smooth. Captain Jones hoisted the English ensign union down, and at about 9 o'clock in the morning the two vessels were nearly abreast of each other, the Rose with her topsail to the mast, the yards having been swung by Captain Jones, and Mr. Chips taking the braces to the quarter deck capstan. The stranger was a large, light bark with painted ports. She, too, had backed her topsail.

"There is no use in hailing," said Captain Jones, addressing the only mate. "Lower that quarter boat, Mr. Johnson, and go aboard with Mr. Chips. Tell the captain of the bark that my men have refused duty and ask him if he can oblige us with the loan of a couple of hands to carry the bark to"— And he named a convenient port.

Forthwith a boat was lowered, and in a few minutes Mr. Chips and the only mate were pulling away as for their lives for the big, tight bark with painted ports. The captain, grasping the wheel, stood watching. Now and again a hairy head showed in the forecastle hatch, and the noise of a hoarse laugh floated aft to the ears of Captain Jones. The boat gained the side of the bark, a rope's end was thrown, and the only mate made the boat fast to it. Both men then clambered over the side of the vessel and disappeared.

The captain gazed eagerly, and while he stood looking a hoarse voice roared the following weather worn lines through the forecastle scuttle:

"You parliament of England, you lords of the commons, too,
Consider well what you are about and what you mean to do.
You're now at war with Yankees. I'm sure you'll rue the day
You roused the sons of liberty in North America."

The time passed. Captain Jones stood at the wheel with his eyes fixed upon the bark. Suddenly he ran to the companion way, picked a telescope out of its brackets, and kneeling at the rail directed the glass at the bark. He remained motionless with his eye at the telescope for some minutes, then stood up and sent a glance aloft and a look that swept the wide platform of his own decks, and his hollow, gaunt countenance wore an expression of perplexity, dismay and wrath, all combining in a look that made him appear more than ever as though just out of hospital.

"By this and by that and by t'other," he roared, using words which, as they cannot be described, must be left to the imagination, "who'd have thought it of two such this and that and something else sniggering whelps?" And even as he thus used language which cannot be written the bark swung her yards so as to fill upon the sails, and letting go Captain Jones' boat, which dropped, quietly rocking, astern, glided along her course, her flying jibboom end pointing at something west of north.

Captain Jones stood looking as though bereft of his reason, and many and awful were the sea words which leaped from his lips Again he looked along his deserted decks. There was nothing to be seen in the shape of human nature but a single head showing in the forescuttle, and this head appeared to be graphically describing what its eyes beheld to the hidden mob beneath, else how should Captain Jones account for the continue roar of derisive laughter which saluted his ears? He stood alone upon his deck. Either the only mate and the carpenter had been kidnaped, or they had deserted him, and Captain Jones was perfectly right in not doubting for a moment that they had deserted him.

He rushed forward.

"Men," he bawled, "up with you! You shall have your way. I'm a lonely man. Don't stop to consider. You shall have your way, but you must bear a hand."

Upon this up through the hatch, with the agility of a seaman, sprang Black Sam. He was followed by the cook and Peter, and in a jiffy all hands were on deck.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. is on every wrapper.

DEADLY DRUGS

Denounced by Munyon—Harmless Remedies Make Positive Cures Where Dangerous Dosing Fails. Proof From Honest People Who Have Tried Both Ways.

Mrs. Mangin, 144 W. Twenty-eighth street, New York city, says: "I was victimized by allopathic dostors until my system was filled with poisonous drugs, and at last I declared I would never take another dose of allopathic medicine. I read a great deal about Munyon's new remedies and determined to try them, so last winter when I was attacked by the grip I sent to the drug store for Munyon's Cough Cure and Cold Cure. The first doses relieved me of the frightful pain, and in a few hours I was able to sit up. I was so delighted with the prompt cure that I have used Munyon's Remedies ever since, and always with wonderful success."

The Munyon Remedies are absolutely harmless and effect prompt cures. A separate specific for each disease. Sold by druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

A TONIC DINNER DISH

What We Eat When We Have Asparagus for Dinner.

ITS EFFECTS ON THE KIDNEYS.

Sick Kidneys, and How to Cure Them With Sparagus Kidney Pills.

KIDNEY NERVE TROUBLES.

So-Called Nerve Troubles, Caused by Sick Kidneys and Unfiltered Blood.

THE SICK AND WELL OF IT.

A great deal of our food and drink is medicinal, and we don't know it.

Sometimes the effects are good, sometimes bad.

Asparagus is really a dish of medicine.

It is pleasant enough.

The most modern medicine is.

But the effects are not very strong the way we eat it. The real strength is in the root, and we don't eat that.

The root of asparagus cures kidney troubles and blood troubles.

The two are closely allied. In fact, one causes the other. Kidney troubles cause blood troubles. Blood troubles cause kidney troubles.

This may seem peculiar, but it's true.

To explain: Well kidneys are filters. Clogged kidneys are not. Clogged kidneys cause blood troubles because they don't filter the blood, and unfiltered blood is poisonous.

On the other hand, poisonous blood poisons the kidneys The fact that the kidneys are clogged makes them all the more sensitive to the poison. You get Bright's disease, diabetes, etc. The unfiltered blood has caused it.

The way to get well from all this trouble is to cure your kidneys. They will then filter your blood.

Pure, nourishing, strengthening blood is a guarantee of health.

But how to cure the kidneys, to make them perfectly well and strong, to regulate them, tone them up and clear up their clogginess?

The answer is: Do it with asparagus. Do it with Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

Kidney troubles are Bright's disease, diabetes, nephritis, sleeplessness, backache, sideache, nervousness, evil forebodings, swelling of the feet and ankles.

Blood troubles are rheumatism, gout, neuralgia, anaemia, pale and sallow complexion, chlorsis, depression of spirits, loss of ambition, dizziness.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills cure all these ills and disorders, easily, gently, perfectly.

They act on the kidneys. They cure the kidneys. Whatever disorders clogged kidneys cause. Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills cure. But that's all. They can't do impossibilities.

If your sickness is due to your kidneys be sure that Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will make you well. If not, not.

Many diseases not generally understood, are now known to be caused by unfiltered blood, that is, sick kidneys.

Not all nervous disorders, but many of them, are really the result of unfiltered blood. Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will cure them.

Unfiltered blood contains as its chief impurity uric acid. This is a strong nerve irritant. It causes headache, neuralgia, dizziness, hysteria, gout, rheumatism—a long train of nervous disorders.

As soon as the blood is pure, the irritation will pass, the disorder will be cured. Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will do it by curing the kidneys.

Something quite as important as medicine is hygiene. Care of your health. The science of how to live and eat.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will cure your ills, but if they come back the blame must be laid on you.

For if you work, worry and eat and drink with no regard to the laws of health, there is nothing under the sun that will keep you in perfect health.

You can make your kidneys well with Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills, and with them perhaps one-third of the diseases which you have been taught to think incurable.

You can keep them well by taking a little care of yourself.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills are for sale by all druggists, or will be mailed prepaid to any address for 50 cents a box.

A free book: "A Filter for Your Blood," illustrated, telling about the kidneys, mailed on request. Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago or San Francisco.

DANCING BY THE HIBERNIANS.

They Tender a Ball to The Ladies Auxiliary Last Night.

The first sociable of Division No. 4, A. O. H., that was tendered to the Ladies Auxiliary, No. 1, in the Columbia Cycle Academy, last evening, was a pleasant affair. It was precisely 9:30 o'clock when the grand march took place, the same being well executed by those taking part. The large and spacious dancing surface was well filled during every dance and those who tripped the light fantastic step to the strains from O'Reilly's full orchestra kept it up until early this morning. Those in charge took great pains to see that the best of order was maintained, very much to the satisfaction of those who had come to enjoy a pleasant evening. At 12 o'clock supper was served, and after supper dancing was again resumed.

The officers of Division No. 4, and those who had the sociable in charge were: P. Casey, President; E. Birmingham, vice-president; W. Carty, secretary; C. Reagen, financial secretary; M. Nugent, treasurer; D. J. Shea, floor director; P. O'Keefe and Chas. Lang, assistants; P. Reagen, M. J. Winn: J. Cullinane, Aids; E. Ryan, W. B. Smith, J. Galbraith, committee of arrangements.

A Winter Social.

A sociable is to be held at the Olympia on Wednesday evening, December 4th. The committee in charge consists of Howard F. Woolston, Frank Wyckoff, Henry Frentz and George W. Scribner. Prof. Frazee will furnish the music. Should it rain on that night, the sociable will be postponed one week.

COULDN'T AFFORD TO LOAF.

Four Bottles of Paine's Celery Compound Made Him Well!

There may be in the distant future some remedy as efficacious as Paine's celery compound.

There is none such today.

The sick and ailing who are stretching out their hands for help must take the best that the scientific medical knowledge of the world now affords.

The reasoning that has enabled Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., of Dartmouth college to discover the remarkable formula of Paine's celery compound is the result of the century's work in medicine.

It is by a new and more thoughtful grouping of diseases, from a careful study of their causes, that Prof Phelps has been enabled to see the true relationship of all diseases of the blood and nerves

Neuralgia, sleeplessness, melancholia, hysteria, headache and dyspepsia at once referred themselves to a tired, half-fed and therefore deranged nervous system.

The cure lay in attending to the nutrition of the whole system. This system of cure, simple and clear like most epoch-making ideas, was embodied in the greatest tissue former, nerve-restorer and regulator yet known to science—Paine's celery compound, the one great remedy that makes people well!

Persons who complained of feeling "tired to death" and sought a competent invigorator, as soon as their physicians ordered Paine's celery compound felt that their bodies were actually taking a new start. Their strength rapidly returned. They were no more troubled with sleepless nights, and their days were no longer made wretched by neuralgia and rheumatism.

Constipation, that stores up in the body substances long since worse than useless to the body and a menace to the health, is looked after. Any one troubled with this obstinate hindrance to health will find a positive and lasting cure in Paine's celery compound.

It takes a very short time to settle any doubts on the matter by giving Paine's celery compound a trial.

Mr John Holland, whose portrait is given above, is a parlor car conductor, whose home is in Jersey City. He writes:

"I wish to give my testimony of the great benefit Paine's celery compound has done me. A year ago I had typhoid fever, and later I had to have an operation in my side for an abscess over the liver. This left me very weak I grew very nervous and could not sleep. I was tired even more after I got up than I was when I went to bed. I have taken four bottles of Paine's celery compound, and am perfectly well! I have sent six bottles to some friends in Virginia. One, although he has taken only a bottle of it, feels much better and sleeps well."

Paine's celery compound puts the system on a healthy, strong basis, safe from disease. Try it if you are ailing, and a trial will speedily convince you.

Lucetta Council Dances.

Lucetta Council, Daughters, of Liberty, held a most successful and enjoyable dance last evening in Central Hall. There were about sixty couples in the grand march, which was led by W. W. Stratton and Miss Josie Martin, assisted by G. Sutphen Martin and Mrs. J. W. Robinson. Those in charge were W. W. Stratton, chairman; Mrs. J. W. Robinson, treasurer; Miss Josie Martin, secretary; G. Sutphen Martin Mrs. W. W. Stratton and Mrs. Isaac Wyckoff. Music was furnished by Guttman.

Bitten By a Dog.

A pet dog belonging to Charles Fisk was attacked yesterday with what was supposed to be hydrophobia and bit the coachmen. One of Mr. Fisk's children had a narrow escape from being bitten and was only saved from it by the presence of mind of Miss Mee, sister of the governess. The canine is now being doctored for the disease.

Death from Diphtheria.

Mamie Scheller, the eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Scheller of West Second street, died yesterday of diphtheria. Dr. D. C. Adams was steadily in attendance and all the medical skill possible was used to save the little one's life. Her younger sister, who is also sick with the same disease, is improving.

Talent Recognized.

The Circule Carlo Savante, the swell Spanish club of New York, has engaged Madame Menzeli Bartlett as instructress in all the new ball room and fancy dances. The madame will also arrange new and original figures for the German to be given through the season in Sherry's ball room.

Lecture on Insects.

The pupils in the Franklin public school were treated to an illustrated lecture on "Insects" yesterday afternoon at the close of the school session. Quite a number remained.

The First Skating of the Season.

Henry Brower, Malcolm Barnes, Harold Chandor, Howe Mason and several others enjoyed the first skating of the season on McNabb's pond this morning.

Watchung Park Sociability.

A very pleasant sobial gathering was held last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Cain, of Grandview avenue. The evening was spent very pleasantly with music and dancing, while an elaborate collation was served at about midnight. About sixty were present.

Mrs. V. L. Frazee, wife of Councilman Frazee, and Miss Mamie Lyons, of Orchard place, are spending the day with friends at Raritan.

A Little Fellow's Sickness.

Master Andrew Carney, the young son of A. L. Carney, of Emily street, who for a few weeks has been undergoing surgical operations on his left arm, in the New York Hospital at West Fifteenth street, where he had become quite a favorite, had the misfortune to contract diphtheria from one of the patients that came into the ward where he was before the nature of the disease was known. The little fellow is only seven years old. He was removed to another hospital and every care will be bestowed upon him. His parents are considerably worried. A few weeks ago a number of his playmates paid him a visit at the hospital.

Cut By a Broken Glass.

Theodore Smith, clerk at A. D. Findlay's on East Second street, met with a very painful accident Saturday afternoon about 5 o'clock. He was handling several glasses when one of them fell and in his endeavor to catch the glass he was severely cut on the thumb of his left hand, badly lacerating the member. He suffered a good deal of pain along with the loss of blood. After having the wound dressed he continued at his work.

No Injunction Issued.

There was no mandamus issued against Street Commissioner Meeker to prevent him from building a walk around the property of William Palmer Smith on Belvidere avenue. By mutual agreement the work was stopped for one day, and was resumed this morning. An attempt was made to procure an injunction, but it was without success. The sidewalk will be constructed of crushed stone.

AN ABSENCE OF FORMALITY.

IT MAKES A DELIGHTFUL TIME FOR MR. AND MRS. SQUIRES' GUESTS.

Hope Chapel Bible Students Enjoy Saturday Evening in Sociability and Listening to a Versatile Man—Those Present.

One of the most delightful receptions held in this city in some time was given Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Squires at their beautiful home on Watchung avenue, to the Bible classes taught by H. R. Munger and Silas Yerkes at Hope chapel. There were also a number of the teachers present. The genuine hospitality of both host and hostess was paramount and their home was thrown open wide to receive their guests. Mrs. H. C. Squires received and was assisted by Mrs. S. R. Struthers and Mrs. William B. Ostrom.

The freedom from formality was quite noticeable during the entire evening. After the guests had arrived, they were all provided with seats, and Mr. Squires introduced Mr. Hart, of New York, who entertained those present for over an hour with amusing recitations and songs. Mr. Hart is an artist of no mean merit, and he succeeded admirably in his undertaking, that of pleasing all. His selections included some exceedingly amusing anecdotes about "Lee Thruckmuch" who was an habitual stutterer, and the following songs: "The Turnkey," from Rob Roy; "A Pathetic Ballad," "Yeoman's Wedding Song," "His Own Mother Wouldn't Know Him Now;" "The Belfry Tower," "Standing on the Corner;" "The Verdict Was," and "The Koster's Courtship." Miss Carrie Dewey was the accompanist. He succeeded in keeping his audience in a continual laughter. When Mr. Hart had concluded his programme, Mr. Squires suggested that those present sing one of the chapel hymns. Rev. G. Kenedy Newell took charge and one of the hymns was rendered. The balance of the evening was then devoted to social intercourse, during which excellent refreshments were served in abundance. A feature was an immense cake, which was named the "Wedding Cake," and each one was given a piece to take home in remembrance of the event.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Squires, Rev. and Mrs. G. Kennedy Newell, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Munger, Mr. and Mrs. Silas Yerkes, Mrs. and Mrs. S. R. Struthers, Mr. and Mrs. William B. A Man of Exs.

Ex-Marshal, ex-Health Inspector, ex-Constable, ex-Milkman, and now Farmer Job Coddington, of South Somerville, was visiting friends in the borough a few days ago. Mr. Coddington is a member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, of this city. He received first premium on pumpkins at the late Somerset county fair. His farm adjoins the three-hundred-acre Duke dairy farm, that was purchased by money made from cigarettes.

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhœa of long standing in six hours, with one small bottle of Chambertain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief. It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. R. Armstrong, Manager.

CITIZENS' NOMINATIONS FILED.

Sufficient Signatures to Petitions to Put the Ticket in the Field.

The Citizens' ticket is no more a shadowy, uncertain thing of the future, but something real and definite, for the petitions with the necessary number of signers have been filed at the City Clerk's office and the Citizens' ticket is in the field. With it is the Wheelmen's ticket, which, however, is made up of the same candidates. There are thirty-one signatures attached to the petition for the Citizens' city ticket, among whom the most prominent are W. K. McClure, H. A. Weber, Charles W. DeGraw, C. H. Rugg, A. D. Mallinson, L. S. Pocock, A. E. Hoagland, F. W. Bird and Charles Dickenson. The First ward ticket petition is signed by nine voters, among whom are S. P. T. Wilbur, C. E. Teel, R. O. Howell, and Charles J. Noel. The wheelmen's petition has thirty signers among whom the most prominent are C. E. Teel, H. E. Rider, J. W. VanSickle, Charles E. Vail, A. L. Fritts, John P. Powers, Fred J. Pope, Charles Summers, C. H. Schermerhorn and Charles C. Lister.

The supporters of both the Citizens' and Wheelmen's tickets began work at once among their friends and declare that they will push the regular ticket hard.

DROPPED THE GUN.

And the Charge Narrowly Escaped Hitting Two Persons.

A few days ago William Friday, of Warren township, called at the farm house of Rev. George Bowers, which is near his place for the purpose of getting his son to accompany him on a few hours hunt for rabbits. The dominee's son was anxious to go and went into an adjoining room for his double barrelled gun. His mother, and his sister who was recently married, were entertaining Mr. Friday when the young man appeared with his gun. The weapon by some means fell from the boy's hands to the floor and struck both hammers of the fowling piece with such force as to discharge both barrels which were loaded. The charges fortunately passed between his mother and sister and did no other damage than to tear an ugly hole in the wainscoating, frighten his mother and sister almost out of their wits and scare the youth so as to declare that he would not go hunting then, or even hereafter.

No Place For the Baby.

Mrs. William Wilson, of East Fourth street, called on Justice Mosher this afternoon and wanted to have a warrant issued for the arrest of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gauze, who left a three-year-old girl at her home two or three months ago.

They went to Princeton to live and have refused to come after their child.

Mrs Wilson expects to go away and cannot keep the girl. Justice Mosher and Mrs. Wilson called on Overseer of the Poor Vanderbeek and an effort will be made to return the child to its parents.

To Protect Donors.

The committee of the Firemen's fair have decided to have all the decorations at the Cycle Academy insured in order to protect the donors of flags, etc., from any loss in case of fire.

—Crescent Division, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, will meet for drill Wednesday evening.

Croup is a terror to young mothers. To post them concerning the first symptoms, and treatment is the object of this item. The first indication of croup is hoarseness. In a child who is subject to croup it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the rough cough has appeared it will prevent the attack. It has never been known to fail. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

GRATITUDE AND BENEVOLENCE.

These Qualities Go Hand in Hand on Thanksgiving Day.

There was an unusually large attendance at the Thanksgiving services of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church last evening.

The speaker of the evening was Rev. James F. Riggs, D. D., of Rutgers College, and he was listened to with great interest. He said:

"A Russian essayist says 'gratitude and benevolence seldom meet' but on Thanksgiving Day gratitude and benevolence go hand in hand. Thus we celebrate the benevolence of God and at the same time celebrate our gratitude to him."

He told of the great difference between our countries and others, saying of it:

"We thank God that we are not ground down by despots like those of the East, but are ruled by good men of our own choosing. We are not any better than other men, but, for some reason, God has especially blessed us. God has abundantly supplied our wants. He has provided us with this country, and our young people can look forward, not only to mere existence, as in the East, but to usefulness."

He compared the United States with various countries in different lights, speaking of the Armenian outrages, and of the uniformity of our country in contrast with Turkey and its many different languages and people.

"We don't intend to honor God," he said, "like the monk of the Middle Ages, but we are going to take the gifts of God and use them to work for the Lord. God has given different graces and gifts to different men in the smaller things of life, but the greatest gift, Himself. He gives to all His children, share and share alike."

FRACTURED A RIB.

E. P. Thorn Falls From a Chair With Bad Results.

Edward P. Thorn, the Park avenue fish dealer, sustained a severe injury yesterday afternoon about 5:30. He was at his home on East Front street, opposite Sandford avenue, and was standing on a chair putting a new tip on a gas burner. In getting down he lost his balance and fell over the chair, which was an old-fashioned one with a sharp edge on the back, and fractured one of his ribs on the left side. Dr. Jenkins was called and the usual treatment in such cases given. A heavy hunting-case gold watch was badly crushed against the back of the chair, which probably saved Mr. Thorn a more serious injury. He is, however, very thankful that he can be about and attend to his business.

WATCHUNG AVENUE HOSPITALITY.

Mrs. Isaac L. Miller Entertains Pleasantly At Her Home.

A very pleasant at home was given Satnrday afternoon by Mrs. Isaac L. Miller and her daughter, Miss Miller, at their home on Watchung avenue. They were assisted in receiving by Mrs. E. B. Clark, Mrs. W. D. W. Miller, Miss Marion Bowen, Miss Bessie Taylor and Miss Winifred Sprague. Their charming parlors were very artistically decorated with ferns, roses and immense chrysanthemums. The table decorations were pink and green, consisting of pink roses and smilax. A large number were present and a very enjoyable afternoon was spent.

Burning Nigger Heads.

Some of the members of the Forestry Association, who attended their meeting at Lakewood, have become interested in a scheme for bringing several carloads of pitch pine knots, known among the pines as "Nigger Heads" to Plainfield. These knots ignite quickly and make a glorious and picturesque fire for the hearth, and which is both hot and lasting.

—The case of Hooker against Leland, on contract, was adjourned in Justice Newcorn's court this morning for one week.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. ADVICE FOR THE JUNIORS.

REVS. RANDOLPH AND RICHARDSON TALK TO SECRET SOCIETIES.

Rev. Mr. Randolph Thinks That We Live in Almost a Golden Age—Rev. Mr. Richardson Talks of the Principles.

Grace M. E. church was hardly able to hold the large number of people that desired to be present last evening when Rev. Herbert F. Randolph preached the annual sermon to the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. One hundred and twelve members of the order, representing Franklin and Somerset councils, of this city and North Plainfield, Twilight, of Scotch Plains, William G. Holton, of Dunellen, and Pioneer, of Bound Brook, were present and listened to one of the best discourses ever delivered before the order. The pulpit platform was neatly arranged with various colored chrysanthemums, while on each side was placed an American flag.

After the Scripture selection had been read from the third chapter of Proverbs an anthem was rendered by the choir, with solo parts by Miss Alice Carroll and Miss Angleman. Another selection was rendered by Miss Grace Carroll, Miss Alice Carroll and Charles Hummer, and a duett by the Misses Carroll. Miss Grace Carroll presided at the organ. Mr. Randolph then took his text from Proverbs 22: 28, "Remove not the ancient landmarks which thy fathers have set." In part he said: There is a time in the history of every Nation when the pinnacle of success is reached, a golden age so to speak. A period that is made famous by its poets, scientists and historians. A landmark of the nation. In olden times if anyone dared remove these landmarks it subjected them to the severest punishment.

While perhaps we are not living in a golden age, we are very near it, and today we stand head and shoulders above all behind us. We have no Roman arena, no King or subjects. The great resources of our country are incalcuable, and yet we are only a babe in arms. Men scorn the pick and shovel covered with beads of sweat dropping from the hands of those who labored hard to acquire a fortune for them. There is a spirit on the part of some that would put away the cradle they were rocked in.

There is also a spirit to give the devil a front seat, but there are people who protest against these things and place a safeguard on our institutions. I understand your order represents great and vital fundamental principles. In the first place a member must have a good moral character. You must never remove that landmark; secondly you believe in a Supreme Being, and you should guard well that landmark; thirdly you are in opposition to a union of church and State. God made this distinction many years ago, and man's conscience is an oracle of God; fourthly you believe in fidelity to the public schools, and this we all believe that; fifthly, that the Bible ought to be in the public schools.

It isn't necessary to teach scholars how many spirits stand on the point of a needle or how to split a hair. It is easier to teach a blockhead algebra than to teach a bright boy to tell the truth. A boy's moral sense must be educated or he is just as apt to be a forger or a dynamiter as anything else. Teach them the undefiled word of God.

In the way of advice let me tell you to be careful how you use your weapons, know your foe before you attack him. One of the most unpleasant pastoral visits I ever made was to a home where there was a bull dog with confused ideas, for he didn't know the difference between a pastor and a tramp.

There are men in public office who would not steal a pin in their own homes, yet they would put their hands in the public treasury and take thousands. We all need zeal with knowledge and a spirit of patriotism.

Rev. J. W. Richardson paid the following tribute to the principles of the order of Jr. O. U. A. M., in his sermon at New Market yesterday afternoon:

Brethern of the Order, all hail to your principle! You exhibit another phrase of the brotherhood of men. The secrecy of your ties is not because your deeds will not bear the light: it is the secrecy of the family.

With that secrecy, you go into the sick chamber and watch over the delirious brother who wrestles with damp sweat and death, and you fan his fevered and cool his parched tongue—and, the world knows it not. With that same secrecy you go into the bereaved home with the consolations of religion; the door is closed against want; the orphans are protected—and, the world knows it not.

You see a brother in distress, with that secrecy you go to him and place in his hand the kind of sympathy which has commercial value in the markets, and the world does not know it—no one calls him a pauper. This is the secrecy and tie of a family. It reflects honor upon the organization.

But in addition to this care of the sick, and burial of the dead, is the undying love you cherish for your Fatherland. Like an army, with steel swords and burnished rifles, you stand on guard about the principles that have made America grand in the sight of nations. I stood in the cemetery at Waterbury, and united in a service of love over a fallen brother. As the strains of the dirge floated out upon the still air, a thought with golden wings, phœnix-like, sprang into life from the ashes of that mound. The heart that had beat warm with patriotism was cold and silent, but above the old flag was unfurled. Ah, men may pass away, but how deathless is the principle for which Americans contend. So hopes makes bright the future. Yourtoo, shall pass away. But over that sacred pile of yellow dust which covers your dust, other comrades shall sing a pean of hope, and so on, through the years; the dear old flag always unfurled, till in the dawn of that brighter morning, when Christ, the Elder Brother, shall come, the emblem of liberty shall give place to the banner of eternal victory over sin and wrong.

SHOT AT A FLEEING MAN.

Wolfe's Tailor Shop the Scene of Attempted Robbery.

Early yesterday morning Policeman Cooney was standing in the vicinity of Madison avenue and heard the sound of crashing glass. He hurried along that thoroughfare between Front and Second streets, and when he reached the tailor shop of A. Wolfe observed that the glass in the front door had been broken. He heard another crash at the side of the building and going in that direction saw a man, who had evidently heard the officer approaching, disappearing in the darkness. Policeman Cooney recognized the fleeing man as James Dunavan, of West Second street, and called to him to halt, but he showed no disposition to stop and the officer fired his revolver at him, but without effect, for he escaped. The rest of the police were notified to look out for Dunavan, and yesterday Sergeant Kiely arrested him on Park avenue.

It is supposed he was endeavoring to gain an entrance to the tailor shop in order to commit a theft. He has been arraigned in court a number of times previous on various charges. This is the third time that the tailor shop has been broken into within a short time.

Dunavan was taken before Justice Newcorn this afternoon and committed to the county jail to await the action of the grand jury.

A BEGGAR'S PROMISE.

He Said He Would Return to Plainfield, and He Did.

There was the usual Monday morning batch of prisoners at the city court this morning. The first was Daniel Jones, who was arested sometime ago for begging but promised to return to Plainfield as soon as he was released as the people treated him so well. He was sent to jail for thirty days.

Edward Bergen, one of the gang which has been causing so much trouble at the North Avenue station evenings, was sentenced to a fine of $10 or thirty days in jail He took the latter. The police are making a determined effort to break up this gang. Lee Johnston, a colored bootblack at the station, was charged with beating young Ephriam Hatchet last evening on West Third street. After hearing both sides of the case Judge Coddington decided that the lad deserved the beating and suspended sentence.

Mrs. Gedney's Funeral.

The funeral services of Mrs. Gedney were held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from her late home on Orchard place, and were private. Rev. Cornelius Schenck officiated and read the funeral service. Burial was in the receiving vault at Hillside cemetery.

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

KIRKLAND HOME.

The Admiral Says There Are No Charges Against Him.

New York, Nov. 25.—On the French line steamer La Bourgogne, which arrived yesterday, was Admiral Kirkland, who was relieved by Secretary Herbert from the command of the European squadron at that time lying off Marseilles. From the pier Admiral Kirkland went to the Mansion house, Brooklyn. After a hearty meal and a sound nap the bluff old seaman, who, from his sandy hair, florid complexion and fiery temper, has gained the pseudonym of "Red Bill," appeared in the lobby of the hotel and chatted with a reporter of the United Press about his detachment. Like all well regulated naval men, the admiral had no criticism for the acts of his superiors. A Washington dispatch of recent date, containing the alleged reasons for his detachment, was shown to him, but he pushed it away impatiently. Two reasons are assigned in the Washington dispatch for Secretary Herbert's recall of the admiral. First, his injustice to a chaplain: second, his writing a letter to President Faure of France, congratulating him upon his election. The admiral declared that he was not going to Washington at present and that he had simply been detached and that is nothing uncommon in the navy. The admiral declared that there were no charges against him. He said, regarding the Faure incident, that he and the president of France were old friends and that the letter of congratulation he wrote him at the time of his elevation was purely a personal matter.

REV. F. H. SMITH RESIGNS.

Gives Up His Pastorate After His Trouble in the Courts.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 25.—Rev. Frank Hyatt Smith yesterday resigned as pastor of the North Avenue Congregational church. Mr. Smith was recently before a United States court charged with sending scurrilous postal cards through the mails and was discharged after being pronounced insane at the time of writing the cards. His letter stated that he wished the resignation to take effect at the end of this month. It had only words of commendation for everybody connected with the church, thanked the members for the many kindnesses extended to the minister and his wife. The resignation was accompanied by a letter from Mr. Smith's brother, which stated that the letter from the pastor was written by himself and that he was fully aware of its meaning, and that he was in feeble health. The society will act on the resignation at a meeting to be held Friday evening.

IT IS MANHATTAN DAY

New Yorkers Take Atlanta By Storm.

Hotels Crowded and Many of the Visitors Sleeping and Eating in Their Cars—Mayor Strong the Lion of the Hour and Troop A the Pet of All.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 25.—This is Manhattan Day at the Cotton States exposition and New York to-day owns Atlanta. They are here by the thousands and the hotel corridors present the appearance of a national convention. Chicago made a grand effort while celebrating her day here, but the New Yorkers are eclipsing in attendance and interesting ceremonies anything ever seen before. Mayor Strong is the lion of the hour and troop A the pet of the city. New York's genial executive has made many friends since his arrival and the gallant troopers have created a genuine sensation. As one Georgian put it, "Chicago sent a lot of military, but we don't care for men. New York has sent her mounted troop, and we know something about horses." The manner in which Major Ross' men execute manoeuvres in narrow and crowded streets cause wonder, and the manner in which the men ride is a surprise to all.

A Notable Parade.

The parade this morning was a notable one with Troop A and the Gate City guards as the main features. The streets are crowded with visitors and residents, and everything possible is being done for the comfort of the New Yorkers. The oratory at the exposition grounds this afternoon will be limited to five minute speeches, except in the case of Seth Low, president of Columbia college, who will deliver the principal address. Inspection of the exposition buildings will follow the speech-making, and this evening a full dress reception and ball will be given by the New Yorkers. As the New York state building is too small for the people who have been invited the reception will be given in the Kimball house.

Reception to the Ladies.

Mrs. Joseph Thompson, of the board of lady managers, gave a reception to the ladies from New York and Brooklyn at her country residence yesterday afternoon. Mayor Strong and party attended the reception after church services. Last evening William Berri of the Brooklyn Standard-Union gave a dinner at the Argon. Among those present were Mayors Strong of New York, Schieren of Brooklyn and King of Atlanta; Mayor-elect Wurster of Brooklyn, Hon. Seth Low, Charles A. Collier, president of the exposition; Clark Howell, Jos. Howard, jr., Murat Halstead, St. C. McKelway, congresman Charles A. Bennett, J. Weaver Page and William Cullen Bryant.

Hotels Overcrowded.

All of the big hotels are full and hundreds of the New Yorkers and Brooklynites sleep and eat on their special trains, which are side-tracked near the depot. Among the arrivals last night were Col. John R. Fellows, Col. Wm. L. Brown and ex-Mayor Gilroy of New York. All trains from the north came in sections and so heavily loaded that most of them were behind time. The New York Press club delegation, headed by Jos. Howard, jr., arrived late last night 125 strong.

THE WAR IN CUBA.

Slight Engagement in La Gloria—Rebel Prisoners Murdered.

Santiago de Cuba, Nov. 15, via Key West, Fla., Nov. 25.—On November 12, Gen. Cannellas and Col. Segura had an engagement with the rebel leaders, Perequito Perez and Bonne, in La Gloria, in the Guantanamo district. Both sides had only small bands of men. The fight lasted about half an hour and the Spaniards had two killed and four wounded. The rebels had two wounded. Gen. Cannellas afterwards visited Malabet, Cuero, Hatibonico, Morrillo and Playa Boracha, all these places being in the Guantanamo district. He asserts that he has not seen any signs to prove that the Cuban leader, Carrillo, has landed in that neighborhood as reported.

Again Killing Prisoners.

The Spaniards have resumed their old practice of killing Cuban prisoners, giving as an excuse that the captives tried to escape. Within the last few days they have murdered four or five such unfortunates in the San Luis jurisdiction. The government has built thirty-four forts, a large barracks, a hospital and thirteen towers of defence in the districts of Daiquiri, Vinent and Juragua.

Insurgents Enter a Village.

On November 14 a party of rebels under Col. Pancho Sanchez, approached the Songo railroad station and, after firing on the fort, succeeded in entering the village. They killed one soldier and wounded six. Many men of the village followed Sanchez's party.

19 PROBABLY DROWNED

An American Ship Lost Off the Irish Coast.

The Captain and His Wife Among Those Believed To Have Perished. The Chief Officer and Five of the Crew Land in a Small Boat in an Exhausted Condition.

London, Nov. 25.—The chief officer and five of the crew of the American ship Belle O'Brien, Capt. Colley, from San Fransisco, June 19, for Queenstown, have landed in a small boat at Kerry Head, south of the entrance to the river Shannon, Ireland. They were in an exhausted condition when they reached the shore. The chief officer, after he had somewhat recovered, reported that he and the men with him left the ship on Nov. 18. She was then 130 miles north-northwest of Kerry Head. Three other men embarked in the long boat, but were lost sight of shortly after leaving the ship. Capt. Colley, his wife and fourteen of the crew were left on board the ship, which was fast making water. It is believed that the vessel has foundered.

VALKYRIE FOR SALE.

Dunraven Believed To Have Given Up All Hope of Another Race.

New York, Nov. 25.—The Herald's special from Boston says: Since matters have turned out as they have regarding the Defender and Valkyrie, and as the Defender people, in all probability, will never start their boat in a race against the Valkyrie under her present management, the statement is made, semi-officially, that the Valkyrie is for sale and is now on the market. This shows plainly that Lord Dunraven now does not expect a race next year on this side. The Valkyrie can be purchased at a reasonable figure and the Philadelphians, who thought of buying her last fall and racing her the coming season against the Defender, would do a good thing in purchasing her. This would put the boat in racing in American waters and with the Defender meeting the Valkyrie, yatchsmen would have a chance to size up Dunraven's statements as to the Valkyrie's superiority over the Defender.

ONE KILLED; ONE WILL DIE.

Escaping Gas Wrecks a House at Saxenburg, Pa.

Butler, Pa., Nov. 25.—Edman Heller, aged 70, was killed by an explosion of gas in his house at Saxenburg yesterday, and his daughter, Minnie Heller, was so badly injured that she will probably die. Minnie, who kept house for her father, arose early to prepare breakfast for him. She had just touched a match to the stove when an explosion occurred that completely wrecked the house, nothing but the foundation remaining to mark the place where it had stood. The roof was blown 200 yards away. Mr. Heller was thrown a long distance and was crushed by the falling timbers. The disaster was caused by a leaking gas pipe in the cellar that had fill the house with the escaping gas.

His Condition More Serious.

London, Nov. 25.—A dispatch received by the Central News this morning from Rome says that the pope's condition is more serious than it was last evening and that some concern is expressed among the vatican officials.

She Wants To Become a Notary

Columbus, O., Nov. 25.—Miss Nellie C. G. Robinson, a woman attorney of Cincinnati, has instituted proceedings in mandamus in the supreme court to compel Gov. McKinley to issue her a commission as a notary public. The governor claims that the law giving women the right to vote in school elections does not give the right to act as notaries. The suit is friendly, and brought to test the matter.

IS AUTHOR DUMAS DEAD?

Report in Paris That the Noted Writer Has Succumbed.

Paris, Nov. 25.—It is rumored this morning that Alexander Dumas, fils, the distinguished author, is dead. The report has not been confirmed, but it is known that M. Dumas' condition is desperate.

Sketch of His Career.

Alexandre Dumas, the younger, son of the late M. Alexandre Davy Dumas, novelist and dramatic writer, was born in Paris July 28, 1824. He received his education in the College Bourbon. At the age of 17 he published a collection of poems, "Les Peches de Jeunesse," a work of small literary merit. He traveled with his father in Spain and in Africa, and on his return wrote "Les Aventures de Quatre Fennes et d'un Perroquet," published in 1846-7. He may be said to belong to the sensuous school of French literature. His principal work of fiction, "Le Dame aux Camelias," became one of the best known productions of the day. A dramatic version was played in 1852, after having been interdicted by M. Leon Faucher, and, reproduced in Verdi's opera, "La Traviata," created a still greater sensation.

Dramatic Exponent of Demi-Monde.

M. Dumas, who wrote many dramatic pieces, is considered by the public the greatest dramatic exponent of the demi-monde. A comedy by him, "Les Idees de Madame Aubray," was produced in Paris early in 1867, and his "Visite de Noces" and "La Princess Georges" were brought out at the Gymnase Dramatique in 1871. In 1872 he published "L'Homme-Femme, which repeated the thesis of his novel "L'Affaire Clemenceau," and a dramatic version of it was produced at the Gymnase in 1873, under the title "La Femme de Claude," a play which was revived at the Rennaissance theatre by Sarah Bernhardt in 1894. M. Dumas' fine collection of pictures was sold in 1892 for more than 500,000 francs.

DIED IN GREAT AGONY.

Death of a Boy from What Is Believed To Have Been Hydrophobia.

Pittsburg, Nov. 25.—Daniel Donnelly, the 5-year-old son of John Donnelly, of Undercliff, this county, died at his home yesterday from what the coroner believes was hydrophobia. The latter part of last July a dog bit the boy in the cheek. The wound soon healed and did not trouble him in any way. Saturday night the boy became delirious and in bed shouted: "Oh, take that dog away. It's going to bite me." This terrified expression was repeated during the night and at times the little fellow clutched the bed clothes in anger as a dog does a bone. After several hours suffering the boy went into convulsions and expired at 8 oclock in the morning.

REED IN WASHINGTON.

The Prospective Speaker Ready for the Opening of Congress.

Washington, Nov. 25.—Hon. Thomas B. Reed arrived in the city last evening over the Pennsylvania road on the "limited" from New York city. He was immediately driven to the Shoreham hotel, owned by Gov. Morton. That hostelry has been Mr. Reed's headquarters for several years past, and it will be the base of his operations this congress, when he is not presiding in the house. The prospective speaker declined to talk about the contests that are being waged for committee chairmanships and the minor elective offices of the house.

He will be held to await the action of the grand jury.

THE POSTAL SERVICE

Annual Report of the Postmaster General.

Revenues Seriously Affected by the Recent Business Depression—Gross Abuse of Second Class Rates Also a Cause of the Deficit—Extension of Civil Service Recommended.

Washington, Nov. 25.—Postmaster-General Wilson in his annual report of the operations of the postoffice department remarks that the financial and industrial depression which has seriously affected the revenues of the postal service for the past two years and disappointed the estimates of his predecessor, extended far enough into the fiscal year, 1895, to make an unusually wide gap between revenues and expenditures. It is gratifying, however, to report that a large part of this deficiency occurred in the first quarter of the year and that since then the revenues of the department have reflected the general returning of prosperity of the country.

Gross Abuse of Second Class Rates.

He ascribes the gross abuse of second class rates of postage as the chief cause of the yearly deficit in postal revenues. He repeats and endorses the recommendations of his predecessors, Bissell and Wanamaker, for an amendment of the law in regard to the transportation of second class matter and says: "It is the estimate of the department that two-thirds in weight of all the matter carried in the mails is, under existing laws and classifications, carried as second class matter, at the rate of one cent a pound, where it is not actually carried postage free. The aggregate of second class matter in the year 1894, was 299,000,000 pound.

A Loss of 7 Cents Per Pound.

During the past year it increased to over $312,000,000, a growth of over 13,000,000 pounds. Deducting the weight of that which is known as "county free," being the matter which is circulated among subscribers free of postage in the respective counties of publication, estimated to be 46,820,185 pounds, there remained 265,314,382 pounds, which returned, at the rate of one cent per pound, a revenue of $2,653,143.82. The average cost to the department of transporting and handling this matter is estimated at eight cents per pound.

Civil Service to Carriers.

Speaking of the extension of civil service rules to letter carriers, he says: "An indispensible basis of good service has been laid by placing the carrier force under the civil service system, and no efforts should be spared by the department to insure a high morale in this force and to familiarize the idea among individual carriers that as they enter the service by the merit system alone, so, likewise they remain in it by no tenure, but that of the faithful and efficient discharge of duty which demand self respect and honorable living.

Wants the Service Extended.

The postmaster general desires civil service methods to be carried still further and higher in the postoffice department. He says: "Two of my assistants are charged, each, with the expenditure of over $40,000,000 annually, together with the management and discipline of tens of thousands of employes. The duties of the other two are not less onerous and multiplex. If such officials are to be real heads of their bureaus, intimately acquainted with all the machinery and working of them, competent to direct and able to infuse their own intelligence and zeal among their subordinates, they sould have a tenure at least as assured from the mutations and chances of political contest as those subordinates. The continuity of the department should be preserved in changes of administration not only along the line of its subordinate and seperate service but in that larger grasp of its history, its daily work and its healthful progress, which is found alone with those who direct and control its various bureaus. In consequence, therefore, in the judgment of one of my recent predecessors, at least three af the assistant postmaster generals should secure their office by a civil service or merit tenure and not by a political tenure.

As to Fourth-Class Postmasters.

"The question of extending civil service methods to the selection of fourth-class postmasters has naturally received my attention since I have been at the head of this department. It is beset with difficulties which my experience as a representative in congress of a large country district, during three changes of administration, brought home to me more clearly than they might appear to a theoretical reformer or to the representative of a city constituency. I have studied various bills introduced in both branches of congress in recent years, and welcomed suggestions from other quarters. But I do not find myself able to make, as yet, any specific recommendations on this important subject in the line of legislation which has been proposed.

"Baby" McKee Convalescent.

The scarlet fever quarantine, which for six weeks has confined the child to the second floor of the house, has been raised.

Hotel and Barn Burned.

Danielson, Conn., Nov. 25.—The hotel of George W. Butts, with barn and contents, at Williamsville, was entirely destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. Loss, about $4,500. No insurance.

What is the Board of Trade doing?

The Summit Record thinks that a few hangings would improve the moral tone of Union county.

New Brunswick is going to ask for a bill from the incoming Legislature giving them a Councilman-at-Large, so in the future to prevent any more deadlocks.

The Illinois State Board of Arbitration have only been in working order for three months, yet out of thirty controversies between employes and employers they have amicably settled all but one.

When Governor-elect Griggs takes his seat New Jersey will have had four Republican Governors. The first was William A. Newell, elected in 1856, the second was Charles S. Olden, elected in 1859, and the third was Marcus L. Ward, elected in 1865.

With reference to the Freehill murder case the Elizabeth Journal says editorially:

A tramp, armed with burglars' tools and a deadly weapon, is pursued by an officer of the law. He shoots and kills the officer to escape arrest. If that is not murder, what is it? If a vicious man, armed for burglary and deadly assault, kills an officer who is discharging what he thinks is his duty—they will agree—what protection is there for faithful officers if such a man escapes adequate punishment on a technicality? This undoubtedly expresses the sentiment of many people in this county with respect to the verdict rendered this morning. It is not a sentiment against court or counsel or jury, but against the legal condition and technicalities which prevent the punishment of murderous tramps and burglars.

Acknowledgments.

The ladies in charge of the French booth and the German booth of the Muhlenberg Hospital Kermess desire to acknowledge the liberal and valuable aid gratuitously given to them by Messrs. Pearson and Gayle, and also Marsh & Ayers, who not only furnished the materials for the said booths, but erected and decorated them, and aided the ladies in every way in their power to make them successful.

THEATRICAL.

"The Fire Patrol," a new melodrama, will be presented at Music Hall Nov. 28th. It was written by the author of "The Midnight Alarm," which played a successful engagement here but a short time ago. "The Fire Patrol" was presented in New York city for three weeks in the early part of the season and was warmly received. It serves to introduce a fire patrol wagon with two magnificent horses. This is but one of the many thrilling situations in this really clever melodrama. A matinee will be given.

Society is likely to be largely represented at Music Hall Wednesday night when "The Capitol" is to be seen there. This latest specimen of what may be called the fine-clothes dama has just ended a nine-week's run at the Standard Theatre, New York, during which it was tumultuously applauded by crowded houses. J. M. Hill has given it very beautiful scenery and a company of excellent players. In writing "The Capitol" Augustus Thomas aimed to disclose hitherto unused dramatic and comic material in Washington social and political life.

A Growth of Two Years.

Silas Yerkes, a teacher of a Bible class at Hope chapel, celebrated his second anniversery as a teacher yesterday. When he took the class two years ago he had 37 members; now he has 135 members.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. A DREAM OF HEAVEN.

EDWARD FOSTER TEMPLE'S IDEA OF A HAPPY HEREAFTER.

The Bright and Beautiful Condition of the Soul In the Abode Beyond the Grave. Reasoning That Brings Comfort to the Bereaved.

There is nothing in life so interesting as death. Whether we have an immortal soul and what becomes of it when the spirit is out of the earthly body is a problem ever in the human mind, and one that ever cries to us trumpet tongued as we stand by the side of our beloved dead. In Today Edward Foster Temple declares his conviction of a bright and happy spiritual life in an article entitled "A Dream of Heaven." He begins by saying:

"In my conception of heaven there are bloom and bird song very much akin to the bloom I see by the wayside and the bird song I hear under my window. When my eyes open to the experience of the hereafter, I expect to be greeted, not by something marvelous, but by familiar sights and sounds. Why may not even nature have its spiritual counterpart? Before the violet existed as a substance it existed as an idea in the thought of God. Why, then, may not that mental conception continue to exist after the substance itself has perished, so that when the violet is no longer visible to our natural vision we may still know it as a violet through our sense of spiritual recognition? I cannot believe that anything loses its identity by dying. Because the flower withers when the first frost touches it and before long becomes a heap of unsightly decay it is not evidence that the flower ceases to exist any more than the pulseless form of a man arrayed in his burial clothes is evidence that his life is forever extinct. Some one will say perhaps, 'There is a presupposition to immortality in the case of man because of his spiritual attributes.' How do we know that vegetation has no spiritual attributes? Who indeed among the wisest who ever lived has actually demonstrated when the vegetable creation ends and the animal creation begins?"

Mr. Temple's belief that heaven is nothing more or less than a glorified earth is thus beautifully expressed:

"I believe that everything in nature has a spiritual form which is the exact likeness of its material form. The pattern of what has been always must be, and the heaven which I cherish in my holiest dream, and which I expect to realize after my feet have crossed the threshold of this hereafter, is only this beautiful earth transfigured. There will be laughter and sunshine, tinted sky and springing grass blade, running brook and melodious bird song just the same as we experience here, only we shall know them then, not as tangible things, but as conditions of soul. According to the ancient conception of heaven, which some believe even today, it is a place where the elect spend eternity in the worship of deity, but I do not see why it is not just as reasonable to suppose that the lover of flowers will have flowers, that the lover of birds will have birds, that the lover of sunshine will have sunshine and that the homage we render deity will be our willing and faithful care for something we love rather than any mere vocal and conventional praise.

"Beecher always thought that going to heaven was going to claim one's own. He wanted no band of crape tied to his door when he died, but in place of it a wreath of beautiful flowers. He wished it to be understood that the transition from the here to the hereafter was not something to be regretted or dreaded, but something to be rejoiced in as a triumphant going home."

That we shall meet in another world the friends whose departure has wrung our hearts in this, Mr. Temple firmly believes, as this paragraph proves:

"The reunion of friends is another feature that cannot be omitted from any rational conception of heaven. We are often told that the future is a sealed book. We see our friends die and cannot follow them into the other world and come back and demonstrate the absolute certainty of a continued existence after death. That is true. But, standing beside them when their breath grows fainter and fainter, when they have taken their final leave of us, and are only waiting until the glad spirit can be wholly freed from a wornout frame, what does it mean when they see faces which we do not see and hear voices which we do not hear? It sometimes happens that before the natural vision has closed the spiritual is opened, and the hand of the dying is not only put into ours for a pressure of affectionate parting, but is at the same time put into that of an angel for a pressure of affectionate greeting."

That there is progress even in heaven is a theory vigorously maintained by Mr. Temple thus:

"The law of progress is a universal law. It operates as distinctly in the realm of spirit as in the realm of matter, and is concerned both with the evolution of a planet and the growth of a human soul. I believe that the future state is a state of progression. Growth is essential to happiness. While we are subject to bodily limitations it may be that our growth is obstructed. There are sometimes physical infirmities which prevent us from reaching the heights we aspire to, but when these obstructions are removed by death we have no laudable excuse for staying behind.

"'To me,' said Goethe, 'the external existence of my soul is proved from my idea of activity. If I work incessantly until my death, nature is bound to give me another form of existence when the present can no longer sustain my spirit.' Open the door of heaven but a little way and we must surely see movement toward higher ends. This life is but the beginning of the life God has mapped out for the human soul. Infinite development is before us. Our longings and our affections have a meaning which the present cannot fully unfold. There are conditions of glory which the human spirit can attain to only in the hereafter, joys and hopes and attainments which reach out to other conditions of being, and the more we observe, the more we think, the closer we live to the inexorable laws which govern the evolution of a true manhood, the more we are inclined to believe the poet that "'Man's heart the Almighty to the future hath set

By secret but inviolable springs.'

Whether Mr. Temple's reasoning is sound philosophy or only good theology, it is certainly comforting, and no one with a heart sore from recent bereavement will be disposed to regard it either cynically or hypercritically.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

If a young lady "throws herself away," understand she has married for love; if she is "comfortably settled," understand that she has married a wealthy old man whom she hates.

THE BANANA TREE.

Its Many Uses In the World of Commerce and Manufacture.

In the West Indies the dried leaves and prepared portions of the stem of the banana tree are used as packing materials. Fresh leaves are used to shade young coffee or cacao seedlings in nursery beds and to cover cacao beans during fermentation. The young unopened leaves are so smooth and soft that they are used as "dressing" for blisters. In India the dried stalk of the plantain leaf is used as a rough kind of twine, and the larger parts are made into small boxes for holding snuff, drugs, etc.

In the Malay peninsula the ash of the leaf and leaf stalk is used instead of soap or fuller's earth in washing clothes, and a solution of the ash is often used as salt in cooking. In the Dutch Indies the skin of the plantain is used for blackening shoes. The juice which flows from all cut parts of the banana is rich in tannin and of so blackening a nature that it may be used as an indelible marking ink. In Java the leaves of the "wax banana" are covered on the underside with a white powder which yields a valuable wax, clear, hard and whitish, forming an important article of trade. The ashes of the leaves, stem and fruit rind are employed in Bengal in many dyeing processes. In Siam a cigarette wrapper is made from the leaves.

Fiber is got from the stems of many kinds of bananas. The most valuable is the "manilla hemp" of commerce, which holds the chief place for making white ropes and cordage. Old ropes made of it form an excellent paper making material, much used in the United States for stout packing papers. The manilla hemp industry is a large one. About 50,000 tons of fiber, valued at £3,000,000, are annually exported from the Philippine islands. The manilla hemp plant is grown exclusively in the southeastern part of the Philippines, and all attempts to grow it elsewhere have failed. Many articles are made from manilla hemp—mats, cords, hats, plaited work, lace handkerchiefs of the finest texture and various qualities of paper. At Wohlau, in Switzerland, an industry has been started for making lace and materials for ladies' hats from it. By a simple process it is made into straw exactly resembling the finest wheat straw for plaiting. —London Spectator.

A LITTLE LECTURE ON WOMEN.

One of Bret Harte's Characters Describes the Contrariety of the Sex.

In a previous chronicle which dealt with the exploits of Chu Chu, a Californian mustang, I gave some space to the accomplishments of Enriquez Saltillo, who assisted me in training her, and who was also brother to Consuelo Saltillo, the young lady to whom I had freely given both the mustang and my youthful affections. I consider it a proof of the superiority of masculine friendship that neither the subsequent desertion of the mustang or the young lady ever made the slightest difference to Enriquez or me in our exalted amity. To a wondering doubt as to what I ever could possibly have seen in his sister to admire he joined a tolerant skepticism of the whole sex. This he was wont to express in that marvelous combination of Spanish precision and Californian slang for which he was justly famous.

"As to thees women and their little game," he would say, "believe me, my friend, your old Uncle 'Enry is not in it. No; he will ever take a back seat when lofe is around. For why? Regard me here! If she is a horse, you shall say, 'She will buck jump,' 'She will ess-shy,' 'She will not arrive,' 'She will arrive too quick.' But if it is thees women, where are you? For when you shall say, 'She will ess-shy,' look you, she will walk straight, or she will remain tranquil when you think she buck jump, or else she will arrive, and, look you, you will not. You shall get left. It is ever so. My father and the brother of my father have both make court to my mother when she was but a senorita. My father think she have lofe his brother more. So he say to her: 'It is enofe! Tranquilize yourself. I will go. I will efface myself. Adios! Shake hands. Ta-ta! So long! See you again in the fall.' And what make my mother? Regard me! She marry my father on the instant! Of thees women, believe me, Pancho, you shall know nothing. Not even if they shall make you the son of your father or his nephew."—From "The Devotion of Enriquez," by Bret Harte, in Century.

An Original Cigar Cutter.

Then our guide called our attention to the desk, and upon it stood the most exquisitely perfect miniature reduction of the guillotine it is possible to imagine. It is in highly polished dark redwood and only relieved by the glitter of the keen steel knife, crescent shaped and properly weighted, like the knife of its big and murderous sister, the real guillotine, but only an inch or two wide. We fell into ecstasies over this pretty albeit rather sinister toy and found on touching the various springs that the plank fell into place, the aperture for the head of the victim closed duly and the wee knife fell with a proper thud.

We asked the use of this small marvel, when the guide smiled, and taking from his pocket a cigar, with the rapidity born of long practice, laid it on the plank, where it was held in position by a spring, touched the various knobs, and in a twinkling the tip of the cigar was sliced off by the keen knife, and it was ready for smoking. It is natural to infer that the men of our party snipped off the ends of all their cigars before we left the premises, as well as we Parisiennes were amused at playing the executioner in a harmless manner with this dainty little guillotine.—Paris Letter.

Much Worse.

Mr. Gibbs went to an entertainment, and by mistake sat on his neighbor's silk hat, reducing it to a shapeless mass. The owner of the hat was naturally highly indignant and breathed threats of vengeance.

"Sir," said Mr. Gibbs calmly, "I am very sorry, and must admit that I was awkward. But," he added complacently, "it might have been much worse."

"I don't see how it could have been," roared the victim.

"Oh, yes, it could!" said Gibbs. "I might have sat down on my own hat."—Tit-Bits.

Capt. Jones of the Rose

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

[Copyright, 1895, by the Author.]

"See that bark?" roared the captain. "The mate and Mr. Chips have deserted me for her. They've stolen my boat. No! I'm not going to stop to pick her up. She'll be £15 against Mr. Johnson and six months atop of it for robbery. I'm going to follow that bark. I'm go-

"Men," he bawled, "up with you!"

ing to get those two men out of her. If the bark don't surrender 'em, I'm going to run her down. Turn to now, my lads, and you shall have your way."

"Well, we see ye're in a hurry, capt'n," said Black Sam, "and as ye know what our wrongs is and as ye mean to right 'em in the manner I took the liberty of pointing out yesterday, vy, we'll turn to. Give yer orders, and ye'll find us willing."

The captain forthwith gave his orders. His commands would not be understood by the landsman. Enough if I say that in a very short time the Rose, fully clothed in canvas, was standing with her head direct for the bark, an able seaman at her wheel, the captain pacing the quarter deck, the cook preparing breakfast for the men in the galley, and the sailors, each of them with a glass of grog in him, looking at the distant figure of the bark over the bows.

The Rose, as I have said, was a clipper. The wind had somewhat freshened, and in this pursuit the vessel brought it about a point before the beam. Far ahead leaned the bark, tall and unsightly, heeling out to the sun a space of green copper, while at this moment a foretopmast studding sail went slowly soaring to the yardarm. Captain Jones gave a loud laugh of contempt. He knew that his ship could sail three feet to the bark's one, even though the chase should heap the canvas of a Royal George upon herself. He went on to his forecastle and sent a man aft for a large blackboard, upon which he wrote in chalk:

GIVE 'EM UP, OR—
I'LL RUN YOU DOWN.

As the Rose overhauled the bark—and had she been a steamer she could not have overtaken her more swiftly—the blackboard was held on high by a couple of seamen so that it could be read on board the stranger. Captain Jones on the forecastle head watched the chase through his glass. The words "Martha M. Stubbs, Windsor, N. S.," were written in large white letters upon her stern. Nothing was to be seen of Mr. Chips and the only mate. A man wearing a fur hat resembling Robinson Crusoe's paced the short poop of the bark. He carried a glass in his hand, and to judge by the frequent glances he directed at the Rose it was to be guessed that he had interpreted the handwriting on the blackbaord.

The breeze freshened. Sheets and tacks strained to the increased pressure. The Rose, with foam midway to the hawse pipe, went steering alongside the bark within pistol shot.

"Hard up!" shrieked the man in the Robinson Crusoe cap, and the fellow at the helm made the wheel spin like the driving wheel of a locomotive.

"Hard up and into him!" roared Captain Jones, and round fizzed the wheel of the Rose in true firework fashion.

For the next two hours the Rose was occupied in endeavoring to run down the bark, the bark, on her side, cutting a hundred nimble nautical capers to evade the shearing stem of the enraged Jones. But at the end of two hours it had become plain to the man in the Robinson Crusoe hat that the Rose was in earnest. He then gave up, backed his main topsail yard and sent the only mate and Mr. Chips aboard the Rose in a boat pulled by two men. Captain Jones at once put Mr. Chips into irons and sent the only mate to his cabin. He then called to the two fellows who were sitting in the boat under the gangway:

"Are you undermanned?"

"Fearful-ly," was the answer.

"I thought so," said Captain Jones. "Step on board, my liveliest, and have a glass of grog afore you return."

The two men cheerfully crawled over the side, but instead of giving them a glass of grog apiece Captain Jones ordered them forward to turn to with the rest of the crew, and with his own hand let go the line which held the bark's boat to the Rose. Sail was then trimmed, and in less than three hours the bark was hull down, though still in pursuit of the Rose.

The only mate admitted, with a countenance of hate and loathing, that he was sick of the Rose, sick of Captain Jones; that he hadn't any intention of working a big vessel of nearly 700 tons single handed with old Chips, the carpenter, and that, when he boarded the bark and heard that she was very short handed, he accepted the captain's handsome offer of a number of dollars for the rest of the run to Windsor, as did Mr. Chips. The only mate added that both he and Mr. Chips were in debt to the Rose as it was, and that Captain Jones would have been welcome to their clothes and nautical instruments had the Nova Scotia man succeeded in getting clear off.

Captain Jones' troubles were not yet at an end. He wished to put in to Lisbon, but the crew refused to work the ship unless he returned to England.

"We're not going to be convarted into blooming distressed mariners," said the crew of the Rose. "No consuls for us. We know them gents. They'll find everything all right, stores sweet, crew plentiful, ship tight, and we know how it'll be. A blooming Portugee jail, then a trip home and a blooming magisterial inquiry and six weeks o' quod," and so, blooming, they forced Captain Jones to sail his ship home.

He arrived at Swansea and handed the only mate and Mr. Chips over into the hands of justice. He offered to ship two more hands if his old crew would sail with him, but they said no, not if he shipped 200 more hands, and so they were taken before the magistrates, who found the captain in the right and punished the men by a term of imprisonment far in excess of any penalty in jail and hard labor which they would have inflicted upon a man who had merely broken his wife's skull with his heel, or who had only been systematically starving and cruelly treating his child of 10 ever since the neighbors could remember.

Captain Jones shipped a fresh crew and another only mate and a new carpenter, but though he stopped his leak he did not ship fresh stores. He sailed out of Swansea bay Oct. 11, 1869, and has not since been heard of.

THE END.

LIKE A THING OF LIFE.

The Perverse Conduct of a Hose Under Considerable Pressure of Water.

Queer things drift into a police station sometimes, and so it came to pass that the officers at the East St. Louis station had a funny experience one Saturday night. Things were very quiet, "Whisky shoots," the levee, and the "island" having been that remiss in their usual donation that only one lone negro was in the cells, and he came there to sleep. Lieutenant Welkobrasky thought it would be a good chance to give the quarters a thorough cleaning. Calling Night Clerk Dick Grady, they fastened the big hose to the plug in the engine house, turned on a moderate supply of water, and began to wash out the cells.

They had just got things nicely started when some practical joker came in to the plug and turned the water on full head, with only about 25 feet of hose on. The lieutenant had the hose in his hand, when it gave a jump as though it were alive and wrenched itself loose, while a small Niagara began to flood everything in sight.

The lieutenant is a pretty strong man, but he was not in it with the hose. Dick Grady rushed into a cell and then shut the door after him, but the hose waltzed up to the bars and Dick came near being drowned like a rat in a hole. Sergeant Mooney and Officer Toomey came in just then, and the hose greeted them with a liberal shower. Both men said something and retreated. Then the hose, as if endowed with renewed life, got after the lieutenant. His handsome uniform and new hat looked like a sad memory of summer in a second. Like a great snake, the hose threw itself around and nothing could hold it. Finally it got out of the jail and into the chief's office, where Mooney and Toomey were trying to figure out what had broken loose. They stopped figuring and made a swift break for the inner office, but not until both had received another drenching.

The chief's office was flooded in a second, and papers and everything loose went flying right and left. Then the rubber hose started for the inner office, but some one outside just then turned the water off.

When a reporter drifted in a few minutes later, the officers were wringing out their hats and the water was two inches deep on the floor. That hose just lay there and laughed, while Dick Grady, who looked like a drowned rat, was hanging himself up by the fire to get dry.—St. Louis Republic.

Lodgeroom Lightning.

It would hardly occur to one innocent of the solemn rites of secret societies that there was any particular art in lighting a lodgeroom, but an expert on the subject says it is a unique branch of the lighting business. To begin with, there should, of course, be plenty of light, but a matter of still greater importance is the manner in which it is distributed, and the flexibility with which its various combinations can be handled. At times brilliant effects are desired; at other times total darkness is called for, and all the gradations between darkness and bright light must be easily available. A typical lodgeroom has a large central chandelier, with possibly 20 lights. At the platform at each end are two standard uprights, of, say, three lights each, or a chandelier hanging from the ceiling. At each side of the platform are ordinary portable desk lights and extra dark lantern reading lamps are distributed along the sides of the hall for the use of the officials who may be reading at the different desks. All around the room are placed plugs which can be used for portable lights for scenic effects, or connected to fan motors or heating apparatus.

By this means the room can be kept warm or cool, according to the season. The fact that lodgeroom switches for turning the current on and off are invariably of the noiseless "knife" pattern is thus explained by a lodgeroom wireman: "Knife switches work silently and on that account should be used; for, after the most mighty puissant royal chief has roasted a candidate for three-quarters of an hour and finally arises to pronounce a sentence, it breaks in on the solemnity of the occasion to hear the 'whang' of a snap switch."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Philosophy of Age.

"My son," observed the good man, "the great lesson you should learn is self denial. Never ask yourself, 'Can I get this?' but 'Can I do without it?' Economize! Skimp! Skimp!"

Youth—But, father, what shall I get out of life at that rate?

"Get! Do you suppose life is a mere playtime to pander to material and carnal appetites? Nay; your young and strong years are the proper years for toil, for drudgery, for saving."

"But, father, I would read, I would study, I would be enlightened, and as a concomitant must have exercise—recreation"—

"Recreation! Why, sir, the years of activity are your workday. Life is a day. You must begin toiling in its early morning and toil far into its afternoon. Never mind the noonday meal. A crust and a promise will do. Gather in the harvest. Toil! Skimp! Deny! And toil on until the darkness comes and the old limbs are failing"—

"But, father, what is the reward of all this suffering self denial?"

"Reward? Think of the supreme joy of sitting in life's gloaming and telling your children and grandchildren about it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Siberian Loneliness.

Mile after mile as you travel along there is no break in the monotony of this great frozen land. Everywhere is snow, everywhere the vast white plains. In the perspective of distance the very ridges melt into the general level, and as you look around you are met everywhere with the same great mantle of unbroken snow. The country lies before you as an earth that is dead, so still, so motionless, so rigid is the landscape. Life has fled before the icy winds that draw out of the north, and the land you traverse is surely the land of death. There is scarcely the cry of a single bird to break upon the ear in this untenanted wilderness; the very streams are motionless masses of ice. Land there is none, and you may wander east, west, north and south without landmark to set you right. Day after day and week after week your deer will gallop along their frozen way, and your compass or, if the gray clouds will lift for awhile, the stars in the heaven above will be your only guide.—"A Winter Journey."

The Elder.

One of the handsomest of all our native shrubs is the elder, Sambucus canadensis, its glossy, pinnate leaves and great, flat cymes of creamy white, fragrant flowers, making it a very desirable addition to the list of those that should be cultivated. A basket of elder flowers and roses is truly "a thing of beauty" that will be "a joy forever" in the memory.

Urging Frazee to Run.

Another attempt was made today to persuade Councilman V. L. Frazee to run for re-election on the Citizens' ticket. A petition was drawn up, the requisite number of signers secured, and it was presented to him to sign his acceptance of the nomination.

When seen by a Daily Press reported this afternoon he said that he had not yet decided whether to accept or not. He will announce his decision this evening.

Contest of Insurance Agents.

The three districts into which the Metropolitan Insurance Company is divided, Elizabeth, Orange and Bridgeport, Conn., have been holding a contest for the past six months to see which division could secure the most new business. The contest closed a few days ago when it was learned that Elizabeth had won. The other two districts accordingly were obliged to give the Elizabeth district a banquet, which they did in the Drake Opera House, Elizabeth, Thursday night. There were about seventy five present, including Superintendents Dolan and Ba ton and several agents of this city.

A Pretty Dance.

It is understood that the celebrated Flower Dance, composed by Mme. Menzeli Bartlett and introduced by her in Music Hall about two years ago, will be considerably altered and improved in the way of grouping and poses so as to suit the present pupils talents, which have considerably increased since first Mme. Bartlett instructed them. The attraction of the dance will be much greater, as the Butterflies will be introduced with it, and in consequence make the grouping more improving. Do not fail to visit the Firemen's Fair and see these great dances and drills.

Symptoms.

If you look in the nursery or the children's play-house you will find, just about now, little scraps of paper here and there upon which are somewhat raggedly written items of "What I want for Christmas." These are symptoms of the season of gifts, for the requirements of which you would be wise to look around early. Novel, attractive and durable gifts for both young and old you will find at Collier's, 103 Park avenue, at prices that will surprise you.

GRAND LARCENY THE CHARGE

FRED WILLIBALD ARRESTED ON A SERIOUS CHARGE.

It Is Alleged That He Took Two $50 Bills From the Person of Michael Keefe, While the Latter Was Inebriated.

Yesterday afternoon Fred Willibald was arrested on the charge of grand larceny and appeared before Justice Newcorn in the evening. He was committed to the Elizabeth jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Michael Keefe went into Goff's saloon on Liberty street last Tuesday and while there imbibed too much of the fiery liquid. When he went into the saloon he had two $50 bills and $11 in small change, but when he got over the effects of his over-indulgence he found to his dismay that the two $50 bills had disappeared. Fred Willibald told a lad that he found two $50 bills close by the cuspidor at the bar, but when Chief Grant and Sergeant Kiely made inquiries regarding it he said that he found them just outside the door of Goff's saloon.

The rest of his story was that he then went to Day's saloon on West Third street and persuaded the bartender to go to Newark the next day with him. They went on Wednesday and Willibald purchased a $13 suit of clothes and claims that he gave Newman $5. Willibald cannot account for the rest of the money, only that he says that it has gone somewhere. His memory is also rather indistinct in regard to what happened before he returned home.

Willibald was charged about two years ago with robbing the depot and the Union News Company's stand. He was convicted on the last charge and served a term in the county jail.

A Quartette of Compositors.

Twenty years ago the New Brunswick Times had on its force of compositors four bright young men named Gibson, Mattison, Morrison and Boyd. These young men were not of the kind of typos who degenerate into tramp printers, but were full of ambition and determination to succeed, and they did succeed. Compositor Gibson is now City Comptroller John S. Gibson, of Newark; Compositor Mattison is now Editor and Publisher John H. Mattison, of the Somerville Messenger, one of the leading journals of Somerset county; Compositor Morrison is Thomas W. Morison, who founded the Plainfield Evening News and made it a very profitable paper; and Compositor Boyd is Hugh Boyd, proprietor of the New Brunswick Home News, the leading newspaper of Middlesex county.—Newark Evening News.

A LIFE CRUSHED OUT.

William Winckler, a young man twenty-two years of age, who is in the employ of C. W. Krausse, of Vine street, North Plainfield, and while assisting in moving a radiator with a fellow workman named Vanderweg in a house on Mercer avenue at half-past three o'clock to-day, slipped and the radiator fell upon young Winckler and killed him instantly.

William Winckler is a son of A. J. Winckler, of Park place.

The fatality occurred in a building on Mercer avenue, Washington Park.

AT THE CRIB.

Great Pressure for Public Places at the State Capitol.

The pressure of the office seekers is becoming burdensome to Governor-elect Griggs. Hundreds of applications have already been made, though there are less than fifty places which the new Governor can fill next year. These include the Chancery clerkship, a Justice of the Supreme Court to succeed Justice Dixon, a keeper of the State prison, two Democratic members of the State Board of Assessors, three lay Judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals, three members of the State Board of Taxation, an inspector of factories and workshops, and six deputies, a number of honorary places on State Boards, and prosecutors, law and lay Judges in several counties. There are more candidates for the prison keepership than for any other place. They include ex-Congressman Brewer and ex-Sheriff Chas. H. Skirm of Mercer, Senator Packer and ex-Senator Roe of Gloucester, ex-Prison Supervisor Henry L. Butler of Passaic, David Cartwright of Essex, and half a dozen men not so well known from other counties. For the place of Allan T. McDermott, Clerk in Chancery, there has been a falling off in applications since Mr. Griggs announced his determination to induce the Legislature to stand by its ante-election promises and place that office and the Supreme Court Clerkship on a salary basis. He thinks $6,000 a year about the proper figure, as that is what the Comptroller, Treasurer, and Secretary of State get. Now the Chancery Clerkship fees are worth over $20,000 a year, and the Supreme Court Clerkship about $40,000. Sheriff Toffey of Hudson, Major Carl Lentz of Essex, and Senator Herbert of Middlesex, are regarded as the leading candidates for the Chancery Clerkship.

BOROUGH EDUCATION.

Board of Education Fix the Period for Vacation.

The Board of Education, of North Plainfield, held its regular meeting at the school house last evening. Trustees Wells, Joseph, Overton, Schutt, and McCutchen were present. Routine work engaged the attention of the board. The monthly salary list and bills for supplies and repairs amounting to $1,516.66 were audited and ordered paid. The holiday vacation was fixed to begin on Friday, December 20th, to extend to January 2, 1896.

The principal reported that the teachers were in attendance upon a teachers institute at Somerville, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, of this week, an attendance which is required by law.

To Attend Religious Service.

At the regular meeting of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., held last evening, the third degree was worked on two candidates and four propositions were received. An invitation was received from the Y. M. C. A. and accepted, to attend the meeting in the building Sunday afternoon, December 15th at 4:15. Charles DeGraw the representative to the Grand Lodge presented a very interesting report.

FOUR TICKETS IN THE FIELD.

THE CITY CAMPAIGN WILL BOOM FROM NOW UNTIL TUESDAY.

Socialist Labor Party Nominate a Whole City Ticket—Councilman Frazee Consents to Run for Re-election in the Fourth.

The time is now up in which petitions for new tickets for the City Election may be filed and Plainfield voters will have four tickets to pick from, the straight Republican, the Citizen's, the Wheelmen's, and the Socialist-Labor. The certificates of a convention, at which the Socialist Labor ticket was nominated, were filed last evening at the last moment, thus making a fourth party in the field. But as the Citizen's and Wheelmen's tickets are exactly the same, there will really only be three different tickets. The Republicans are the only ones, however, to nominate candidates for all the offices. The nominations of the Socialist-Labor party were made at a convention held November 22d, at which John W. James was the presiding officer.

The following candidates were named: Councilmen - at - Large, Charles Grieb and William E. VanNorden; Collector, Arthur Scott; City Judge, James Bell; Commissioner of Appeal, J. Winzenreid; Fourth Ward Councilman, Richard Higham; Third Ward Councilman, Claus R. Wallander.

At the last moment, Councilman Vincent L. Frazee allowed his name to be filed as a candidate for the Fourth ward councilmanship on the Citizens' and Wheelmens' tickets. It was only after considerable deliberation that Mr Frazee consented to run for re-election. The petition by which he was nominated as the Wheelmens' candidate was signed by the following: H. M. Sherwin, Patrick Marron, Edward E. Vail, Theodore Kurzhals, T. E. Morgans, Charles VanWinkle, Frank R. VanDerhoof, James L. Love and I. Lederer. The Citizens' nomination was signed by Abraham Angleman, G. W. Force, T. A. Kurzhals, John Roth, M. Roth, Jr., J. J. L. Holmes, Robert Tingley, H. A. Weber, John Corey, C. A. Leveridge and T. V. SERENADED THE ROOKERY.

Fitzgerald Had a Glass Too Much and Felt Good.

There was one victim in the police net this morning and he was charged with imbibing too freely and then acting in too free a manner. He was escorted to the lockup yesterday afternoon by Sergeant Kiely and Officer Flanagan and persisted in showing off his vocal accomplishments. The inside of the cell did not please him and he spent the evening in serenading himself. This morning he was arraigned before Judge Coddington and gave his name as Morris Fitzgerald. The Judge decided that $3 to the city or ten days' visit to the county jail was about right and the would-be vocalist chose the cash payment.

—Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias, will meet tomorrow evening. Routine business will be transacted.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. IN THE EMERALD ISLE.

Rev. T. Logan Murphy Carries an Audience Through Ireland.

Those present at the illustrated lecture on Ireland given by Rev. T. Logan Murphy in the rooms of the Camera Club last night were certainly given a treat. People in general have mixed views and ideas concerning the Emerald Isle, but those who witnessed the superb pictures shown last night, have a better idea of this beautiful country than ever. There were the lakes of Killarney, surrounded by high, stately hills and mountains, Dublin, Cork and Belfast, with all the modern improvements of the age, and then the principal industries of the country were given a prominent place in the lecture. Mr. Murphy had an exceedingly interesting manner of relating all that is of importance about this country, making the lecture one of rare pleasure to all. A beautiful picture of one of the lakes of Killarney by moonlight was thrown on the screen with all the mechanical effects, while Miss Etta Krymer rendered two soprano solos, "Killarney" and the "Low-Back Car" in a delightful manner and won hearty applause. Miss Lillian A. Force was the accompanist. In all the event was one of the most pleasant given this season.

COHEN WILL SUE.

He Bought the Goods and Intends to Keep Them.

There was further excitement yesterday afternoon at the store formerly occupied by Jacob J. Goldstein, but now run by J. Cohen, of New York, who bought the entire stock when it was sold at auction at the chattel mortgage sale several weeks ago. The firm of Rosendor & Co., of New York, were the cause for the excitement. A writ of replevin had been granted them and their representatives came out yesterday to secure about $240 worth of gentlemen's furnishing goods which had been sold to Goldstein, but which he had not paid for.

The goods were sorted out, packed up and carted away despite the protestations of the present proprietors of the store. Cohen is going to sue all those who took away any goods after they had become his property.

Congratulation.

To the Editor of the Daily Press:—The writer, an old friend of Mr. William H. Miner, the former choir master of Holy Cross church, (although I don't attend the Episcopal church) was glad to observe in your Saturday issue a notice of his coming marriage. Mr. Miner is training two church choirs in Naugatuck, Conn., and as I am already cognizant of the fact, is to marry into one of the first families of Naugatuck and a very estimable young lady, has the best wishes of a large majority of those who took so much pleasure in hearing the music rendered by the choir under his charge in North Plainfield. A Friend.

Died in Bed.

When James Martoni, who keeps an Italian boarding house on Lake street, stepped out to the barn in the rear of his house, he found that Josi Tomanella, one of his lodgers, had died during the night. The deceased was employed by Michael Udahl and has lived here about three years. Martoni notified Sergeant Kiely of the death, and word was also sent to County Physician O'Reilley.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe Hurt.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe met with a serious accident in New Orleans recently. While she was out riding with a friend, an electric car struck the carriage, dashing it to splinters. Mrs. Howe was thrown violently to the ground, and, besides the fall and the shock, she received injuries about the knees. Her many friends in this city will await further news with anxious interest.

A Socialist to Talk.

Charles H. Matchett, of Brooklyn, will delivered an address under the auspices of the Socialist-Labor party at the corner of Grant avenue and South Second street, on Friday evening.

Terrapin for Mudd.

Terrapin is usually considered a valuable article, but a box of them is now waiting at the office of the United States Express Company for an owner. The box was addressed to Caleb Mudd and the owner appears to be named correctly, for he has never appeared.

The Endeavor Colors.

The colors chosen for the '96 convention are green and white which, with the State colors, orange and black, will be used for decorating the city and convention hall in October next.

MORE ABOUT SEWER BEDS.

ADDITIONAL FACTS AS TO HOW THE SYSTEM WORKS.

Only One Bed to be Used at a Time, Thus Avoiding the Possibility of Any Offence Troubling Nearby Residents.

As a supplement to the descriptions published in The Daily Press of the work now being done at the sewage disposal beds, the following explanation of the proposed manner of operating them will be interesting:

The sewage will reach the Smock farm by gravity through the twenty-four-inch outfall-sewer, just completed by Mr. Marsden, and will run into the screening tank described in the former artice. The sewage will flow downward, then upward through a horizontal screen, which will retain the coarser materials, breaking up the greater portion of them. From there the flow will be through the eighteen-inch pipes (laid in the dividing banks between the beds) to gate-wells about four feet square, from which the water may be made to flow on to any one of the beds desired. There are drains under all the beds, about forty feet apart, each one running to the brook, the drains being covered one foot deep with gravel, but the rest of the ditch is filled with sand. It is not intended to have the water find its way too readily to the underdrains, but rather to have it percolate slowly through the whole body of sand between the drains, and so be purified before reaching the brook through the four-inch outlets.

Only one bed will be used at a time, each one being given a rest of several days after flowing, thus allowing the water to soak away and the air to follow it into the pores of the sand, before another application of sewage.

The screenings will have to be removed occasionally from the tank, and may be disposed as may be found most desirable; they may be buried, burned or deodorized and used as a fertilizer. It is not expected that there will be a sufficient quantity of the screenings to present any difficulty in their disposal.

The high part of the farm is being graded off just enough to allow the sewage to flow out of the pipes on to the beds, while low part is leveled off and will be filled six feet deep with sand obtained from the high part and eventually from the Smock tract. The two rows of beds nearest Dunellen avenue are five feet higher than the three rows nearest the brook, thus reducing the amount of material to be moved as much as possible.

The low lands along the brook are composed of clay and loam, but this is six feet below the grade of the beds, so will have no influence whatever on the work of purification.

MR. TERRELL PRAISED

Our Minister to Turkey Saved Many Lives.

The Situation in Anatolia Still Grave—Sultan Refuses To Permit Additions to the Foreign Fleet in the Bosphorus—American Missionaries at Aintab Safe.

Washington, Nov. 26.—Dispatches received here from Constantinople say that, although the situation in Anatolia is much more tranquil than for some time, all danger is not passed by any means and that an outbreak may yet occur among the inhabitants, whose passions are only slumbering, not extinguished. The governor of Hadjin, who threatened to burn the convent there and set fire to the barley fields in that vicinity, owing to the strong representations made to the porte by Mr. Terrell, has been recalled, and his conduct will be looked into. The members of the American colony there and the other foreign residents join in praising the energetic and effective action of Mr. Terrell under very trying circumstances. He has undoubtedly been the means of saving American lives and property. The main question now under discussion between the porte and the representatives of the powers is that of adding four extra guardships to the little foreign fleet in the Bosphorus.

Turkish Government's View.

Although these just demands were made more than a week ago, on the ground that the foreign population of Constantinople needed this additional protection, and although on Saturday a report was circulated that the firman had been issued, the sultan still holds out in his refusal to grant the required permission. From high authority the view taken by the Turkish government can be given as follows: While admitting that the powers possess the treaty right to have two guardships each in the Bosphorus, the porte considers that the proposed increase in the number of foreign war vessels there, under the present condition of things there and elsewhere in the Turkish empire, might excite the Mussulmans and produce an effect far from the one desired by the powers. The reply points out also that, in view of the measures taken to preserve order there, any increase in the number of guardships attached to the embassies is not required. This is the substance of a note which the port has sent to the representatives of the powers.

A Blow to the Sultan's Dignity.

A conference of the ambassadors will be called to consider the note, and a joint reply may be sent to the porte. The substance of the note will also be telegraphed to the different Ottoman embassies and ministries abroad, with instructions to inform the governments they are aceredited to of the stand assumed by the sultan in this matter. The Turkish representatives at London, St. Petersburg, Rome and Vienna will also be instructed earnestly to request the four powers not to insist upon their demands. While the above is a summary of the reply, the repugnance of the porte to granting the firman applied for is attributed, in political circles, to the belief existing among the Turkish ministers and the sultan's palace officials that to do so would be a blow to the sultan's dignity and direct proof of lack of confidence upon the part of the powers in his ability to govern and maintain order.

Another Outbreak Feared.

Behind this, it is said, lurks the sultan's fear that the demand is really only a cloak for the intention of the powers to make a naval demonstration in Turkish waters in case of renewed disturbances in Asiatic Turkey. No foreigner in Constantinople doubts that an increase in the number of guard ships is necessary for the better protection of the foreign population. An apparently well founded report is in circulation that the Armenians of the capital, undismayed by the recent bloodshed there, have projected fresh demonstrations at the instigation of the central revolutionary committee, and are in hopes of being joined by the Young Turks party. The Austrian ambassador, Baron von Calise, has made a direct appeal to the Armenian patriarch to do his utmost to prevent another outbreak, warning him that such an occurrence would do the greatest harm to the Armenian cause and would tend to defeat the object the Armenians and their friends had in view.

Exiled Armenians.

The patriarch assured Baron von Calise that the Armenians had not planned another demonstration, "although," he said, "despair reigns among them, owing to the incessant arrests and exiling of Armenians." He insisted that 400 Armenians of that vicinity have recently been exiled to Anatolia. The absence of news from Zeitoun, which the Armenians are still said to be holding in strong force, and the failure of the government to furnish any information regarding the concentration of Turkish troops at Marash, are causing some uneasiness. No news is obtainable, either, concerning the rising of the Druses against Turkish rule, one of the most serious features of the whole situation. The Turks are looking forward to the coming of winter with hope that it will aid them in putting down disorders, while the thousands of homeless Armenians seem doomed to endure terrible sufferings.

Safety of Missionaries Assured.

United States Minister Terrell has received a dispatch from Aintab announcing the safety of the American missionaries there belonging to the central Turkey mission. The missionaries say that protection was afforded them by the Turkish authorities. Mr. Terrell says he is satisfied that the 172 missionaries in Anatolia are safe. Definite information has been received here that the missionaries attached to the station at Kharput have left that place, under escort, for the Black sea coast. The situation there is still grave and very complicated.

SENSATIONAL STATEMENT.

Rev. Dr. Johnson Says U. S. Minister Terrell Is a Mohammedan.

Jefferson City, Mo., Nov. 26.—Rev. J. T. Johnson, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist church of this city, who has just returned from a three months' tour of Turkey and the Holy Land, in a sermon on the Armenian trouble, made a sensational statement that American Minister Terrell ought to be hanged. He declares that he has joined the Mohammedan church and is thus aiding in the persecution and killing of Christians instead of protecting them; that the situation is far worse than has been reported to the papers and that Mr. Terrell prevents true reports from being sent out, sending out false reports himself. Dr. Johnson and his entire party of thirty-four members have signed a petition to President Cleveland begging him to remove Mr. Terrell.

MANY BLOWN TO ATOMS

Frightful Accident in the Island of Majorca.

Seventy-one Bodies Found — Explosion of a Cartridge Ignites a Large Quantity of Powder—Most of the Victims Were Women—The Town Walls Shattered.

Barcelona, Nov. 26.—A terrible accident resulting in a sad loss of life occurred yesterday at Palma, capital of the island of Majorca, 130 miles south of this city. Eighty persons, most of whom were women, were employed in emptying old cartridges outside the walls of the town when one of the cartridges exploded in some unknown manner. There was a large quantity of powder that had been taken out of cartridges lying about over a large area and this was ignited by the discharge of the cartridge. A tremendous explosion followed which shattered the masonry of the town walls, which are extremely thick, and did considerable damage to houses. A large number of people were killed, but what the exact loss of life was has not yet been ascertained.

Seventy-one Bodies Found.

The bodies of seventy-one dead have been found, but it is feared that many more were killed, their bodies, perhaps, having been blown to atoms, as a number of those who were at work have not been accounted for. Forty persons were seriously wounded and some of them will die. Many of the dead and wounded were found at considerable distances from the scene of the accident, they having been hurled bodily through the air by the force of the explosion. Some of the dead were terribly burned and mangled, so much so in a number of cases that identification will be extremely difficult, if not impossible. An official inquiry into the cause of the disaster will be held. A later dispatch from Palma states that the loss of life through the explosion was far greater than was stated in the first reports of the accident. It is now known that thirty-seven women and fourteen men were instantly killed, thirty-five women and five men were seriously injured, and of this number twenty have since died.

GREAT CUBAN VICTORY

Spaniards Suffer a Severe Defeat at Taguasco.

4,000 Rebels Hold 10,000 of the Enemy in Check for Thirty-six Hours and Then Completely Rout Them with the Aid of Reinforcements—Hundreds Killed.

New York, Nov. 26.—A Cuban messenger, who arrived at the Cuban junta late yesterday afternoon direct from the seat of the revolution, reported that on Nov. 19 one of the largest battles that has been fought since the beginning of the present trouble with Spain took place. The news has been withheld strictly, the correspondent of El Heraldo, a Madrid paper, not being allowed to send it out, even. The battle occurred at Taguasco, a town in the interior of the island. The Spanish forces consisted of about 10,000 men, while the Cubans had but about 4,000. The Spaniards were led by Generals Valdes, Luque and Aldave, and Gen. Maximo Gomez was at the head of the Cubans.

Fought Thirty-six Hours.

The Cubans had a most favorable position at the bottom of a hill. For thirty-six hours the opposing forces fought, but the Spaniards were unable to drive the Cubans back. The latter, however, could do no more than hold their own. Finally, just at a critical moment, Gen. Antonio Maceo of the Cuban army came rushing in with a force of 3,500 men. With the aid of this reinforcement the Spaniards were quickly routed. The Cubans advanced then toward Trinidad and Cie.

Killed and Wounded, 600.

Gen. Aldave is reported to have been killed in the battle and the total number of killed and wounded is placed at 600. Gen. Gomez secured 700 rifles and a large amount of ammunition. This is believed to be the largest battle of the revolution, larger than that of Bayamo, several months ago, in which Gen. Campos was wounded.

THE BATTLESHIP MAINE.

Will Go to Newport To Receive Her Torpedo Outfit.

Washington, Nov. 26.—It is said at the navy department that the battleship Maine will not receive a thorough overhauling at the Newport torpedo station, as reported, but will merely go there to have her torpedo outfit placed on board. Some time ago, as stated at the time, while the Maine was at the Brooklyn navy yard, she was discovered to have a greater depth forward than aft. This defect has been partly remedied and will be made thoroughly so in a short time. It does not injure her efficiency.

MASS WINE POISONED.

Second Attempt on the Life of a Mount Carmel, Pa., Priest.

Shamokin, Pa., Nov. 26.—Rev. J. Jackimowicz of the Polish Catholic church in Mount Carmel narrowly escaped being poisoned at the early morning mass. A quantity of paris green had been placed in the wine vessel from which he is in the habit of drinking during the service. Fortunately the powder was visible on the top of the wine, and as a previous attempt had been made on his life the Rev. Jackimowicz became suspicious and did not partake of the wine.

GOLD FOR THE GOVERNMENT.

A Philadelphia Dry Goods House Sends $100,000.

Philadelphia, Nov. 26.—In pursuance of the call of Secretary Carlisle for gold one of the leading retail dry goods houses of Philadelphia will ship $100,000 of the yellow metal to the treasury department at Washington this afternoon. The firm in question is making the shipment with the patriotic purpose of sustaining the government's gold reserve and they hope their example will induce other business houses here to do the same.

DUCAL PARTY AT GIBRALTAR.

Marlborough and His Bride Arrive at the Mediterranean Port.

Gibraltar, Nov. 26.—The North German Lloyd steamer Fulda, Capt. Meier, from New York November 16, arrived here yesterday. The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough were among the passengers on board.

Smuggling Convictions Quashed.

St. Johns, N. F., Nov. 26.—The supreme court has quashed the convictions against the city saloonkeepers who were recently convicted of smuggling. The court decided that the indictments were faulty, inasmuch as the parties accused were purchasers, not the actual smugglers.

Engineering Firms Federate.

Glasgow, Nov. 26.—The Clyde engineering firms met in this city yesterday and confirmed the agreement to federate with the Belfast, Tyne and Barrow firms against the demands of their employes. This action will probably result in a lengthening of the strike now in progress.

Suicide of George T. Parks.

Washington, Nov. 26.—George T. Parks, a young real estate agent of this city, committed suicide at his residence by shooting himself through the heart. Illness and insomnia were given as the cause for the deed.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL

Report of the Commission Adverse to the Project.

Not Advisable To Begin Work at All—Nearly Twice as Much Money Needed as Was Estimated—A Number of Changes in the Proposed Route Suggested.

Washington, Nov. 26.—The report of the commission to look into the affairs of the proposed Nicaraguan canal is at variance with all previous promises and plans made public, inasmuch as it may alter the entire prospect for the canal. The commission declares that, from the data now in hand, it is not advisable to begin work at all, and that the undertaking would be full of danger. The Maritime Canal company estimated it would cost $69,893,660 to complete the canal, but the report says that sum is not large enough and makes a provisional estimate of $133,472,893. A wider channel, says the commissioners, is needed, and new surveys must be taken. A number of changes from the present proposed route of the canal are suggested, and many flaws in the former plans pointed out. Too much money was devoted, the commissioners think, in learning the country's topography, and too little to learning cost and practicability of such a canal.

THE BLACKSTONE WRECK.

Coroner Blames Conductor Howard and the Company.

Woonsocket, R. I., Nov. 26.—Coroner James I. Hotchkiss of North Smithfield yesterday filed his report on the wreck at the Blackstone roundhouse on Oct. 5, which caused the death of Chester R. Lawton and Edward Fay. The coroner blames, in a measure, conductor Herbert Howard of the Waterford freight, who threw the switch, and the company. The change of running the trains from the right to the left track; the deranging of the block system and the confusion which resulted in the hurried orders to make the changes, place the responsibility to some extent on the company. The evidence does not disclose the fact whether or not the changes of the switches could have been made sooner.

HANNIGAN'S CASE.

The Acquitted Man Sent to the State Insane Asylum.

New York, Nov. 26.—David F. Hannigan, who was acquitted on the ground of insanity last week of the charge of murdering Solomon H. Mann, was committed yesterday to the state asylum at Poughkeepsie by Judge Ingraham in the court of oyer and terminer. His counsel, Mr. Brooke, applied for his discharge. A director of the institution who was present in court said the authorities of the asylum might set Hannigan at liberty whenever in their judgment he was deemed sane.

UNION PRINTERS' HOME.

Not Likely that Supt. Shuman Will Be Removed.

Indianapolis, Nov. 26.—The directors of the Childs-Drexel home for union printers at Colorado Springs met here yesterday to consider the complaints that have been made against W. C. Shuman, the superintendent of the home. The day was spent in going over the testimony of the inmates and employes of the home. Two or three members of the board said that it was not probable that Shuman would be removed. There are now sixty-two printers at the home.

NEW COTTON MILL.

To Be Erected at East Taunton with 40,000 Spindles.

Taunton, Mass., Nov. 26.—Plans have been perfected for the erection of a 40,000 spindle (fancy goods) cotton mill at East Taunton, the capital stock of the company to be $400,000. The mill will be in charge of one of the leading manufacturers in New England, and the plant will be run by steam power with reserve enough for No. 2 mill.

EX-CONGRESSMAN IN PERIL.

An Attempt To Fire Richard Crowley's Mansion.

Lockport, N. Y., Nov. 26.—A dastardly attempt was made Sunday night to fire the mansion of ex-congressman Richard Crowley. A box of shavings was saturated with kerosene and placed against the cellar door. Mr. Crowley was severely burned about the hands in extinguishing the flames.

Palmer Got the Decision.

London, Nov. 26.—The fight between Billy Plimmer and Palmer, at 112 pounds, for a purse of £1,500, took place last night. The referee stopped the fight in the fourteenth round, and awarded the battle to Palmer, owing to Plimmer's brother entering the ring.

Shot His Wife; Killed Himself.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 26.—Zere Robbins, aged 30, a miner residing in the borough of Throop, shattered the skull of his wife with a revolver bullet at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon and then shot and killed himself. His wife cannot recover.

SENATOR HILL'S DEBUT.

He Appears on the Rostrum in Milwaukee To-night as a Lecturer.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 26.—Senator David B. Hill of New York makes his western debut on the lecture platform at the Academy to-night. James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern road, has extended to the senator and his party the courtesy of the Great Northern and Eastern Minnesota lines and the private car of President Hill will be put at the disposal of the senator from New York. Senator Hill arrived in Milwaukee this morning and will be given an informal reception at the Press club rooms this afternoon.

STORM IN THE OHIO VALLEY.

All Western Union Telegraph Lines Are Badly Crippled.

New York, Nov. 26.—A destructive sleet storm prevails throughout the upper and lower lake regions and in the Ohio Valley. All telegraph lines are badly crippled. The Buffalo Western Union office reports that the storm has wrecked all wires to Chicago. Similar reports have been received from the principal Western Union offices on the main lines west of Washington. The storm is traveling east and will probably further cripple telegraphic communication.

New York, Nov. 26.—Ex-Gov. Roswell P. Flower called at the sub-treasury yesterday with $250 in gold, which he exchanged for legal tender notes. Thomas B. Reed thinks that he will be the next Speaker of the House of Representatives.

What an unfaithful Republican Editor Runyon is. He says not a word either for or against in his paper.

There is talk of affidavits galore in the present municipal campaign. They are all conceived in a spirit of sour grapes.

See that your name is on the registry list today if you want to vote next Tuesday. The Boards of Registry set from 1 to 9 o'clock.

North Plainfield people are commencing to talk about pushing a bill through the incoming Legislature looking to the annexation of the borough to the city.

A decision of the Missouri Supreme Court would appear to draw the teeth from the Australian ballot law of that State. The decision is that a ballot is not vitiated by the fact that the voter writes his name upon it.

Many men become great in a day by a combination of circumstances, and then vanish into oblivion as the tail end of a political campaign, perhaps a little slower than they arose to notoriety, but none the less effectually.

Several of the faithful G. O. P. adherents are looking Trentonward. But there are only a limited number of places to be filled, and for every joyful man there will be a dozen disappointed ones after the first of January.

The Jersey City News, one of the most out-and-out Democratic papers in the State, says that Grover Cleveland can not carry one State in the Union on a third term nomination. Not because he is Grover Cleveland, but because the American people are unalterably opposed to third terms.

The physicians have given up all hopes of recovery in the case of Abram Hooley, who was injured recently, as it has been discovered that a portion of the spinal cord is fractured. He is at present in Orange county, New York.

THEATRICAL.

Society will doubtless turn out in large numbers at Music Hall on Wednesday night when the attraction is "The Capitol," Augustus Thomas' sensationally successful drama of Washington social life. It is a refined comedy-drama that deals with conditions existing now and in this country, and at no other time and at no other place. These are conditions of which every one hears, everyone reads in the newspapers, but with the details of which everyone is not fully acquainted. These conditions exist in Washington, a city which, by reason of them, is different from any other. All people are interested in them; few people have opportunity to see them in operation. Mr. Thomas now gives the general public that opportunity. The public may observe Washington life by proxy through the keen eyes of this exceedingly thoughtful thorough observer. J. M. Hill produces the play with beautiful scenery and an evenly-balanced company.

There has been nothing produced in years more realistic and dramatically thrilling than "The Fire Patrol." It is a decided hit, and lovers of this kind of play will be fully supplied with realism and should turn out in force. "The Fire Patrol" will be seen for one night and matinee at Music Hall, Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 28th.

—Leggett has a fresh supply of Huyler's confections for Thanksgiving. They are just what is wanted to top off the turkey dinner.

A TERRIBLE RECORD.

An Appalling Increase of Weekly Mortality.

Deaths By Heart Failure and Heart Disease.

In the Rush of Life Something Should Be Taken

To Keep Nerves Strong, Heart Action Vigorous.

Dr. Greene's Nervura the Best Remedy in the World.

The death of So and So from heart failure is becoming a common announcement. Such occurrences are of appalling frequency. Hardly a day passes that some successful merchant, or noted business man, some distinguished professional, or some leading society lady does not succumb to this distinctive archer, and the community is filled with gloom and dismay at the suddenness of their deaths. We hear of the death of prominent people, but how many thousands of people in the ordinary walks of life die daily of the dreaded nerve weakness of the heart?

That great organ is the motive power. It moves the whole system. Once it fails and all is over. And how quickly it ceases; how unexpected the end! It comes like the thief in the night; its approach is not heard. Whose turn next? Who can tell? Not the wisest of us all. How important, then, that we should try to stay its progress; that we should keep the heart and nerves which control its action steady and vigorous.

How can it be done? Only by strengthening and vitalizing the heart and the nerves which control its every beat, the mighty power which gives it tone and vital health. Many thoughtful minds have labored to discover some entergizing element—some product of nature to prevent the waste and keep this organ in its naturally healthy condition. In this search the intelligent and patient labors of one scientific physician have been crowned after years of effort, with eminent success. His grand discovery, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is pre-eminently the best heart remedy, the medicine which always restores a strong, vigorous and healthy heart action. If you have a weak heart, or fear that its action is not as strong as it should be, lose no time in using Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. The symptoms are plain,—headache, dizziness, strange, faint feelings, sinking at the pit of stomach, fluttering in the chest, nervousness, restless, sleepless nights with dreams, sense of anxiety or foreboding. There may or may not be pains in the chest. If any of these symptoms are present, take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy at once. Use this remedy of wondrous power in time and you need have no fear of sudden death from weak heart and heart failure.

MR. GEO. VANNAH.

Follow the example of Mr. George Vannah of Damariscotta Mills, Me., who says:

"Nearly ten years ago I began to have what the doctors called heart trouble, and up to the present time it has been growing worse. It was so bad I was actually afraid to go to sleep at night, and many times during the night it would seem to me that I was dying and could not live five minutes longer. I employed three of the best doctors, but got no relief whatever, and as a last resort I thought I would try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I have only taken one bottle and am now on the second and the heart trouble has been entirely removed."

"I was so pressed for breath at times that I could not work but very little. The trouble is all gone and I can now sleep and rest as well as I ever could in my life. Before I began taking the Nervura what sleep I did get did me but little good, I was troubled so much with frightful dreams; but I thank the Lord for Dr. Greene's Nervura, as I can now sleep all night and feel refreshed in the morning. I have talked with several persons who are similarly afflicted as myself, and would recommend to one and all, do not hesitate longer, but give Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy a trial and be convinced of its curative powers."

Walter E. Vannah of the same town verifies the above testimonial as he says:— "I can truthfully certify that the above statement of Mr. Vannah is positively true in every sense of the word."

This is not an isolated instance. Thousands of people throughout the world have also been saved by Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great blood and nerve remedy. Heart disease does not select its victims; it may strike you at any moment. Nourish and strengthen your vital powers to resist its onslaught by taking this wonderful medicine. Remember this great remedy is the discovery of the successful specialist Dr. Greene of 35 West 14th st., New York City, who adds to its value by allowing all who use it to consult him personally or by letter, free of charge.

Rev. Frank Custard, of the Methodist church, spoke to W. G. Holton Council, J. O. U. A. M., and the Daughters of Liberty Sunday morning. His sermon was a Thanksgiving sermon, which all the congregation enjoyed, and his text was taken from Matthew 20th chapter and 21st verse. The W. G. Holton Council and Juniors marched in a body from the hall to the church, led by the captain. The choir sang a very pretty piece of music.

High School Notes.

The Class of '96 held a meeting yesterday morning and made arrangements for the spread which will be held on Thanksgiving Eve in the chapel of the Franklin building. Miss Grace E. Overton is at the head of the committee of arrangements. The spread will be prepared as usual by the young ladies of the class, the boys standing the expense of the turkey.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

The Elizabeth Athletic Club Cyclers have entered a team in the Central New Jersey Cyclers' Bowling League.

The Crescent bowlers will entertain the Cranfords in this city tonight, when a game in the League series will be rolled.

The postponed game in the Central Journal League between the Crescent Wheelmen and E. A.C., on the latter's alleys, has been scheduled now for Friday, Dec. 27th.

The Hope chapel boys will meet the bowlers of the Y. M. C. A. on the latter's alley's this evening, and a lively game may be expected. The Y. M. C. A. team will consist of Morris Sutphen, Clarence Sutphen, Edward Laing, Raymond Carroll and Max Moraller.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

Members of the Y. M. C. A. football eleven are requested to attend practice at the Plainfield Bicycle Club house tomorrow evening in their football suits. Practice begins at 8 o'clock.

The Y. M. C. A. eleven is going to put up a rattling good game Thanksgiving if the actual play is anything like the practice. Seventeen men were present at the gymnasium of the Plainfield Bicycle Club last evening and two hours was spent in steady practice of the signals. Louis E. Waring was present and coached the team from his position at quarter. The interference showed up surprisingly well and several tricks were learned and practiced. The team practices again on Wednesday evening and the line-up of the team for Thursday will depend on who is present at practice. Only those that have had a chance to practice the signals will be allowed to play.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

There is said to be a great abnndance of small game in southern New Jersey, where the shooting season opened last Friday. Pheasants, quail, rabbits, woodcocks and squirrels are more plentiful than in many years, and rabbits are especially numerous. The dry season has been favorable to the survival of thousands of rabbits, which, had the weather been even nominally wet, would have been drowned in the burrows, as very many are every year. The same fact in regard to rabbits is reported from several western States, and in some places they are so plentiful as to be a serious nuisance.

CYCLING COMMENT.

A large party of New Jersey wheelmen will start on Nov. 30th for the Atlanta Exposition. Two Pullman coaches have been engaged. The clubs represented are: Atalanta Wheelmen, Union County Roadsters, Hudson County Wheelmen, Tourist Cycle Club, Elizabeth Wheelmen, Jersey City Wheelmen, Clio Wheelmen and Trenton Bicycle Club.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The Young Men's League of Hope chapel will hold a field day on Thanksgiving Day at Maltby's track.

Already about fifty entries have been received for the hare and hounds chase of the Y. M. C. A. members on Thanksgiving Day.

BASKET BALL.

The basket ball season opens to night at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium with a game between the Spartans and the Defenders.

Six of the eight basket ball teams in the Y. M. C. A. are ready to play, having secured the requisite number of players. The teams now ready and their captains are the Spartans, captained by Garfield Pike; Olympics, with R. A. Beebe for their leader; Stars, whose captain is Edward Laing; the Boroughs, with Charles Dupee for captain, and the Leal's school team, with B. Rockwell in the place of honor.

PRISONERS ON THEIR HONOR.

Easy to Get Along With if the Officer Has Their Good Will.

Jasper Ramey, a moonshiner, walked 20 miles to give himself up to the revenue officers. This is not uncommon in the mountain counties. A number of the deputies who make periodical visits to the counties of Pike, Letcher, Knott, Magoffin, etc., have little trouble in arresting the men they are after, while other officers have to fight for their lives. It is told of one of the deputy marshals that whenever he wants a man he simply writes a letter to him informing him that an indictment has been returned against him and that he wants him to meet him on a certain day at a neighboring town. Some of the letters wind up like this: "I also have warrants for several of the other boys (naming them), and I wish you would see them and tell them that I will be in —— on —— and for them to be there." It is said that many of the men make their appearance at the place and time designated.

Several deputy marshals who go to the top of the Cumberland for prisoners occasionally let the men "tend their crops" while they are under arrest. The officer goes through the country, meets the man and says:

"Tom, I've a warrant for your arrest."

"All right. I've been spectin it."

"I know you've a big crop, though, and as court don't meet before October you can tend your crop and come up to Louisville just before court opens."

Then the man would return to his work, and at the appointed time he would be in this city ready to answer to the charge against him when his case was called.

Several months ago one of the oldest of the deputy United States marshals in Kentucky walked up to the door of the county jail and asked for the jailer. He was introduced to Mr. Watts and said:

"I have three 'shiners' that I brought from Magoffin county. As we came on the train, I left my 'mitimuses' in my saddlebags, and when we came out of the coach I forgot my saddlebags. I want to know if you will let me put these prisoners in jail here without the papers? I will get the 'mitimuses' in a few days, and it will be all right and proper."

Jailer Watts told the man he would accommodate him because of his bad luck. "But where are the prisoners?" said the jailer.

"Oh, them! Well, they're out in town some place. We came in yesterday, and I told them they might knock about the city until I arranged it with you for them to go in here. I'll go out and look them up and bring them in."

In about an hour he returned with three typical mountaineers, who said they had enjoyed looking at the sights of the city very much. They had never been in Louisville before and thought it a great treat to be able to "ride thar free," even though they came as prisoners.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

MARINE SUPERSTITIONS.

The Changing Tides and the Launching of the Wick Smack.

In Orkney the ebb and flow of the tides were attributed to the breathing of a sea monster which lay outstretched on the confines of the world. So gigantic was he that the simple acts of expiration and inspiration took 12 hours to perform. The resemblance between this nature myth and that of the Greeks is very remarkable. North country sailors scorned at one time to use a compass, for, by the motion of the ninth wave, the mother wave, they could, even in the densest fog, ascertain their exact whereabouts and gain the shore in safety. The launching of a Wick smack was for years regarded as unlucky unless the words which follow were repeated by the onlookers:

Fae rocks an saans,
An barren lan's
Keep's free,
Weel oot, weel in,
Wi' a' gweed shot.

Harmful if not fatal results are believed to follow the utterance of certain words at sea. The salmon is ever a "fine bit fish," and swine, minister, kirk, hare and numerous other words are solemnly interdicted. The presence of a minister in a boat is by many regarded with grave concern, and it is sometimes with the utmost difficulty that a crew can be induced to go to sea if a minister is on board. Those who have sailed with these half Norse, half Celtic, fishers must have taken note of the method adopted to raise the "wun;" the mainmast is scratched energetically, and the men "whustle" the while.—Scottish Review.

Stevenson and Love Stories.

May, 1892.—I have celebrated my holiday from "Samoa" by a plunge at the beginning of "The Young Chevalier." I am afraid my touch is a little broad in a love story. I can't mean one thing and write another. As for women, I am no more in any fear of them. I can do a sort all right. Age makes me less afraid of a petticoat, but I am a little in fear of grossness. However, this David Balfour's love affair, that's all right—might be read out to a mothers' meeting or a daughters' meeting. The difficulty in a love yarn which dwells at all on love is the dwelling on one string. It is manifold, I grant, but the root fact is there unchanged, and the sentiment, being very intense and already very much handled in letters, positively calls for a little pawing and gracing. With a writer of my prosaic literalness and pertinency of point of view this all shoves toward grossness—positively even toward the far more damnable closeness. This has kept me off the sentiment hitherto, and now I am to try, Lord! Of course Meredith can do it, and so could Shakespeare, but with all my romance I am a realist and a prosaist and a most fanatical lover of plain physical sensations plainly and expressly rendered; hence my perils.—Letter From Robert Louis Stevenson to Sidney Colvin, McClure's Magazine.

We Enjoy Likeness In Each Other.

What we truly enjoy in each other is likeness, not unlikeness. That is what makes the pleasure of good society. There is no rest save on the common ground. If I meet a man of different tradition, different religion, different race, different language, I am pleased with him for a moment, as I should be with a fairy or an amiable goblin, but he presently bores me, when the surprise of him is over. I find that we have no common ground. The perpetual yearning of our hearts is for intelligent response, and this can come only from our equals, from equality.—From "Equality as the Basis of Good Society," by W. D. Howells, in Century.

A DEADWOOD STORY.

IT IS TOLD BY DAN COSTELLO, THE OLD TIME CIRCUS CLOWN.

The Hero of This Tale Was California Joe, a Picturesque Character—How the Minister's Death Was Avenged—An Indian Head In the Belle o' Union.

There was a little gray haired old man sitting in the corridor of the Tifft House the other day who seemed to be taking a lively interest in what was going on around him. Nobody spoke to him, and he sat alone and unnoticed, for he was a complete stranger in the city. He was from Dakota, and it had been nearly a quarter of a century since he had made his home in the east. Years ago he had been a man of wealth and had owned interests in Dakota, mines worth many thousands of dollars, but he now had very little of that fortune left, and his name was no longer known among the business men of the state where he had lived. He was Dan Costello, the once famous clown, who for several years was in partnership with P. T. Barnum in the show business.

Costello was in Deadwood in the old pioneer days, when the town was filled with lawless characters, cowboys, Indian fighters and desperadoes. It was just after he had left Barnum. Wild Bill and a score of other characters whose names have since been prominent in 10 cent blood and thunder literature were there, and Costello knew them all. Sometimes he played poker with them in the Belle o' Union, the old gambling place where they gathered together at night and where several of them were killed. "Going down to the Belle o' Union to see somebody get shot" was quite a favorite pastime with Deadwood citizens in those days.

One of these lawless men whom Costello knew was California Joe, and it was about this man that the ex-clown told an Express reporter an interesting story, which, although it happened 15 years ago, has never crept into print. Here it is:

"Well," as Costello told it, "it doesn't make much difference how we mortals die, and it didn't matter much to California Joe, except that he always said he would rather like to quit the world with his boots on. And he did. To begin with, there's an Indian's head, with some of the skin and hair still clinging to it, in the Smithsonian institute in Washington. I don't suppose any of the people at the institute know how that Indian came to be killed, but it happened in a peculiar way. In Deadwood, when I was there, there was a minister hanging about the town and holding street services for the miners. What was his name or to what denomination he belonged I never knew, and I don't suppose there were many who did, but that doesn't matter so far as this story is concerned. One day this minister started out on horseback to ride over to Butte mountain. The road he took led around through the hills and then across the plains. It was a very dangerous one, for there were many good places for the Indians, who were thick in the neighborhood, to lay their traps and more than a few of the whites had been waylaid and killed on it. Butte mountain overlooked the plains, and the Indians could see for miles from its summit and watch for travelers. The minister rode slowly through the hills, with his gun hanging across his saddle and his Bible bulging out from his coat pocket, and he did not see so much as a sign of an Indian. It was not until he reached the plains and was spurring his horse over the long, straight stretch of road that lay before him that he heard a warwhoop, and suddenly half a dozen Indians rode out from their hiding place. The minister had fighting blood in his veins and he began to shoot right away. He got a bullet in each leg, and then succeeded in killing one of the Indians. But the Indians got the best of him, and his body was found riddled with bullets.

"It happened that California Joe and his partner were on their way from Crook City to Deadwood that day, and it was their misfortune to meet the same band of Indians on the road across the plains. California Joe's partner was killed almost as soon as the firing began, and at the same time one of the Indians fell. Joe stood his ground and fired shot after shot in quick succession. Two more of the Indians were killed, and then the rest, taking fright from Joe's good marksmanship, hurried away. Joe then bent over one of the Indians lying in the road. The Indian was dying, and Joe finished the job by cutting off his head. Then he mounted his horse, took the head with him and rode full speed for the town. He rode in through the streets as fast as his horse could go, holding the Indian's head, the blood from which had spattered his saddle, by the hair. The lights were just being lighted in the Belle o' Union, and everybody left the gambling tables to hear Joe's story.

"That Indian's head was hung on the wall in Belle o' Union, and it was there for a year or more. Then somebody threw it out on a garbage pile. It lay there all one summer. After the Deadwood fire somebody who took an interest in such relics found it lying out in the yard, and in some way or other it got to the Smithsonian institute.

"As I said before, California Joe died with his boots on. It was only a little while after his adventure near Deadwood that he had a falling out with a man near Red Cloud agency. Joe called him a liar, or something of that sort, and the fellow took offense. He hung around trying to get the drop on Joe for a week, and finally he landed him. Joe was coming down the street when the fellow sent a bullet into his back. He is buried out in a lonely spot on the plains not far from there. Some of his old friends stopped playing poker long enough to go to his funeral, and they chipped together and put a little picket fence around the grave to keep the coyotes away and put up a headstone on which were simply the words, 'California Joe.'"

The minister in Costello's story was mentioned in the article on Deadwood in The Illustrated Express. He was the Rev. Henry W. Smith, the first missionary to the Black Hills.—Buffalo Express.

Chrysanthemum Culture.

I think it advisable to keep chrysanthemums in pots during the entire season, because when this is done the labor and risk of lifting and potting in the fall are avoided. [illegible] Eben E. Rexford in The Ladies' Journal. The plants should be shifted from time to time during the season, if grown in pots, until you have them in 8 or 10 inch pots. Give rich soil and plenty of water. Pinch off the ends of the branches to make the plants compact. Do this at intervals until the latter part of July or middle of August.

THE SOUTHERN DIALECT.

How It Impressed a Writer For One of the London Papers.

The gentleman who writes for the London Sunday Times about theaters found himself in a philological mood after he had seen "Alabama." Here is one of his paragraphs: "As a study of dialect, as a picture of a society of which we here know next to nothing, I found 'Alabama' interesting, and even—in the quietest way—delightful. It is to me impossible to read the modern stories of southern life, merely on account of their preposterous and pedantic spelling, more cumbersome, even, than Mr. Rudyard Kipling's, and, for anything I know, quite as inaccurate. But in Alabama you hear with your ears this drowsy, backboneless dialect, which the planters have partly picked up from their negro nurses, and partly, I cannot but think, inherited from East Anglian forefathers; so that, from a philological point of view alone, this is a drama not to be missed.

"What strikes one first in the dialect is the omission of the letter 'r,' characteristic also of the easy going Suffolk peasant of today. During the past holidays my nearest railway station was at Bramford, one of the prettiest villages of East Anglia, but the villagers, for the most part, called it 'B'ahmfud,' a little explosion of the 'b' taking the place of the missing 'r.' And in Suffolk, as in Alabama, the native never misplaces an 'h'—unless indeed he is at a boarding school and leaves out his 'h's' of set purpose, 'to be genteel, like teacher;' contrariwise, his initial 'h's' often become almost guttural in their vigor.

"Again, all the Suffolk vowels are diphthongs, with the double sound distinctly to be felt—in Alabama they are very much like this—while all consonants that are not absolutely needed are apt to follow the fate of the submerged 'r.' So 'l,' being liquid, naturally runs away, and an odd 'n' is never missed. Of course the drowsy slowness of the southern man and the sharp melodic chant of the Suffolker make the general effect of their speeches very different, but many of the component parts are the same."

KITE FLYING IN NEW YORK.

A Curious Old City Ordinance With Inexplicable Provisions.

One of the oddest, oldest and most peculiar of the ancient ordinances of New York which it is the duty of the police department to observe and enforce is section 240 of article 24 of chapter 8 of the revised city ordinances. It relates to kites, ordinary, plain, everyday kites, such as are the delight of small boys when the wind is high and a constant source of annoyance to pedestrians on a gusty day.

"No person," says this ordinance, "shall raise or fly any kite in any street, lane or avenue, or in any public place in the city of New York to the southward of Fourteenth street, under a penalty of $5 for each offense."

No one has been found, either in official life or among lay authorities, who can tell why this peculiar exemption for kite fliers was given to the residents above Fourteenth street and not to those below. Nobody has undertaken to say why, for instance, an adventurous youth may raise or fly a paper kite in Fifteenth street, while another adventurous youth in Thirteenth street who does the same thing is liable to summary arrest.

During the last 15 or 20 years the sales of kites in New York city have fallen off more than one-half. Formerly the revenues from kite sales was considerable in the small toy, stationery and candy stores. Nowadays there appears to be in the rising generation of the male sex a greater partiality for pointed shoes, canes and cigarettes. About 20 years ago an effort was made to introduce into New York light, dainty and attractive Japanese paper kites, and for a short time they were quite popular, but the craze died out, and there has been a return since to the cheap and old fashioned kites which the down town boys used to raise from the sidewalks or the roof tops before the wisdom of New York city fathers prescribed the penalty of $5.—New York Sun.

Dogs and Their Friends.

It was Dr. John Brown of Edinburgh, I think, who spoke in sincere sympathy of the man who "led a dog-less life." It was Mr. Josh Billings, I know, who said that in the whole history of the world there is but one thing that money cannot buy—to wit, the wag of a dog's tail. And it was Professor John C. Van Dyke who declared the other day in reviewing the artistic career of Landseer that he made his dogs too human. It was the great Creator himself who made dogs too human—so human that sometimes they put humanity to shame.

I have been the friend and confidant of three dogs who helped to humanize me for the space of a quarter of a century, and who had souls to be saved, I am sure, and when I cross the Stygian river I expect to find on the other shore a trio of dogs wagging their tails almost off in their joy at my coming, and with honest tongues hanging out to lick my hands and my feet. And then I am going with these faithful, devoted dogs at my heels to talk dogs over with Dr. John Brown, Sir Edwin Landseer and Mr. Josh Billings.—"Three Dogs," by Laurence Hutton, in St. Nicholas.

Everybody Was Quiet.

Back in the seventies a report reached army headquarters that the Indians had swarmed down on a little village in Idaho and murdered every inhabitant. A second lieutenant who had just received his commission was dispatched to the scene to ascertain the authenticity of the rumor. A few hours after his arrival in the village he sent this dispatch to the commanding officer:

"Everybody is quiet here."

Whereupon the commanding officer replied:

"Your report is unintelligible. We have it from responsible source that Indians have massacred every inhabitant."

The lieutenant answered:

"Report is correct. Everybody has been massacred. Everybody is quiet."—New York Journal.

Getting Off a Car.

So many women meet with accidents in endeavoring to get on or off moving cars that it would be well for them to closely observe the men and the ease with which they accomplish what seems an almost perilous feat to the uninitiated woman. Yet the rule which must be observed to insure safety is quite a simple one and consists merely in always facing toward the front of the car and taking a few steps with it.

Changed Conditions.

Willie—Paw, what does the paper mean by talking of the "softer sex?"

Mr. Milligan—When I was your age it meant the women, but they have changed so nowadays that I guess it means the dudes.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"MY FOOD DOES ME NO GOOD."

In any city there are many possible ways to travel from one point to another. But between the food on your table and its destination in the body there is only one road,—directly through the stomach. There is no going around the stomach or forcing a passage through it. Here the food is detained a while for better or for worse. Here it must be digested,—that is to say, changed, liquefied and assorted for assimilation;—or, failing that, it must lie and rot, generating poisonous principles which enter the blood and set up a diseased action throughout the system. This is indigestion or dyspepsia,—the condition that exist when a person says, "My food does me no good."

Certainly not. How can it? The more he eats the more he suffers. The road is blocked. No use putting more grain in the hopper when the mill can not grind. Here are some of nature's protests: Loss of appetite; distress after eating; heartburn; palpitation; flashes of heat and cold; the rising of nauseous acids and gases into the throat; furred tongue; dull and aching head; pains in the chest and back; weariness, fatigue and worry; loss of sleep; cold hands and feet; yellowish eyes and skin; weakness and trembling; constipation; failure of nervous force and courage, etc., etc. Out of this seething blockade in the stomach may come any of a dozen local complaints,—a common form of pseudo-consumption among them. Yet you must eat or starve. Miserable dilemma.

Drastic measure won't do. Take a very little light nourishment at first and immediately after it a dose of the Shaker Digestive Cordial, the only radically effective remedy for indigestion or dyspepsia,—prepared by the Shaker community of Mount Lebanon, N. Y. It will relieve at once and cure quickly. Made from cultivated medicinal herbs and plants grown by the Shakers. Pleasant to the taste, painless and harmless.

Treatment For Lightning Stroke.

Place the subject on his back, head down and bent backward, arms folded over the head, and under no conditions raise the head from the ground or floor. Place beneath the chest a hard roll of clothing, with the shoulders declining slightly over it. Open the mouth, pull the tongue forward and wipe out saliva, loosen the clothing from neck to waist, but do not leave the part exposed, as it is essential to keep the body warm. Kneel astride the subject's hips, with your hands well opened upon his chest, thumbs pointing toward each other and resting on the lower end of the breast bone, little fingers upon the margin of the ribs and the other fingers dipping into the spaces between the ribs. Place your elbows firmly against your hips, and using your knees as a pivot press upward and inward toward the heart and lungs, throwing your weight slowly forward two or three seconds, until your face almost touches that of your patient, ending with a sharp push which helps to jerk you back to your first position. At the same time relax the pressure of your hands, so that the ribs, springing back to their original position, will cause the air to rush into the subject's lungs. Pause for two or three seconds and then repeat these motions at the rate of about ten a minute, until your patient breathes naturally or until satisfied that life is extinct. If there is no response to your efforts persistently maintained for a full hour, you may assume that life is gone.—New York Press.

THE AMERICAN RUSH

Diseases Caused By Too Much Hard Work and Worry.

THEY WEAR OUT THE KIDNEYS.

Why Americans Are More Nervous, Anaemic, and Suffer More From Bright's Disease Than Other Nationalities.

RUSH AND WORRY OUR BLAME

The Kidneys and Their Clogging Caused by Overwork and Worry.

Care and Cure of Clogged Kidneys.

We are an overworked nation.

We get through a great deal of work We do more, and work harder and faster than any other nation on earth.

And that is the trouble.

We work too fast, think too fast, eat too fast.

We don't take enough rest.

Nemesis overtakes us and disorders our kidneys. Nemesis the goddess of vengeance. Nature revenges herself if you overtax her.

Why do we get sick in our kidneys?

It's simple enough to explain and to remember.

Our kidneys were made to filter our blood. That is the first thing.

Every drop of blood that passes through our body has to go through these filters and be purified.

All work uses up blood. That is the next thing.

Blood is fuel. If we work one organ (brain, stomach, arm, leg,) more than another, blood rushes to the hard-worked organ, to nourish it and strengthen it.

Too much work of any kind uses too much blood and strains the kidneys so much that it hurts them. That is the next thing.

Strained kidneys are sick kidneys. Sick kidneys don't filter the blood. And this is the end of it.

To be well we must live naturally—to get well when sick take Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

Living naturally doesn't mean doing without comfort, but not overdoing anything—not over-working, not over-thinking, not over worrying, not over-eating—not over-strainitg our kidneys.

It is so simple to remember that if our blood is kept pure we can keep almost perfectly well; so easy to take care of ourselves if we want to.

But when we are sick it is well to know of something that will make us well.

The cure for all kidney and blood troubles is Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

They are a simple and perfect cure for Bright's disease, diabetes, cold in the kidneys, nephritis, for the symptoms of sleeplessness, backache, sideache, nervousness, frequent thirst, chilly sensations, evil forebodings, puffiness and swelling of the eyelids, feet and ankles.

By nourishing and gently toning up the kidneys and curing them of all that would clog them and prevent them from filtering, Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will cure all disorders of impure and poisonous blood, such as rheumatism, gout, neuralgia, anaemia, thinness of the blood, muscular weakness, tiredness, depression of spirits, shortness of breath, etc.

A few doses will relieve. A few boxes will cure.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills are made principally from the root of the asparagus by a special process which extracts all the virtue in the root. They are perfectly harmless, purely vegetable, and are strongly recommended by physicians of high standing as well as by all who have used them.

Sold by all druggist or mailed prepaid for 50 cents a box.

A free book about the kidneys, "A Filter for Your Blood," illustrated, mailed on request. Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago or San Francisco.

Important Facts.

The remedy will give instant relief.

Their Accurate Expression.

During an acrimonious debate in the house shortly before the war Mr. Potter of Wisconsin made some very sharp strictures on Mr. Pryor of Virginia. The result was a challenge from Pryor to fight a duel, which Potter promptly accepted, naming as terms bowie knifes at five paces, terms which he well knew Pryor would not dare to accept, as he was a small man, while Potter was a large, powerful man and familiar with the use of the bowie knife. Pryor declined on the ground that the proposed terms were beneath the dignity of a gentleman to accept, and so the matter ended. But on the day following the challenge, while the result was still unknown, both Potter and Pryor were absent during roll call, and when Potter's name was called, a Quaker member rose, and in a mild voice said, "Mr. Speaker, I am informed that the gentleman from Wisconsin had a Prior engagement." And when Pryor's name was called a moment later he rose again, saying, "Mr. Speaker, I hear that the gentleman from Virginia has gone to be as clay in the hands of the Potter."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Louis Wain.

Mr. Louis Wain, the English artist whose pictures of cats and animal life are so delightfully fresh and irresistibly droll, is an assiduous taker of notes. He has a great trunk full of little slips of paper on which he has jotted down "ideas" as they crossed his mind. It is perhaps superfluous to say that he is a lover of cats of every kind and every size and every color

Man and Bear Both Scared.

"Yes, we have a great many interesting experiences out in the Puget sound country," said the New England man lately returned from the state of Washington. "I saw a big brown bear one day when I was six miles from the nearest camp. He was about 50 feet ahead of me on the trail, and I was to leeward of him, so I just went round him."

"Why didn't you shoot him?"

"Well, people that don't know the forest always ask that, even after I told them I had only three shots left in my revolver and no other gun along. I should have been in a mess if I had only wounded him, you see. When he scented me, I was a long way off."

"Didn't he run after you?"

"Oh, those brown bears are as much afraid of a man as a man is of them. Why, I knew a fellow who was going across a stream on a fallen tree once. The trunk of the big pine was about five feet up from the ground on his side of the stream, and three feet on the bear's side. He was picking his steps and didn't look to the other side of the water, 60 feet or so. When he got fairly up on to the leg, there was the bear coming. They were both so dead scared they tumbled off into the water on different sides of the log."

"What happened next?"

"Nothing. They both swam ashore on their own sides of the river and put off through the forest. I don't suppose there ever was a man and a bear more surprised or worse scared."—Boston Transcript.

The Female Criminal Excels the Male.

Dr. Lombroso, the Italian specialist in criminology, has written a book on "The Female Offender," in which he says: "The female born criminal is far more terrible than the male. She combines the worst qualities of both sexes—the woman's excessive desire for revenge, cunning, cruelty, love of dress and untruthfulness, the man's vices, fickleness, fearlessness, audacity and often muscular strength. Celto wrote in the fifteenth century: 'No possible punishment can deter women from heaping up crime upon crime. Their perversity of mind is more fertile in new crimes than the imagination of a judge in new punishments.' Rykise said, 'Feminine criminality is more cynical, more depraved and more terrible than the criminality of the male.' 'Rarely,' says the Italian proverb, 'is a woman wicked, but when she is she surpasses the man.' Then comes Euripides with this crusher: 'The violence of the ocean waves or of devouring flames is terrible. Terrible is poverty, but woman is more terrible than all else.'"

The Moral of the Moral.

The persistency with which children see some other moral in a fable than the one which it is intended that they shall see is often distressing, and sometimes really instructive to their elders.

A mother had recited to her little boy the story of the wolf and the lamb, and followed it up with the remark:

"And now you see, Willy, that the lamb would not have been eaten by the wolf if he had been good and sensible."

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR

THE BEGINNING OF THE END.

A NEW START MADE TO EXTEND THE STREET RAILWAY.

The Council Assemble and Hear the Objections of the Mayor—He Thinks the Conditions Should Be More Explicit.

Slow but sure is an apt description of the way Plainfield is getting the extension of the street railway. As the prestidigitator would say, now you see it and now you don't. Just at this moment it is out of sight. After months of dilly-dallying, amending and conferring on this and that, and bearing the most scrutinizing investigation to see that it had no flaws, the ordinance was passed by the Common Council and sent to Mayor Gilbert. The Mayor read the voluminous document and after clearing his mind of the technical language found that there was a serious defect in the phraseology, which afforded a loophole, though perhaps never to be taken advantage of by the railway company, yet there nevertheless with the opportunity of their getting a charter and the city getting unsatisfactory transit, if the railway magnates felt so inclined. He vetoed the ordinance and sent a communication to the Council with reference thereto. The Council was convened in special session last night and the Mayor's message read as follows:

Plainfield, N. J., Nov. 11, 1895.

Very reluctantly I return herewith, without my signature, the ordinance entitled, "An ordinance locating the tracks of the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, and the operation of the same," etc. The objection to this ordinance is found in that portion of Section 8, beginning on the twelfth line, which reads as follows: "or shall afterwards fail, or neglect, to operate the same as aforesaid, daily, and every day, for the space of three consecutive months. All the rights, powers and privileges and every one of them of said company, their successors or assigns, under and by virtue of this supplemental ordinance shall be null and void."

In my judgment, a literal interpretation of this language can convey but one meaning, viz: that the failure or neglect to operate the lines referred to, must continue daily and every day for three consecutive months before the franchise granted by virtue of this ordinance can be revoked. If this interpretation is correct, then it logically follows, that the operation of these lines one day in every three months will meet the requirements of the ordinance and enable the railroad company to hold its franchise.

I know full well that it was not intended by your Honorable Body that such an interpretation should be given to this provision, and I am prepared to believe that it is not the desire of the railroad company to so construe it,—but in view of contigencies that may possibly arise during the long life of this franchise, it seems to me important that Section 8, should be amended to more clearly define the idea that the right of the railroad company to hold its franchise, is dependent upon the continuous operation of its lines.

Respectfully submitted,
A. Gilbert, Mayor.

After Clerk MacMurray had finished reading the message Councilman Fisk moved that a recess be taken in order that the matter might be conferred about. The conferring occupied a few minutes, and after reconvening Mr. Fisk, as a matter of formality, moved that the ordinance be passed notwithstanding the objections of the Mayor. All voted no, including Mr. Fisk himself.

The ordinance was thus conducted into innocuous desuetude, and a new start made by Mr. Fisk offering an application from the street railway company asking for the extension proposed.

Mr. Fisk said that the ordinance just relegated to oblivion was found defective because the section referred to by the Mayor was a part of the first ordinance passed for the railway and was overlooked when inculcated into the new ordinance for the extensions.

The meeting of the Council was brought to an end by Mr. Fisk offering a resolution that Thursday, December 12th, be set as a date for a hearing on the new application of the street raiway company.

And thus was the end of the beginning and beginning of the end.

—The Somerset Democrat says of Jere M. Cobb, who will amuse everyone who hears him at the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow evening: "He delighted the large audience. He simply convulsed them, some people laughing until the tears rolled down their cheeks."

NO DAMPENING OF THEIR ARDOR.

Salvation Army Lads and Lassies Have an Enthusiastic Meeting.

The inclement weather without last evening could not dampen the ardor and enthusiasm of those within at the Salvation Army. There was a goodly number present who entered into the service heartily. Captain Emily March, formerly of Plainfield, but now stationed on the Bowery, New York, has charge of the service and was assisted by Miss Van Norden, of New York and Samuel L. Harris, auxiliary secretary of the Oranges.

The meeting opened with a consecration service, which was full of earnest prayers and deep spiritual songs, and valuable testimonies. Following this Samuel L. Harris was called on and gave a helpful talk on the work that the army is doing among the Oranges. Miss Van Norden was the next speaker and thoroughly interested all in relating her experiences in Europe and this country, telling a great deal about the army work. Captain March was the last speaker and she told something of her work on the Bowery, which proved interesting. During the evening several new hymns were rendered and the meeting throughout was one of great help.

G. A. R. NOMINATIONS.

Winfield Scott Post Get Ready for Their Coming Election.

Winfield Scott Post No. 73, G. A. R., was inspected by Inspector Littell, of Elizabeth, last night. Several comrades from that place accompanied him. There was also a muster and the work was very fine. After the meeting the comrades adjourned to the room below where the Woman's Relief Corps had prepared a sumptuous repast. Speeches and songs were given, including a recitation by W. R. Mattox.

The following nominations of officers were made at the meeting of the Post. The election takes place at the next meeting: Commander, I. L. McVoy, Robert Walker; Senior-Vice, C. B. Stephens, F. M. Whitely; Junior-Vice, W. Moore; Quartermaster, Andrew Cox; Officer of Day, W. C. Smith; Officer of Guard, E. C. Morse; Council of Administration, C. B. Stephens, W. C. Smith, J. E. Stewart, F. M. BANJO CONCERT A SUCCESS.

Beautiful Selections Rendered by Artists on String Instruments.

Good performers and good selections made the banjo concert given at Music Hall last evening, under the direction of George Jenkins, a great success, and, although the rain kept many at home, there was quite a number present, and that they enjoyed the programme from first to last was very apparent from the vigorous applause that was given each selection.

The programme consisted of selections by the banjo orchestra, the Metropolitan Quartette, Jenkins and Taylor, banjoists, Wm. Josh Daly, humorist, the Dore brothers, banjo players, Master Francis Hastings, elocutionist, and Brooks, Denton and Ossman, the great banjo trio. The weather was not the best for the instruments, but that did not prevent the rendition of some excellent music. Josh Daly was very amusing in his selections and greatly delighted his hearers.

Croup is a terror to young mothers. To post them concerning the first symptoms, and treatment is the object of this item. The first indication of croup is hoarseness. In a child who is subject to croup it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the rough cough has appeared it will prevent the attack. THE DEBUT OF MISS SHEPARD

DELIGHTFUL SOCIAL FUNCTION AT THE GABLES LAST NIGHT.

The House Beautifully Decorated With Floral Displays—Those Who Assisted in Receiving and Some of Those Present.

A more delightful social function Plainfield society has seldom witnessed than the one at the palatial home of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Shepard, "The Gables," yesterday afternoon and evening, when their charming daughter, Miss Joanna H. Shepard, made her debut.

The spacious hallways and rooms were exquisitely decorated with smilax and roses, chrysanthemums, greens and holly of the choicest variety, which were furnished by William H. Brower, of New York.

The reception was held from 4 to 7 o'clock, and Miss Shepard was assisted in receiving by Miss Edith Hyde, Mis Parish, Miss Hoyt, Miss Archibold, Miss Thompson, Miss Edith Smalley and Miss Soley.

Miss Shepard was charmingly gowned in white satin trimmed with lace.

During the afternoon Burnstein's orchestra, of New York, rendered choice selections, adding very much to the brilliancy of the affair. The table was arranged handsomely with cut roses and flowers, and the supper by Sherry, of New York, was all to be desired, the service being especially fine. In the evening from 8 to 12 dancing was enjoyed by the guests.

Miss Shephard received several beautiful presents in the shape of large baskets of the choicest flowers.

Among those present were: Dr. Nactel, of Paris; Miss Stokes, Miss Godfrey, Mr. Stout, Rupert King, Mr. Walcott, Mr. Arnold, Mr. Haydel, Mr. Slade, M. PARSONAGE FOR DUER STREET.

Consistory of German Reformed Church Buy a Lot.

The consistory of the German Reformed church on Craig place met last evening and decided upon the matter of a parsonage. They have purchased that very desirable corner lot on Duer street, corner of Park place, of the owner, Mrs. J. K. Van-Arsdale, and will commence the erection of a house as soon as plans and other details are arranged. The Press congratulates the church on their choice of such a lot and sincerely hopes that a house in keeping with the neighborhood will be erected, and thus be a credit to the church and the street. Build a good house, brethren, and if you should desire to dispose of it after awhile it will sell better than a cheap one.

Commissioners Organize.

The commissioners of the Watchung avenue opening met in the Common Council rooms last night and organized by electing Townsend Rushmore chairman, and W. T. Kirk, secretary. There was no one present who desired to be heard either in favor of or against the opening, and the commissioners adjourned to meet in the Mayor's office Friday night at eight o'clock.

It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. R. Armstrong, Manager.

A YOUNG LIFE CRUSHED OUT.

A RADIATOR FALLS ON WILLIAM WINCKLER WITH FATAL RESULTS.

Assisting to Carry the Apparatus and Did Not Notice the Opening into Which He Fell With the Radiator on Him.

A most distressing fatality occurred in the nearly completed residence of Borough Councilman John H. Valiant at the corner of Myrtle and Sycamore avenues, yesterday afternoon at about 3:30, which resulted in the instantaneous death of Wm. Winckler, one of the young men who was engaged in putting the steam radiators in the house.

C. W. Krausse, of Vine street, had the contract of putting in the steam heating apparatus and sent William Winckler and James Vosbery, two of his employes, there to work. The house is about completed, with the exception of some carpenter work. The cellar stairs had not yet been built, but the opening in the floor had been left for them. Winckler and Vosbery started to carry one of the large iron radiators, which weighs about three or four hundred pounds, from the hall into one of the back rooms. Winckler had the front end and backed through the hall.

The opening for the cellar stairs extended into the hall for a short distance and in some way, no one knows exactly how, Winckler stepped into the opening and fell. Vosbery says that Winckler staggered, but it may have been caused by the misstep into the opening.

Winckler, instead of releasing his hold on the radiator, held on the tighter and his weight drew the heavy radiator after him. He fell on his back and the heater struck him full in the face, instantly killing him. Vosbery hung on to his end with might and main, but the combined weight of Winckler and the radiator was too much and down they went.

The shock was a terrible one to Vosbery when he found that his old friend and companion had been killed and he fairly ran all the way to Front street, where he told his employer of the terrible catastrophe that had just happened. Chief Marshal Van Horn and A. M. Runyon & Son were notified, and Elmer E. Runyon came and took care of the corpse.

An inquest will, of course, be held, but the death was purely accidental and no blame can be attached to any one. It was one of those sad accidents which happen despite the fact that the greatest precautions are taken.

William Winckler was the son of Augustus J. Winckler, of Park place, a prominent carpenter of the borough. He was an exemplary young man and was a great favorite among his friends and comrades. He was a member of the Congregational church and a good Christian young man. He was also a member of Franklin Council, Jr. O. U. A. M. He passed his twenty-first birthday only a short time before election and he was greatly delighted at being able to cast his first ballot.

The death was a great blow to the family and the awful manner in which it occured made it all the more tragic. His mother and sisters were almost prostrated by the shock.

The funeral will be held from the home of his parents, 32 Park place, Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Franklin Council, J. O. U. A. M., will attend in a body.

MISS PHILBROOK DECIDED AGAINST

Counselor McClure Wins a Point Over New Jersey's Woman Lawyer.

Miss Mary A. Philbrook, the famous New Jersey woman lawyer, appeared in the Orphan's Court today to oppose the confirmation of the sale of land at Murray Hill by Lawrence Collins, administrator of John Collins, deceased, and asked that the same be set aside. Her petition in the matter, alleging fraud and no notice of the sale, was quite lenghthy, occupying five or six pages of typewritten matter. Upon hearing the petition and argument on behalf of the admisistrator by his counsel, William K. McClure, the Court declined to set the sale aside and ordered testimony to be taken before the surrogate.

Counselor McClure was kept quite busy in introducing Miss Philbrook to the officials of the court and the other lawyers, among whom she received a very pleasant reception.

The Mayor's Presentation.

Mayor Gilbert has presented to the firemen a beautiful silver firemen's trumphet to be contested for between the Scotch Plains and Westfield fire departments at the coming firemen's fair.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. THE PROBLEM OF SUPREMACY

DR. RIGGS THUS CHARACTERIZES THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Says That the Question is an Old International Complication in Which All Powers Want to Come Out Rulers.

Amid the downpour of rain last evening about 150 persons gathered in the lecture room of the Crescent Avenue church to listen to the first lecture of the course of six on the Eastern Qnestion, to be given by the Rev. James F. Riggs, D. D., of New Brunswick, during the winter.

The first lecture, given last evening, was on "Asiatic Empires." The following is a condensed idea of the lecture.

"The Eastern Question is an old international jealousy never set at rest; an old complicated problem never solved; an old inflamed wound never healed. If an acid and an alkali be put together in a mechanical way no effect is noticeable, but mix them in a chemical way and they combine with a marked effervescence.

"So it is in the east, Turks, Armenians, Greeks, Bulgarians, Albanians, Koords and Syrians may live together in a mechanical way in peace; but, let a little disturbance come in among them and at once there is a great disturbance. So, mediæval romance, religious bigotry, and modern politics, combined unequally, occasion this explosion. This singular mingling of diverse elements gives a strange, nebulous character to the idea of the Orient. It is like a dream, like a vision of fairyland, a medley of the smooth and the rough, the beautiful and the grotesque. One point of vital importance must be clearly recognized at the outset; namely, the vast differences between those colossal Asiatic empires and all western States. Many motives which are potent in the one case are quite imperative in the other. The popular notions of things are entirely different. For example, in the west political power comes up from the people; in the east it comes down from God. In the west there is, on the whole, advance, increase, a gradual betterment, an evolution along the line of growth. In the east the changes being no relief; it is only a shifting of taskmasters. The people of the east are very superstitious and the power of superstition must be recognized.

"In the west our daily lives are governed by the so-called practical rules and notions, while our pleasures are ideal. In the East this is reversed. The pleasures of the Oriental are of the practical order, while in his daily routine he is governed by a dream. Mohammedanism and the Crusades intensified this state of things, and it prevails to this day.

"In spite of romance it is possible to study the Eastern question soberly, just as we study any other historical problem. It is terribly real to five hundred millions of people.

"The Eastern question is the problem of supremacy in the heart of the Old World. It is the question of harmony in the hearts of the great triple continent, Europe, Asia and Africa. On the right solution of this problem depends the welfare of contless millions in their physical, intellectual and spiritual relations. Who shall rule these millions?

"The Eastern question finds its force in three places, namely, Herat, Egypt and Constantinople. Because of the many complex elements involved this question is very difficult, it has thus far defied the efforts of statesmen, soldiers and missionaries.

"The Eastern question is like neuralgia; it manifests itself now here, now there, now at many points at once, flitting, shifting and eluding pursuit. It is like the Genii in the bottle, as narrated in the Arabian Nights."

A Children's Reception.

There was a large brilliant reception held yesterday afternoon by the children of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott at their home on East Front street. The rooms were beautifully decorated. Miss Isabella assisted by two young friends received the guests in the parlor. Notwithstanding the weather, there was about fifty girls and boys present, and all enjoyed themselves thoroughly.

—The Y. M. C. A. building will be open tomorrow as usual.

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

WOULD DIE WITH HER

Tragedy Probably Due to a Love Affair.

Carrie Plate, an Estimable Young Lady of Arlington Heights, N. J., Slightly Wounded by Thomas Colt, Who Then Put a Bullet in His Own Head, Causing a Mortal Wound.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 27.—On Arlington Heights yesterday afternoon Thomas Colt shot and slightly wounded Miss Carrie Plate, daughter of the late Henry B. Plate, and then sent a bullet into his own head, inflicting a mortal wound. Colt, who is 38 years of age, was a frequent caller at the Plate mansion, one of the most conspicuous dwelling houses in West Arlington. About half an hour prior to the shooting Colt and Miss Plate boarded a car, near the Erie bridge. They chatted and laughed merrily and so far as the conductor could see neither Colt or the young woman acted as if they ever had a care on their minds. Colt and his companion, on leaving the car, started toward Magnolia avenue, on which the Plate mansion stands. Near Kearney avenue Colt first displayed evidence of his intentions. He then drew a revolver of forty-two calibre from his hip pocket and fired three shots at his companion. The first bullet penetrated the fleshy part of her right arm, the second struck a corset steel and glanced off and the third went wide of its mark. Colt then turned the weapon toward himself and sent a bullet into his own head. Miss Plate was able to walk home assisted by a neighbor. Colt was taken to a hospital. It has been learned that about a month ago Colt attempted to shoot Miss Plate while they were out walking because she refused to marry him. Colt is well known about Kearny. He was a photographer and some time ago published a book entitled "Picturesque Arlington." It contained views of the prominent buildings, most attractive spots and sketches of the leading business men and citizens. Miss Plate, the victim of what is supposed to be Colt's jealous rage, is about 25 years old. She is one of the most estimable women in Kearny township.

SHIP'S LONGBOAT SIGHTED.

Believed To Contain the Crew of the Lost Vessel Belle O'Brien.

Kilrush, Ireland, Nov. 27.—A longboat under sail with eleven persons on board was sighted off Loop Head last night apparently heading for the river Shannon. The boat is believed to be from the American ship Belle O'Brien, Captain Colley, from San Francisco for Queenstown, which was abandoned in a sinking condition a few days ago by her chief officer and a number of the crew who landed at the entrance to the river Shannon. The captain, his wife and a number of the crew remained on board the ship when the others left her, but it is believed that they afterward abandoned her. The longboat signalled a passing steamer off Loop Head, but no attention was paid to the signals.

GOLD STRIKE IN JERSEY.

Valuable Vein Discovered on a Farm Near Somerville.

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 27.—A gold vein has been discovered on the farm of John Sutphen, eight miles from this place. The vein was first discovered last summer by mining prospectors, and, for a time, their find was kept a secret. Now, however, miners are at work on the ledge and have already taken out 100 tons of rock containing precious metal. A careful analysis of the rock by experts shows it to contain $80 worth of gold and $132 of silver to the ton. Farmer Sutphen receives a royalty on the gold and silver mined.

For Robbing the Mails.

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 27.—Edward G. Uffers, aged 18, employed as errand boy by the Phelps Publishing company, was arrested last night by a Boston postoffice inspector for robbing the mails of the Phelps company. He abstracted stamps and money from letters and also took watches which were sent out with subscriptions and returned to the office.

KERRIGAN'S LIFE SPARED.

Gov. Morton Commutes His Sentence to Life Imprisonment.

Albany, Nov. 27.—Gov. Morton has commuted to imprisonment for life the sentence of Thomas Kerrigan, who was to have been electrocuted at Sing Sing prison next week for the murder of Aaron Alexander in New York city. The murder occurred in a saloon on the evening of April 3, 1894; and was the result of a quarrel which arose over the fact that Kerrigan treated every one in the place except Alexander. The latter was a large, powerful man and struck Kerrigan, who left the saloon, and returning with a revolver shot and killed his assailant. In extending clemency Gov. Morton, in a brief memorandum, said: "It appears from the evidence that in killing Alexander, Kerrigan acted under great provocation, and although this circumstance could not legally change the character of the offense it is one which ought to be taken into account in determining the punishment. After a careful consideration of all the facts it has been deemed just to commute the sentence to imprisonment for life."

TO SAVE HER MOTHER'S LIFE.

A 14-year-old Girl Shoots and Mortally Wounds Her Father.

Tarrytown, N. Y., Nov. 27.—William Mathers, a saloon and hotel proprietor at Archville, a little hamlet about two miles north of this place, was shot and mortally wounded by his 14-year-old daughter Annie late Monday night. During a quarrel, Mathers, who was crazy with drink, tried to brain his wife with an axe. He chased her through the house and into the yard and was about to brain her when Annie, seeing her mother's danger, seized a revolver that lay on the bar and fired four shots at her father in rapid succession. All of the bullets went wide of their mark except one, which penetrated Mather's side, inflicting a mortal wound. Annie says the reason she shot her father was that she feared that he would kill her mother if she did not stop him. Mrs. Mathers is nearly prostrate over the affair.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

It Will Be Lengthy and Dwell Largely on Foreign Affairs.

Washington, Nov. 27.—There is every reason to believe that foreign affairs, the Venezuelan and Alaskan boundary matters, the Cuban revolution, the perilous position of American missionaries in Turkey and other engrossing topics, will lead off in the president's message for 1895. It is understood that the document will be somewhat longer than usual. It will of course not be sent to congress until after time has been given for an organization to be effected. This implies that Tuesday next, just as soon after 12 p. m. as the respective committees deputed to wait on the president can make their reports, will be the earliest date at which Assistant Secretary Pruden can announce "A message in writing from the president of the United States."

SAYS HE KILLED JOHNSON.

Edward F. Smith Surrenders to the Pittsburg Police.

Pittsburg, Nov. 27.—Late yesterday afternoon a well dressed young man, giving the name of Edward F. Smith, called at police headquarters and informed Inspector McKelvey that he was the party wanted for assaulting G. W. Johnston on Sixth avenue two weeks ago, and from the effects of which Johnson died last Thursday. Smith is an engineer for the Second Avenue Traction company, and says he would have surrendered sooner, but could not get away from his business. Smith says Johnson applied a vile epithet to him and as he passed knocked off his hat. Smith has employed an attorney and gave bail for his appearance at court.

RIVER RISING AT PITTSBURG.

Millions of Bushels of Coal Will Be Started South This Evening.

Pittsburg, Nov. 27.—To-day will see the climax of the present excitement and activity in river and coal circles. The weather bureau forecast calls for a ten-foot stage of water by to-night and the river is now rising fast. In event of this depth of water more than 10,000,000 bushels of coal will at once be started for southern markets.

YOUNG LADIES' TROUBLE.

FACTS MADE KNOWN TO FRIENDS

Lady Stenographers, Typewriters, and all Working Girls Interested.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

This class of women are more or less afflicted with illness brought on by constant application in one position. Therefore all will be interested in the candid expression of this bright young lady of Denver, Col., who writes Mrs. Pinkham as follows:—

"This is the first opportunity I have found to write and thank you for the good your Compound has done me. I feel better than I have for years. It seems a seven days' wonder to my friends. Where I used to be pitied, everything is the opposite, and there is not a day but what some one wants to know what I have done to work such a wonder.

"Before taking the Compound I had constant headaches; was constipated; bloated; eyes weak, with watery whites; bearing down pains; pains in the small of my back and right side; took cold very easily, which always caused intense pain in ovaries. I did not want to go anywhere or see any one.

"I was called cross, but I could not help it, feeling as I did. I could not lift anything or do any hard work without suffering for days afterward. Menstruation lasted from eight to ten days, the first two or three days being in almost constant pain, day and night.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made a new girl of me; am now well, happy, and strong." Yours truly, A STENOGRAPHER, Denver, Col.

BLIZZARD IN THE WEST

Raging Storm Plays Havoc in Many States.

Trains Blocked and Wires Down—St. Louis Entirely Cut Off for Nearly Twelve Hours—Fierce Gales Cause Damage in Ohio and Indiana—Storm at Buffalo.

St. Louis, Nov. 27.—The first blizzard of the season struck this city early yesterday morning and continued for ten hours. The snowfall is about five inches, but on account of the high winds it is badly drifted. The heavy sleet had a bad effect on telegraph, telephone and electric wires and the service was paralyzed. For nearly twelve hours St. Louis was cut off from all telegraphic communication from all points, east, west and north. The reports state that the blizzard extended from North Dakota to Texas and from Colorado to the central states. Railroad traffic suffers severely and nearly all roads report trains from one to four hours late. It is feared the storm will cause great havoc in the territories and in Texas.

FIERCE GALE AT BUFFALO.

Water in the Lake Six Feet Above Normal—Much Damage Done.

Buffalo, Nov. 27.—A sixty-eight mile so'-wester let itself out here yesterday and it kept it up for several hours. After the heavy rain subsided, the wind sprang up with startling results. The water in the lake, which has been three feet lower than normal is now six feet above. The Central track at the foot of Georgia street is washed away and no Belt line or Central trains are running. The Philadelphia & Reading, which has tracks alongside, has also been stalled. Down the river high water was everywhere present and a part of Squaw island temporarily disappeared. Squatters along the sea wall have had their homes washed away and ruined. The $40,000 side wheel excursion steamer Shrewsbury, belonging to the Niagara Falls Excursion company, is beached on the sand at the foot of Genesee street. The high wind caused great damage to the boat. At Niagara Falls nearly three hundred feet of the Erie passenger train sheds were blown down. The river is covered with floating lumber and debris. The new suspension bridge rocked like a hanging cradle, while a man was blown off the wall of the canal near the Niagara Falls Paper company and rescued with difficulty.

Damage in Ohio and Indiana.

Cincinnati, Nov. 27.—The fierce storm which swept over central and southern Ohio and Indiana yesterday morning caused great loss of property. Frail dwellings were blown down in a number of towns, houses were unroofed, fences leveled and trees uprooted. Telegraph lines were also badly demoralized.

Storm's Work in Ontario.

Toronto, Nov. 27.—Dispatches from different parts of the country report great damage to property by yesterday's gale. Buildings were unroofed, fences and trees blown down and telegraph and telephone wires demoralized.

HIS THIRD DEATH WARRANT.

Theodore Lambert Again Sentenced To Be Hanged.

Trenton, Nov. 27.—Gov. Werts has issued the death warrant of Theodore Lambert of Camden the murderer of William Kairer. Lambert is sentenced to be hanged on December 19. Lawyer Sample will make an appeal to the board of pardon for the commutation of sentence. This is the third time that Lambert has been sentenced to death.

To Keep Out the Illiterate.

Boston, Nov. 27.—Hon. Samuel W. McCaull has been selected by the executive committee of the Immigration Restriction league to introduce into the national house of representatives a bill prepared by the league excluding as immigrants "all persons between the ages of fourteen and fifty who cannot both read and write the English language, or some other language."

Sympathy for Cuban Rebels.

New York, Nov. 27.—A monster mass meeting to express sympathy with the Cuban insurgents was held at Cooper Union last night. The speakers were Charles A. Dana, Congressman William Sulzer, Rev. Thomas Dixon, Rev. Father Ducey, Samuel Gompers and others. Resolutions calling on congress to grant belligerent rights to the patriots were adopted.

"Ivanhoe" Produced in Berlin.

Berlin, Nov. 27.—Sullivan's "Ivanhoe" was produced last night at the Royal opera house. The emperor and empress occupied the royal box. A large and fashionable audience was present. At the conclusion of the opera the emperor summoned Sir Arthur Sullivan to his box and congratulated him upon his work.

Escaped Hanging Four Times.

Pittsburg, Nov. 27.—Albert J. Woodley, who murdered his sweetheart in Allegheny City and attempted his own life, was to have been hanged in the county jail yesterday. Four dates have been fixed for his execution. The present respite from the governor extends the date of execution to December 26.

Gen. Harrison in New York.

New York, Nov. 27.—Ex-President Harrison arrived at the Fifth Avenue hotel from Saratoga, where he had been with his daughter, last night. He will probably leave for his home in Indianapolis to-day.

Councilman Frazee says that he will not serve even if he is elected.

Don't look for The Daily Press tomorrow. No paper will be issued.

Editor Runyon's idea of police reform is to oust the man against whom he is opposed for personal reasons.

Editor Runyon practically declares himself against the straight Republican ticket in The News of last night.

The coming session of the United States Senate will have 400 presidential nominations for postmasters to act on.

Editor Runyon's Republican flambouyancy is missing. Why is it? An interesting story lies behind the reason.

The New York World this morning publishes a column of what is claimed to be the political situation in Plainfield. It is a distorted description with but few truths.

Governor-elect Griggs is said to be in favor of putting the clerks of the Court of Chancery and Supreme Court on salaries instead of fees. These places are now worth from $20,000 to $40,000.

Because one man has satisfactorily filled an office for a long period of years it does not imply that another man cannot perform the duties of the office with just as great efficiency and satisfaction.

Mayor Gilbert is entitled to no little credit in finding the defect in the street railway extension ordinance. Anyone who could grasp all the important points of the document after reading the legal terms of said this and said that must be possessed of a more than ordinary clear mind.

Tonight is the time when the man of family affairs goes stumbling up the front steps with a turkey in his arms, and a faint recollection that he paid a dime to be "in it," was the lucky man, heard the individual attired in a white coat ask the crowd what they would have, and—well, the gobbler cost $4 50. The little white blocks with the black spots will be kept busy tonight.

The State Board of Canvassers have declared the official vote for Governor to be: Griggs, 162,900; McGill 136,000; thus giving Griggs 26,900 plurality. The great falling off this year was on the Democratic side. McGill received 31,284 votes less than George T. Werts polled in 1892, and then Werts ran 3,800 votes behind Cleveland. The Republican vote increased this year, but not to any extent, when the large plurality is taken in consideration.

A Legislative forecast says that great interest centres in the approaching session of the Legislature. If the policy suggested by the Governor-elect is carried out, the session will be a short one, and fewer laws will be placed on the statue books than for many a year. There is really little need of much legislation this year. Most of the remedial laws were passed last year and the one previous. Some of these need a little patching up, as, for instance, the appropriation bill. This is really an experiment, and a number of changes are already seen to be advisable. The constitutional amendments which went through last winter will come up for further consideration. There will probably be no trouble with their passage again this year, as is necessary before they can be submitted to the people, unless it may be the one providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature. This would legislate out of existence a Republican Senate, and some of the party leaders think this ill-advised. There has been a rumor that the amendent prohibiting all kinds of lotteries would be passed, but there is no foundation for this. The Republicans expect to push it right through.

There is not the slightest reason why you should not feel well and strong. That great offer of Dr. Greene's is proving the best friend that weak and delicate people ever had. A letter sent to him at his office, 35 West 14th St., New York City, telling the symptoms you are suffering from, will be immediately answered by the doctor, describing your complaint minutely, and making you understand perfectly just what ails you. And all this costs you nothing. You don't have to leave your home and you don't have to pay any doctor's fee to learn exactly what your complaint is, and how to get well and strong from Dr. Greene, the greatest living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor makes a specialty of curing patients through his great system of letter correspondence, and is having wonderful success. Thousands of weak, delicate men and women are writing him about their complaints, and are being permanently cured. It was he who discovered that world-renowned curative, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Write the Doctor at once and see what he says about your complaint. It will probably be the means of your getting back your health.

The Park Club bowling team will go to Cranford Friday night.

The Cranford Athletic Club bowling team will visit the Union County Country Club tonight.

The next game in the Central Journal Bowling League will be rolled at Bergen Point Friday evening bebetween the Elizabeth Athletic Club and the New Jersey Athletic Club.

What's the matter with the Crescent Wheelmen? Last night their bowlers added another victory to their former one and did it to the tune of 1618, while their opponents from the Cranford Couutry Club only upset 1506 pins. Already the trophy of the Central Journal Bowling League looms up in the distance and Plainfield may have another victor to crow over. At the first frame the Crescents jumped ahead and set such a lively pace that Cranford did not see the lead during the entire game. It was neck and neck for the first five frames, and then the veterans from the home team did a little hustling and kept it up, finishing in true Garrison style. Wilbur kept up his reputation of the last game as high man, while "Doc" Thiers took second ploce. Captain VanEmburg encouraged his team on with words until the last frame when he wound up with three strikes. Petrie made two strikes in the tenth frame. The umpires were Thomas U. Smith and Charles W. Runyon, while H. Wilbur and C. E. Teel plied their pencils at the scorer's table. The record of the individual bowlers was as follows:

"You can't lose us" was the cry of the Plainfield Catholic Club bowlers last night, when they met the Institutes of Newark on the alleys in this city for the first this season. It was the first game in the Diocesan Union League series. The new regulation pins were used and they did not altogether suit the bowlers. High scores will not be looked for among the clubs on account of it being a two-ball tournament, which in reality amounts to the loss of one frame or 100 pins in all. The P. C. C. bowlers have hardly got in shape to do good bowling, but they secured the game last night, which proves that with little practice they will be able to meet all comers in the League with a certainty of winning. The visitors bowled an even game, but were unable to overcome the lead of the home team. Below will be found the score in full:

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Back Again.

Dr. E. B. Lighthill

of New York City,

whose practice in Plainfield has proved such a wonderful success has opened an office at

134 Crescent Avenue

(next door to his former residence) where he can be consulted from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., on Tuesday and Friday

of each week.

DR. LIGHTHILL makes the treatment of deafness, catarrh and diseases of the throat, lungs and heart a specialty.

Piles radically and permanently cured in a few weeks without the use of the knife, ligature or cautery and without pain or detention from business. The most desperate cases yield unfailingly to Dr. Lighthill's unique method of treatment, with guaranteed success. Fistula, fissure and ulcers of the rectum are also completely and permanently cured without the knife or other surgical operation.

Diseases of the bowels, bladder and stomach, mental and nervous derangements, diseases of the skin and blood and all chronic and obstinate complaints affecting the human system, of whatever name or nature, are successfully treated.

DR. LIGHTHILL refers with pardonable pride to the remarkable cures of his former practice in Plainfield and to the reputation which he established throughout the State. He has in his possession hundreds of testimonials from well-known residents of Plainfield and vicinity, which can be seen at his office.

CONVICTS PLAN ESCAPE.

Three Long Term Men in Dungeons at Trenton as the Result.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 27.—John H. Patterson, head keeper at the state prison has discovered a plot of a gang of convicts to escape, and as a result three of the men implicated are now in dungeon cells. They are William Speer, John Langenburg and William C. Housell. The two first named are doing a ten-year term for breaking. Housell is also a housebreaker doing fifteen years. Speer and Langenburg were employed in the mat shop where a dye is used to color the fibre used in the mats. With this die the men colored two prison suits and out of the fibre strands they made a rope ladder about thirty feet in length. The dyed suits and the ladder were found stuffed in a ventilating shaft of the cell occupied by the men. A burglar from Essex, who has become a trusty, gave the conspiracy away. Housell had tools in his cell. It is believed the men were waiting for a foggy night to attempt the escape. The rope ladder was to be used in scaling the high stone wall surrounding the prison. The effort would have been attended by the danger of being shot by the sentries on the walls. They are never so alert as on dark and foggy nights.

HILL AT MILWAUKEE.

Inclement Weather Keeps Many from Attending His Lecture.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 27.—Senator David B. Hill was greeted by a comparatively small audience at the Academy of Music last night which can be attributed to the inauspicious weather. About one-third of the seats, 700, were occupied when Mr. Hill appeared on the stage at 8:30 and was introduced to the audience by Mayor Kich. He read his lecture from a voluminous manuscript and it was received with enthusiasm. After the lecture an informal reception was given Mr. Hill by the Democratic Jeffersonian club at the Plankinton house.

LANGERMAN CONVICTED.

Liable to Twenty Years' Imprisonment for Assaulting Miss Aub.

New York, Nov. 27.—The jury in the case of Walter Langerman, a lawyer of this city, who was charged with criminal assault on Miss Barbara Aub, returned a verdict of guilty in the first degree last evening. Langerman became pale when the verdict was announced and clung to the railing in front of him. He was remanded until Friday. The extreme penalty for the offense is twenty years' imprisonment.

HE GIVES THANKS.

I'M AS thankful's any turkey still alive in all the land
That we still air doin business at the old, reli'ble stand;
That we've got a daisy navy growin bigger every hour,
And a navy Kaiser Willyum thinks is goin to be a power;
That the starry flag's respected everywhere it gits unfurled;
That our credit still is solid in the countries of the world;
That the gold and silver fellers, both a-jawin for their rights,
Air succeedin still in keepin out o' rough an tumble fights;
That the fin de siecle business jest at present's layin low;
That the wimmen still air givin men at least a little show;
That the presidental 'lection doesn't come in ninety-five;
That I've mastered cycle ridin and am hull and still alive,
But fer one thing, honest Injun naow, I cannot thankful feel—
My daughter, Hail Columby's, wearin bloomers on a wheel!

THANKSGIVING DAY.

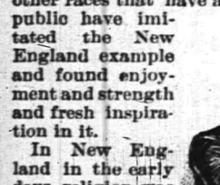
Junius Henri Browne on the New and the Old Religion.

[Copyright, 1895, by American Press Association.]

The New England custom, which has been adopted throughout the United States, of appointing a special day, the last Thursday in November, of Thanksgiving and prayer, is now observed, I think, by every denomination, services being held in the morning in all the churches. These services are much less attended, however, than they formerly were, because the day has recently lost favor theologically or religiously and gained favor socially. People who feel that they should give thanks to any supernal power may not recognize any one day more than another for so doing, and consequently may refrain from observing any special day. Whatever the cause, Thanksgiving has lost much of its popular hold so far as ecclesiastic ceremony is concerned. But as a day for the reunion of kindred, near or remote, at a bountiful dinner it is highly revered, and the beautiful custom more and more widely followed. New England has been called the brain, sometimes the conscience of the republic. It has certainly done a good deal toward settling the land. New Englanders have immigrated all over the land.

The custom is so human, so benevolent, so attractive that descendants of the Dutch, Germans, Huguenots, Scotch-Irish and other races that have also peopled the republic have imitated the New England example and found enjoyment and strength and fresh inspiration in it.

In New England in the early days religion was mostly theologic, theologic pure and simple, a thing of entire faith, of absolute dogma, the vigorous interpretation of certain intensely earnest men who felt themselves called upon to expound the Scriptures. They considered it their bounden duty to be mercilessly logical, whether or not they offended reason or shocked humanity. It mattered not if they portrayed the Deity as a monster. He was what he was; what the eternal word declared him to be. There could be no palliation of the word. If God appeared pitiless, cruel, malignant, he was really just, good, compassionate, and they, in their narrowness and bigotry, labored to reconcile those glaring contradictions. Thank nature and common sense, this so called religion, the most depraved form of theology, has long since grown obsolete. Its existence at any time seems to the last quarter of the century altogether impossible. During the last 50 years, the whole educated world, the western world especially, has grown less and less theological and more and more religious. We see this continually on every side. Creed is no longer fixed and binding. The sense of duty to our fellows, the spirit of charity has strengthened and expanded until every class and every individual, however alien or humble, is now included. We are beginning at last to recognize that mankind is but one vast human family; that vice and crime arise from stress of circumstances rather than from malevolence or deliberate choice; that people are not so wicked as they are unfortunate and need cheering, sympathy, development.



fession he should pursue, disliking the idea of farming, and certainly that did not seem what Enos was made for.

His mother had hoped that he would have a liking for preaching and study theology. "I should like Enos to be a dominie," she had said, and Enos himself was thinking of the law, when a runaway accident occurred, and it came to pass that Enos saved Miss Adelaide Percival's life at the risk of his own. Mr. Percival, in his gratitude, had offered Enos a position in the bank of which he was president, and since then the young man had been made cashier, a wonderful thing for so young a man as Enos. Edward Percival had become his friend and had been brought home to visit and fell in love with Mahala—so he vowed—at first sight. And, ah, how fond she was of him!

"I think it is because father and mother are such good people that the Lord has blessed their children," said Mahala to herself, smiling gently as she gazed toward the roofs of her native village, now visible in the distance.

"Alumbridge!" shrieked the brakeman. It was the popular pronunciation of Elmbridge. Mahala gathered up her parcels and stepped out upon the platform. Her trunk stood there, but she saw no wagon waiting for her.

"Is the train early, Mr. Doble?" she asked the baggage master.

"No, Miss Mahaly," he replied; "the train is a little late. Your wagon is yonder under the trees." Mahala hurried across the intervening space. A girl's voice came to her from behind the curtains, which were let down: "Mahala, that you, dear? I waited here because Stupid seemed restive. Sorry to give Mr. Doble so much trouble."

"WHO HAS BEEN TELLING THESE FALSEHOODS?"

As Mahala took her seat beside her sister Letty flung her thin young arms about her neck and gave her a long hug and a lingering kiss, and Mahala felt a tear upon her cheek.

"Why, Letty—so glad to see me as all that?" she cried.

Letty shook the reins and drove on, but Mahala heard her sob.

"Why, darling," she said, "has our old Stupid been restive enough to frighten you after all his quiet years?" The girl's answer was a strange one.

"Mahala, he hasn't. I only said that. I didn't want to drive up where folks could see me because my face is all swollen up with crying. Stupid poked along just as usual, but it wouldn't surprise me if he had run away. Black Peter bit me this morning. Bit and scratched me, and I haven't seen him since. Mahala, it wouldn't astonish me if you were to take out a dagger and stab me to the heart. It would not."

"Sister Letty," said Mahala. "I am afraid you think we shall not be as dear to each other after I am married. I believe that is what is upsetting you. But there you are mistaken, darling. You will only gain a brother."

"A brother!" repeated Letty, and broke into a fit of hysterical sobbing.

"What is it?—is mother ill—or—or"—

"Mother isn't sick."

"No, it's not that."

"Father?" whispered Mahala.

"Father has his health," said Letty.

"And you are here, it's not you. It must be Enos. Oh, Letty, it is Enos!" wailed Mahala. "My darling brother, my own dear boy—tell me."

"No," said Letty. "I almost swore I wouldn't until you got home. I guess you feel bad enough to expect anything, now, if that's what they mean by preparing people. They said I could prepare you a little. I guess I have."

They were now in sight of the Pynchon homestead. The afterglow of the sunset was a soft, primrose yellow. The old house, situated on a high elevation, and the bare and graceful branches of the elm trees about it lay black against the yellow, as Letty drove up to the gate and jumped out upon the stone block.

If terror could have killed her, Mahala must have dropped dead before she reached the porch and saw a figure emerge from the darkness of the house. It was her father, and she fell into his arms unable even to ask a question.

"You've told her, Letty," he said reproachfully.

"I haven't, pa. I prepared her, and this is the result," responded Letty, bursting into tears. But Mahala was already able to stand on her feet and be led into the parlor. If she had had any doubt that the calamity was serious, this would have convinced her of it—this solemn entrance into the best room.

"Trouble has come upon us, daughter," said the old man.

"I have guessed it. Enos is dead?" gasped Mahala.

"No, child," said the father. "The trouble that has come to this house is not the trouble that death brings. Mahala, your brother has betrayed them that trusted him. He has robbed the bank and is off with the hard earnings of widows and orphans. Enos—our Enos—is a traitor and a cowardly thief."

But at that Mahala sprang to her feet.

"If an angel should tell me that," she cried, "I'd know it was a lie. Whom have you been listening to, father? Who has dared say such things of the son you know so well to be good and upright?"

The old man turned away, sat down beside the table, folded his arms and hid his face in them. Mahala, with flashing eyes and burning cheeks, turned to Letty.

"Who has been telling father these falsehoods?" she asked.

"Nobody told him," Letty answered. "Everybody keeps away as if we had the plague and they knew it. We read it in the paper this morning. Oh, Mahala, it was such an awful moment!"

"You don't believe it, do you, Letty?" asked Mahala, scorn in her tones. "You don't believe it of our Enos?"

"You can read it for yourself, sister," said Letty, taking a newspaper from a little secretary built into a dark corner behind the door after the remarkable fashion that obtains in most farmhouses. "You can read it if you can bear to, Mahala."

"I'm not afraid. Lies without any foundation, spiteful hints and innuendoes that have frightened you all, I feel sure." And Mahala seized the paper, marched straight to her room, lit a lamp and began to read:

"'Through the efforts of a bright member of our staff we find ourselves in a position to give the full particulars of the robbery of the Longtown Savings bank in advance of any of our contemporaries. Last evening the cashier, Enos Pynchon, the son of a highly respected resident of Elmbridge, absconded with all the cash in the bank and many negotiable papers, having previously falsified his accounts to an amount not yet definitely known.'

"'He went away, as usual, on his bicycle, and the facts were not discovered until next day, when the assistant cashier entered upon the discharge of his duties.

"'What makes this breach of trust more painful is that Enos Pynchon was an intimate friend of the bank president, Mr. Cyrus Percival, and that the sister of the guilty man, Miss Mahala Pynchon, was about to be married to Mr. Edward Percival, the president's only son. Of course this engagement is now at an end.

"'Young Mr. Percival and the worthy assistant cashier have accompanied the detectives who are in pursuit of the fugitive.'"

Mahala had said that she would not believe an angel who told her an evil tale of her brother, but as she read this column of the Elmbridge Gazette it had the effect upon her that anything printed in black and white has on most people.

"It is too cruel—too cruel!" she cried, casting the paper from her and flinging herself across her bed. "How could heaven be so cruel to us?"

Thus she lay, dry eyed and feverish, until the door opened and Letty came softly to the bedside and began to remove the hat which Mahala had forgotten she still wore.

"Do come to tea, dear," the girl pleaded tearfully. "Mother ought to have some. Perhaps you can coax her to take it; I can't." Mahala complied. She kissed her mother, but they dared not meet each other's eyes.

When the meal was done, they all sat about the room and waited until the last train came in, and though assuredly they expected nothing they were conscious of a new despair when it was gone.

The next day Mahala and her parents sat together in the living room, as people at sea gather together in the cabin of a vessel when a storm is raging. They heard the church bells ring, and the wheels of carriages on their way to the Thanksgiving service.

"I shan't never have the face to go to meeting again," said Mrs. Pynchon. They were the first words she had spoken since breakfast time. And again there was silence, for they would not speak of that of which their thoughts were full and had no interest in anything else in the wide, wide world.

As the evening train came in Mahala thought of how she had looked from the windows of the car the night before, thinking of her happy home and her lover—thinking herself the happiest girl alive. Now she believed herself to be the most miserable.

"Light a lamp," said old Mr. Pynchon. "If we cannot rejoice on this Thanksgiving day, at least we can pray." He took a Bible from the shelf where it was kept and opened it and read aloud the psalm he thought most fitting. Then the women knelt, each before a chair, and the old man, standing, lifted his voice in prayer. He had intended to make it a petition for mercy, a prayer for the sinful and sorrowful in general, but his heart was too full, and he soon found himself uttering agonized petitions for his poor, lost boy.

He prayed with his hands clasped, his eyes closed. The sobs of the kneeling women filled the room, and some one who had opened the door stood, one hand on the lock, the other on the door jamb, gazing at the scene with astonished eyes.

"O God, have mercy upon my poor, wandering Enos. Though he has brought his parents' gray hairs with sorrow to the grave, forgive my poor, prodigal son Enos as I forgive him," were the old man's words. Then he opened his eyes.

Enos stood before him in the doorway, and as he stepped into the room remarked.

"Father, that was a powerful prayer, and it seems to have been felt so by the family, but I must ask, respectfully and reverently of course, how came I to need so much praying for and crying over? I'm not aware of having done anything but miss my Thanksgiving dinner, and that was my misfortune, not my fault. Much obliged, father, but"—

But here he paused, smothered into silence by embraces, kisses, showers of tears, little cries of rapture. His mother, Mahala and Letty all had their arms about him at once.

The presence of Enos, his voice, his manner, told them that whatever had happened he was guilty of no crime.

The old man, shouting "Thank God!" over and over again, rested his hand upon his head, and it was Letty who at last lifted her sweet, shrill young voice, putting the explanation into a nutshell.

"Why, didn't you know, Enos," she cried, "that the Elmbridge Gazette said that you robbed the Longtown bank, and that Mahala and Ed couldn't be married now? And we all believed it. That's why pa prayed for you and we cried. And a nice Thanksgiving day we've had of it!"

"I heard that the Elmbridge Gazette mixed names the first day," said Enos, "but I understand they contradicted it all today, with apologies to everybody."

"Perhaps they have," said old Mr. Pynchon, wiping the tears from his eyes. "But I reckon we left today's Gazette under the mat, where the boy put it. We didn't think of it."

Letty ran out of doors and came in with the paper. The correction was there in black and white.

The editors regretted that, owing to the mistake of a person whose connection with the office had been severed forever and who interviewed a deaf janitor, since no one else would say anything on the subject, "Mr. Enos Pynchon, cashier of the Longtown bank, whose lovely sister was about to be united in marriage to Edward Percival, the only son of the president, had been spoken of as committing the dastardly crime of which the assistant cashier, a young man of dissipated habits, was really guilty."

The rest of the paper was devoted to laudations of the Pynchon and Percival families, collectively and individually.

"Poor Bill!" said Enos. "Drink and a woman—the old story. But Percival and I caught him and brought him back. He had most of what he had stolen about him, and the bank has lost next to nothing. They will not prosecute him. He has done for himself, that's all. Not a word need have leaked out, but for that gabbling old janitor. But—you believed it—my own folks believed that of me?"

As he spoke another person entered—the hired man, Sam. His hat was crushed, his coat torn up the back, his face red and one of his eyes blackened. But he looked triumphant.

"I've fixed 'em," he said. "I ain't no literary man myself, but my brother reads the Alumbridge Gazette constant, and after dinner he showed me that paper full of lies. So I left early and went over to the office where they was all to work for tomorrow, with their coats off, and I took it out of their hides. 'I'm Pynchon's man,' I said. 'What's these lies you've been telling about my folks?' 'All contradicted,' says they, 'in this morning's paper.'

"'To jiggers with contradictions,' says I, and I sailed in. The floor is strewed with them, and this on my best pants is their gore, but I don't begrudge it."

"Ah, there was one who believed in me," cried Enos as he held out his hand to Sam, who gave it a pumphandle shake of the most vigorous sort.

"You shall have a new suit, Sam," said Mr. Pynchon. "I wish I'd been along to help you."

"What's become of Percival?" inquired Enos. "He went back into the road after he reached the gate, and as I supposed he had caught sight of Mahala somewhere I came in without him."

At this moment a window was lifted from without.

Mahala stepped into the kitchen. In a moment her betrothal ring was on her finger and a dreadful little letter that it had almost broken her heart to write in the fire. Before it had done blazing Edward had followed her, and his arm was about her waist and their lips met.

And now the whole family came trooping into the kitchen, Mrs. Pynchon crying cheerfully:

"We must eat Thanksgiving dinner today if we have it at midnight. All hands to help me." And every one set to work with a will. The turkey was roasted and the vegetables cooked, the pies warmed and the cranberry jelly turned out. The cider foamed in the jugs, and the red cheeked apples shone in the lamplight, and all was served by 9 of the clock precisely.

Enos, whose word was law that night, declared that his champion, Sam, must sit down with them, and Sam, nothing loath, took his place and did justice to the feast, and never were more thankful hearts than

A Warning to the Gobbler.

O Gobbler Turk, O Gobbler Turk,
Why hold your head so high?
Ere long there will be awful work—
The ax and hour are nigh.

Be careful not to be pharisaical in your those that beat within the bosoms of the assembled Pynchons as they bowed their heads to listen to Mr. Pynchon's simple grace

And Mahala, sitting there beside her lover, with all her beloved kinsfolk near, felt that strange and terrible Thanksgiving day become in an instant exactly like a bad dream from which she had awakened and became the happiest girl in the world once more.

thankfulness. "Lord, I thank thee that I am not as other men," is not a good sentiment at any time, least of all on the last Thursday in November, yet it is as frequently felt and even expressed now as it was 1,900 years ago in Jerusalem. "I'm glad I'm not like some folks" is the American form.

If you can see no reason why you should be thankful, hasten to look about you. You will find so many who are worse off than you that you will soon begin to be glad your lot in life is as pleasant as it is.

Remember that the sauces furnished by good health, a clear conscience and true thankfulness will contribute more to your Thanksgiving dinner joy than the finest turkey and the most elaborate dressing.

WE WALK on starry fields of white
And yet ignore the daisies;
For blessings common in our sight
We rarely offer praises.
We sigh for some supreme delight
To crown our lives with splendor,
And quite ignore our daily store
Of pleasures sweet and tender.

Our cares are bold and push their way
Upon our thought and feeling.
They hang about us all the day,
Our time from pleasure stealing.
So unobtrusive many a joy
We pass by and forget it,
But worry strives to own our lives
And conquers if we let it.

There's not a day in all the year
But holds some hidden pleasure,
And looking back joys oft appear
To brim the past's wide measure.
But blessings are like friends, I hold,
Who love and labor near us.
We ought to raise our notes of praise
While living hearts can hear us.

Full many a blessing wears the guise
Of worry or of trouble.
Farseeing is the soul and wise
Who knows the mask is double.
But he who has the faith and strength
To thank his God for sorrow
Has found a joy without alloy
To gladden every morrow.

We ought to make the moments notes
Of happy, glad Thanksgiving;
The hours and days a silent phrase
Of music we are living.
And so the theme should swell and grow,
As weeks and months pass o'er us,
And rise sublime at this good time,
A grand Thanksgiving chorus.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

IN BLACK AND WHITE

A THANKSGIVING STORY BY MARY KYLE DALLAS.

[Copyright, 1895, by American Press Association.]

"All aboard!" shouted the brakemen, taking the cry up one after the other and making something like the chorus of a glee of it. "All aboard!"

Everybody plunged into the cars as though the end of the world had come and this were the last train to heaven.

Last of all a very lovely girl with her arms full of parcels and her hands occupied with the inevitable traveling bag and umbrella was lifted, pulled, pushed and otherwise assisted to the platform of the already moving car.

As she entered three young men sprang up at once, as does "Jack in the box," and she had but to choose her seat, with a "Thank you" and a smile, distributed to all three, and the one who was favored by the acceptance of his proffer was envied by the others. There are girls so sweet—other women know it as well as men do—that their own personality strews their way with flowers of courtesy. Mahala's face was, in that sense, her fortune.

"YOU'VE TOLD HER, LETTY," HE SAID.

She had taught in a public school for several years, not from necessity, but in that commendable spirit of independence common to the daughters of New England families. But that was done with now. She had resigned her position and was going home not only to spend Thanksgiving, but to begin the preparations for her wedding.

The course of true love had run smoothly in her case. Nobody objected to her choice; there was nothing but good feeling all around.

"No one could fail to like Edward Percival or my own people. My own people are so nice," she said to herself. "I am so proud of father, so fond of my darling mother, and Enos, oh, my splendid brother! Sometimes I think he is dearest of them all. And the brightest, best, sweetest little girl in the world is sister Letty. It ought to be enough for any girl to have such home people, and besides that I am engaged to marry a man like Edward Percival. What a happy girl I am! What a happy girl!"

Soon she fell to dwelling on the perfections of her future husband and retracing the chain of incidents that led to their acquaintance. It came about thus:

Two or three years previous her brother was asking himself what business or profession he should pursue, disliking the idea of farming, and certainly that did not seem what Enos was made for.

The government of the world, the regulation of the entire cosmos, we now see, is dependent on law, unvarying and eternal. The "special interposition of Providence," of which we heard so much in the beginning of the century, is now generally rejected by the thoughtful. We believe today that a man, whether saint or sinner, will be drowned if he fall into deep water if he cannot swim and there be nobody to rescue him. Miracles are not credited to any extent, although theologians may still proclaim and vouch for them. Consequently special thanksgiving for recovery from illness, for a stroke of good fortune, for unexpected avoidance of evil, is not nearly so common as it has been, unless as a ceremonial of the churches. The spirit of thankfulness remains, if the act of thanksgiving has become less frequent, though many may not know to whom or to what to be thankful. Thankfulness, gratitude, satisfaction, gladness that anything desirable has happened or that anything undesirable has not happened are substantially the same. The sole difference is in terms—the feeling, express it as we may, is universal. But what is desirable to one man may not be to another. What we regard as blessings often prove curses, as apparent curses often prove blessings. Everything must be judged by time. There is a mystery in all events, an inscrutableness in the happenings of every day.

We are taught that life is a boon; that we should be thankful, grateful, satisfied, glad (as you will) that we have been born. But everybody does not regard it as a boon, as we are aware from the many who are always destroying themselves, and from the earnest adverse opinions we are ever hearing in respect to it. Life is little in itself—it is what we make of it, what we think of it. We should all love it, doubtless, if we could have it on our own terms, but how very few of us do or can so have it! Nevertheless, the great majority of men enjoy life and will frankly say as much. Probably they do not think about it; they simply accept it. If they should think about it, they would be discontented. Looking at men's lives in the mass, from a purely rational point of view, they would seem wretched. But they are not. We must take their own opinions on the subject. Every man must judge of life for himself, and his judgment is final, irrevocable. Circumstances do not determine what his life is. His life hangs on his temperament. We all remember the eastern story of the gloomy, hopeless grand vizier who had every earthly possession. He consulted for relief an ancient sage, who told him that he should wear the shirt of a happy mortal. The happy mortal, after wide, diligent search, was found. He was so very poor that he had no shirt.

Among mankind there are optimists and pessimists, with hosts between those two extremes of every shade of theory and conviction. Everything that occurs is not for the best, any more than it is for the worst. Schopenhauer, the founder of modern pessimism, maintains that this is not only the worst world that has ever existed, but the worst possible world that could exist. This is palpably absurd. How could he tell, who, so far as his consciousness extended, had experience of but one world.

Despite the assumptions of pessimists, no human being is or can be so miserable that he could not be much more miserable. It is impossible to imagine a case; hence every human creature should be thankful, grateful, glad (this, I suppose, to be the correct theory of thankfulness) that he is not so unfortunate as he might be. For comfort, for consolation, he should keep in mind somebody whose condition is more deplorable than his. If he should break one leg, he should be thankful that he did not break both. If he should lose his fortune, let him rejoice that he still retains his health. If his house should burn down, he must not forget that some of his furniture has been saved. If his father should die, his mother survives. If he have a bilious fever, he might have had typhoid. If he has had no food for 36 hours, it might have been 56. He who is born to poverty, with a delicate constitution, with defective senses, with a bad disposition, may still felicitate himself, for he might not have been born at all or he might have been a twin. There is some kind of comfort in everything, if we look at it rightly. There is cause for thankfulness in all conditions, if we will bring to mind those whose conditions are still more deplorable than ours.

It is vastly better to think well than to think ill of ourselves and our circumstances; to believe that we are better off than most of our fellows; to hold that we have cause for gratitude and thankfulness. No matter, if we do overrate ourselves ever so much. Overrating helps us in the battle of existence; affords us strength and confidence. Vanity is almost as great a sustainer as hope, which keeps all of us alive. Optimism is a thousand times preferable to pessimism. It is to be doubted if any one is thoroughly a pessimist or can be. To think that we owe something to others, to causes that we have not created, saves us from selfishness, the deepest vice of humanity. Thankfulness is the most fertile source of altruism, the spring by which the world is to be redeemed, and altruism is growing steadily. We may not need a special day to return thanks. All days should be thanksgiving days. They keep our hearts warm and tender and sensitive to the sufferings of our kind.

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

THEATRICAL.

It is claimed for "The Fire Patrol," which will be presented at Music Hall Thursday, Nov. 28th, that it will introduce a scene that is entirely new and novel, viz: the interior of a gold stamp mill in Deadwood, South Dakota, where the ore is brought out of the mines previous to being smelted, with the big ore crusher in actual operation. Incident to the play there is also a genuine fire patrol wagon and a scene representing Union Square, New York city, in a snowstorm. What more can be asked for in the way of realism?

"The Capitol" will be a strong attraction at Music Hall tonight, with the same cast and scenery as were seen at the Standard Theatre, New York, during the three months run of the play there. J. M. Hill considers the production of "The Capitol" the most creditable achievement of his managerial career. The play tells an unconventional and highly dramatic story and portrays Washington social life both in its serious and in its comic aspects. The comedy in the piece is as natural as it is irresistibly mirthful. The whiskey-drinking, card-playing Senator, the pretty bicycle riding girl, the "fresh" young society man, the aristocratic lieutenant, and the very swell ambassadorial appointee, are characters as true to life as they are amusing. The serious characters are as new to the stage as they are interesting. They are indeed a striking group—the fearless priest, the unscrupulous lobbyist, the ambitious Congressman, the old magazinist, the newspaper correspondent, the Royal Cross heroine, the Congressman's socially aspiring wife, and others who seem entirely real, not the puppets of a dramatist's invention.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union County Branch of the State Charities Aid Association held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church in this city on the evening of November 23d, called to take action regarding the sudden death of its greatly beloved Vice-President, Rev. Dr. McAllister, of Elizabeth, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this Association has learned with deep regret of the untimely decease of its Vice-President, Rev. Dr. Francis Marion McAllister, of Elizabeth, a member of our Association for many years, and a painstaking and efficient officer. We share the grief of the community in which he lived, and in which he most truly ministered not only to those within the sphere of his actual duties, but also among the poor and needy, the sick and oppressed, and those who are in prison, those applicants for human sympathy for the amelioration of whose sufferings our Association was organized. We shall greatly miss the valued counsel and charming companionship of this gentle and urbane gentleman, who, whatever the condition of the weather, or of his own health was ever assiduous in his attendance upon our meetings, ever present when he could offer a helping hand, always ready to volunteer where anything was to be done for the poor and oppressed. We offer these observations as an wholly insufficent proof of our admiration, regard and affection for the man, and in the hope that the sympathy of his coworkers may tend in some slight degree to the comfort of the loved ones he has left behind him. The Secretary is instructed to enter these resolutions upon our minutes, to send a copy of the same to the sorrowing family, and also to forward a copy for publication in the Plainfield and Elizabeth papers.

Hobart Clark,
Secretary.

Dissatisfied Tax Payers.

Frank Newman Married.

The marriage of Miss Grace Carrington to Frank Easton Newman, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Newman, of this city, was solemnized yesterday at the home of the bride's parents in Jersey City by Rev. Neal Bristol. Mr. Newman is a Philadelphia architect, and in that city the couple will reside.

A Fire at New Providence.

The house of E. F. Williams, of New Providence, a prominent shipbuilder in New York, was burnt to the ground yesterday morning. Everything, even the pet canary bird, was burned. The house was fully insured.

Mr. Frazee Declines.

In another column of today's Press will be found the official declination of Councilman Frazee to run on the Citizens' ticket in the Fourth ward.

A new theory as to how lightning kills, but one which may well be held in abeyance until a clearer solution of it can be presented, is just now being urged by the scientists. According to this new fangled idea, a person is never "struck" by lightning at all, that is, in the general sense of the word quoted. The new theory is the result of deductions that have been made along the following lines: All life is electric. In the human body the stomach is the generator and the brain the battery. When a person is killed by lightning, he is not "struck" at all, but dies because of a sudden loss of the electric power which had been impelling his physical engine. The loss of this vital fluid, if such it may be called, is brought about in this manner: A thundercloud is passing over. It is charged with positive electricity and the earth beneath is charged negatively. The human electric battery is between. If the cloud is charged heavily enough, it saps the negative electricity from the earth, using the human being as a conductor, and finally leaves him lifeless by taking his electricity with that from the earth. This theory is in line with that which originated a few years ago, and which was to the effect that it was the "up stroke" that kills.—St. Louis Republic.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

SENTIMENTS OF GRATITUDE.

SOME OF THE THINGS THAT WE ARE TO BE THANKFUL FOR.

Observations of Rev. Herbert Randolph at the Thanksgiving Service Meeting in the Seventh Day Baptist Church.

The Thanksgiving prayer meeting held under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor and Epworth League Societies yesterday morning at 9 o'clock in the Sunday-school room of the Trinity Reformed church, was especially helpful and interesting. E. E. Anthony was in charge and Miss Lottie Aldridge presided at the piano. The room was filled with both old and young of all denominations and not a moment was lost, as someone was on their feet all the time taking part in the service. Rev. Charles Scudder dismissed them with the benediction.

At the close they all adjourned to the church proper where the regular service was held. The choir having charge of the music consisted of F. S. Cutter, S. J. Moore, Mrs. F. S. Cutter, Miss Lizzie Dunn, Miss Bessie Blair, Mrs. J. C. Van Dyke, J. C. Van Dyke, L. A. Hummer, and W. Simmons, while Arthur Titsworth presided at the organ.

The responsive reading of the 109th Psalm was conducted by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, and the Scripture selections Phillipians 4:1, 9, after which Dr. Barnes offered prayer. An anthem by the choir during the offertory was rendered, which was followed by a hymn.

Rev. Herbert F. Randolph then announced his text Acts 28th chapter and a portion of the fifteenth verse: "He thanked God and took courage." In substance he spoke as follows:

Wall street is a centre of struggles for many classes and the sole ambition of not a few is to get there. In fact with a large number its Wall street and not Washington for the financier, but with the politician Washington is his objective point. The artist goes to Paris, the scholar to Germany and the antiquarian to Assyria or Egypt. Would you study great orators, you go to Athens, or soldiers, to Rome. Paul's great desire was to go to Rome. It was a long severe task to reach it, for he tells us he was persecuted, shipwreckad, imprisoned, etc. But when he reached there he thanked God and took courage.

There are no two greater sentiments than gratitude for past preservation and hope for the future. Without them man cannot be called a son of God, and no man is fitted for this life unless he is ruled by the spirit of God, he cannot live sublime without the two sentiments.

The power of memory should be consecrated. God rules the universe and regulates the affairs of men. A year ago we thought the good old ship of state was going to be lost, but thank God there were thousands on board to protect her. The ship lost something, but perhaps she is better for it. Let us lift up our hearts in praise for preservation. We thank God today that there is one faith, one hope and one baptism and that all can repeat the Apostle's creed.

The duty of hopefulness is great. If I see no God in the past there is none in the future. We should combine the two sentiments into a strenuous effort for the present, and have unbounded courage and belief in God. We want strength of soul and a Gospel of strenuous effort.

Dr. Yerkes closed the service with prayer after which Rev. C. E. Herring pronounced the benediction after the singing of "America." On the pulpit platform and in front of it was an arrangement of choice fruits and vegetables, while near by was a large display of beautiful chryanthemums of various colors. The fruits and flowers were selected and arranged by Mrs. J. C. VanDyke.

The offerings will be given to the Relief Associations according to the usual custom.

The Union Thanksgiving Day service of the Crescent Avenue, Park Avenue, Congregational and Seventh-Day Baptist churches was held yesterday morning in the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

The opening services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Lewis, after which Rev. Dr. Richards read the Scripture selection and offered the first prayer, and Rev. J. W. Richardson offered the closing prayer and pronounced the benediction.

The Thanksgiving sermon was preached by Bev. C. L. Goodrich, from the text, James 1:17: "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." National prosperity, he said, is not, after all, the greatest reason for thanksgiving, but that our God is what he is. He is the sovereign of all the universe; no storm that sweeps on in its destructive course can escape from His control; the winds and the waves must obey His will. But He is not the sovereign alone—He is the loving Father, who had a loving plan in our creation. "In Him is no variableness." He will always care for us in truest love, and will give to each object of His care just as much good as it is able and willing to receive. Need we fear to leave the future of our nation, or of ourselves, in the hands of such a God?

The choir for this service was one selected from the choirs of the various churches. The organist was Miss Jessie Utter.

THE WHITE STARS.

Young Men of the Church of Heavenly Rest Organize.

A new organization was formed in the parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest on Monday evening, November 25th. It is composed entirely of young men and they adopted the name of the White Star Club.

Charles Brinkerhoff was elected President; James Hallard, Secretary; and Arthur Sherman, Treasurer. Music is to be one of the features of the club and they have a good deal of talent in it. They will give their first entertainment on Thursday, December 19th, the proceeds of which they kindly give to the children's Christmas tree. New members will all have to be voted in.

Discussed the Tramp Nuisance.

The Somerset Board of Freeholders held a special meeting at the Court House last Wednesday. Most of the time was occupied in trying to formulate a scheme to take care of tramps. Most of the members thought a fixed sum should be paid the Sheriff, but that gentleman said this would be unfair to him. It was decided to let the matter remain as it now is, for the present, at least. Sheriff Wyckoff has promised to see that the tramps do not make the Court House a permanent home.

A Masquerade Surprise.

A pleasant masquerade party was given at the home of Edith and Walter Darby at Alton Wednesday evening, which was arranged by their young friends. The surprise was complete and a most enjoyable evening was spent. At midnight a bountiful supper was served. Music for dancing was furnished by Isaac Lambert, of Westfield. Among those present from Plainfield were Miss Raybert, Miss Schuck, and Messrs. Woodland, Ross, Force and William Dunn.

Thankful for Better Times.

Rev. Dr. Jocelyn Johnstone, rector of the Church of the Redeemer, preached an excellent sermon to his congregation on the morning of Thanksgiving day. He gave among other reasons for an American citizen's thankfulness, the great prosperity of the laboring classes in America. This is a point of special value, coming from a close observer like Dr. Johnstone, who has lived in other lands.

Plainfield Prisoners Arraigned.

In the Court of Special Sessions held at Elizabeth, Wednesday, James Donovan, for attempted burglary at Plainfield, pleaded not guilty. Fred Willibald, of Plainfield, accused of grand larceny, was also arraigned and pleaded not guilty, as did John Maguires, of Plainfield, accused of criminal assault. Their trials were set down for next week. Two youths, John and Tom Sands, pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and stealing.

Sailor Boys Are These.

The "Sailors Chorus," will be sung at the Firemen's fair by thirty boys. The air with its appropriate gestures as taught by Madame Menzelli Bartlett is very catching and will no doubt receive the approval of the audience as well as the other productions under the charge of Madame Bartlett. The boys feel great pride in this achievement.

EXPLOSION OF SEWER GAS.

CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE TO THE SEWERS YESTERDAY MORNING.

The Pipes Could Not Stand the Pressure of Gas Which Leaked Into Them and Blew Out a Number of Manholes.

Shortly after 10 o'clock yesterday morning, a very loud explosion of illuminating gas took place in the two man holes at the corner of Franklin place and LaGrande avenue, throwing the caps to them eighteen feet into the air. After an interval of a half a minute another explosion took place at the corner of LaGrande avenue and Richmond street in the second man hole there.

Then followed a series of explosions, decreasing in violence, through Putnam avenue into the Netherwood district, the last being at the corner of Woodland avenue and Ravine Road. Investigations resulted in finding that for several days past there has been considerable leakage of illuminating gas in the vicinity of Richmond street and Watchung avenue. The gas worked its way into the sewer pipes through the joints and drains and collected in the man holes for a considerable section of the sewer system between Watchung avenue and the limits of the sewer line at the high ground at Netherwood.

The violence of the explosion blew off the covers of the man and lamp holes along Putnam avenue, two of which were broken, although heavy and sound pieces of cast iron.

The neckwork in the manhole at the corner of Franklin place and La Grande avenue was cracked in several places.

The immediate cause of the explosion was that the sewer connections have been taken into a number of houses, unknown to the engineers or sewer committee, so as to be ready to connect with the plumbing when the disposal beds are opened. These house connections have been closed with a plug and carefully cemented. In one of the houses in the vicinity of Franklin place and LaGrande avenue, the gas leaked through the end of the pipe and became very offensive to those in the house. A plumber was called in Wednesday to look up the leak. Yesterday, finding the gas still as bad as ever, the man of the house turned off the gas at the meter, thinking the trouble was there, and then lighted a match in the vicinity of the sewer connection. The explosion followed immediately.

Concerning the extent of the damage done, the sewer engineers and Coucilmen Frost and Ginna spent most of the day in examining the sewer system. Besides the damages already named, considerable dirt got into the pipes and at these points the ground will have to be excavated and the pipes cleaned out. Then the sewer will be flushed and tested. No pipes have been found damaged in the slightest degree.

The gas company has been hard at work trying to find the leak and are still at work, but the men find the gas so strong as to sicken them. When a Daily Press reporter investigated last evening he found the odor of gas very strong at Richmond street and Watchung avenue. The sewers will be kept thoroughly ventilated until the leak is found.

"It is well to note," said Councilman Frost last evening to a Daily Press reporter, "that another source of like trouble is at the corner of Central avenue and Front street where gas has been accumulating for several days and was so offensive Wednesday that a workman was unable to go into the manhole. The public should be cautioned against bringing the sewer connection into the houses. It is better to end the pipe within four feet of the house."

It is hardly necessary to add that anyone fooling with lighted matches about the opening of a manhole may expect to be carried home in pieces.

In the house of William Callahan, of Woodland avenue, the plug in the house connection blew out and caused considerable excitement. Only an hour before the explosion a man had been at work in the manhole at the corner of Richmond street and LaGrande avenue. There were several narrow escapes of carriages which had just passed over the manholes.

Regarding any future trouble Councilman Frost said:

"There is no occasion for alarm as the question of ventilation has been well attended to, and when the system is complete it will be thoroughly ventilated through the air shafts outside of every house.

—At the Seventh-Day Baptist church tomorrow morning the pastor's theme will be: "Higher Living According to the Bible Needed More Than Higher Criticism Concerning It."

A CRIPPLE FOR LIFE.

A Thirteen-Year-Old Bound Brook Boy Loses a Leg.

An exceedingly sad accident occurred at Bound Brook yesterday afternoon between four and five o'clock when Willie Anderson, aged thirteen years, had his left leg frightfully crushed while trying to ride on a coal train.

The boy was picked up and sent to Muhlenberg hospital by Dr. Fisher, of Bound Brook, where it was found necessary by Dr. Probasco to amputate the leg at the knee. He was assisted by Drs. Endicott and Long.

Several other doctors were present and witnessed the operation.

SECOND OF THE STAR COURSE.

Jere M. Cobb Delights an Audience in the Y. M. C. A. Hall.

The second entertainment in the Star course at the Y. M. C. A., hall was held last evening before an appreciative audience. The hall was comfortably filled. The entertainment consisted of selections by Miss Margaret E. Meredith, soprano, whose sweet and clear voice enraptured her hearers, Jere M. Cobb, elecutionist, whose humorous selections sent his hearers into roars of laughters, while his rendition of Wallace's "Chariot Race" held them spell-bound. C. Maynrrd Evans also gave several of his most enjoyable whistling solos. P. Ludwig Conde was the violinist, and Miss Elfleda A. Whiting the excellent accompanist.

SHOT IN THE FOOT.

A Careless Youngster With a Flobert Rifle Suffers an Accident.

Edward Klinsman, the fourteen-year old son of Herbert Klinsman, the West Front street baker, shot himself in the foot yesterday while out hunting near the mountain. He was running after a bird with his Flobert rifle pointed at the ground when the trigger caught and the bullet passed through the fleshy part of the foot. The boy was carried to his grandmother's bv his companions and then to Dr. D. C. Adams, where the wound was dressed. He was then taken home.

A Finished Performed.

The production of "The Capitol" in Music Hall Wednesday night was the most finished performance that has been given in this city in many seasons. The piece is a story of Washington social and political life, cleverly and naturally constructed, and impersonated by a cast everyone of whom is an artist in their character. The company should have been greeted with a packed house, and though this was far from the condition of things, the acting was of the same quality which characterized its production in New York and won for it the unqualified praise of the dramatic critics of the metropolis. Manager Daly is to be congratulated on having secured the company, though it is to be regretted that he was not afforded a more liberal patronage.

The Dray Smashed.

A disastrous accident occurred Wednesday afternoon in the alley adjoining Ulrich & Blatz's meat market on West Front street. Expressman Al Dunavan had driven in the alley to get a large case of clothing from the establishment on the top floor of the building. The cases are lowered by means of a rope and pulley. The case was fastened with a rope and swung from the opening, but before it could be lowered the rope slipped and the case fell the entire distance landing heavily on the wagon. A rear wheel was dished and the body of the wagon was wrecked. The horse never moved from his position. The clothing was carried back to the top floor and put into another case; in the meantime another wagon was secured.

Public School Festivities.

Special Thanksgiving day exercises were held in the classroom of the ninth grade in lhe High School building on Wednesday morning. All the class took part. The programme consisted of readings and the blackboards were decorated with appropriate drawings.

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhœa of long standing in six hours, with one small bottle of Chambertain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief. It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. R. Armstrong, Manager.

The Twilight's Merry Dance.

The eighth annual ball given by the Twilight Social Club in the Columbia Cycle Academy, Wednesday evening, was a pleasant affair. A large crowd was in attendance, and at 11 o'clock the grand march was led by Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Moore, assisted by Louis Feiring and Miss Kate Mulhearn. After the grand march dancing to the sweet music by Prof. Nickol's full orchestra, of Newark, was kept up until the early morn. During the dance the best of order was maintained, and the committee, which consisted of F. S. Moore, E. C. Searing, L. Feiring and J. Loughlin, deserve mention for the manner in which they handled the affair. Their next ball will be held New Year's Eve.

Gathering at the Fireside.

A reunion and Thanksgiving dinner of the Hart family was held yesterday afternoon and evening at the home of the Misses Hart, 432 Watchung avenue. T. S. Burr was unanimously selected as master of ceremonies and a programme, including recitations, vocal and instrumental music, dancing, a cake walk, and several amusing games, were indulged in and the evening was one full of enjoyment to all.

—The political situation in Plainfield was discussed in many quarters yesterday by prominent leaders.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. LOCAL KICKERS VICTORIOUS.

Y. M. C. A. ELEVEN BEAT A NEW YORK TEAM 28 TO 0.

The Superior Team Work of the Plainfield Boys Won Them the Game in an Easy Manner—The Line Up

It was not the most enjoyable Thanksgiving Day possible for the football players of the Emory Athletic Club, of Harlem, yesterday. They missed their Thanksgiving dinner to come out to play, then they missed the train and finally, when they did come, it was only to be crushingly defeated by the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. eleven by a score of 28 to 0. The Harlem boys arrived on the field at 3:45, and the two elevens lined up immediately as follows:

Plainfield Y. M. C. A.		Emory A. C.
V. F. Green	left end	Atkinson
F. W. Walz	left tackle	Miller
R. A. McGee	left guard	Sullivan
H. Rand	centre	Lindeman
Edward Brown	right guard	McCarthy
Geo Schoonmaker	right tackle	Rubenstein
Roger Erickson	right end	Lovejoy
L. E. Waring	quarter back	Elam
T. U. Smith	left half back	Daly
F. H. Freeman	right half back	Tamar
G. E. Cathcart	full back	O'Neill

Charles Murray, of Yale, made an excellent referee. F. W. Dusche, of the Emory Athletic Club, was the umpire. The linesmen were Auguste Saltzman, Jr., of Lehigh, and James Murray.

Plainfield chose the northern goal and the Harlem boys took the ball. The ball was kicked and rushed 15 yards.

Schoonmaker went through tackle for six yards. Several other short rushes followed and then Freeman started around the left end and ran the sixty yards to the goal, scoring a touchdown inside of three minutes of play. The splendid interference of the Y. M. C. A. backs and ends took him around and when he was once ahead he left both teams far in the rear for it takes a fleet footed man to catch him on the open. Soon after the ball was worked down to within thirty yards and Freeman again ran around the left end for a touchdown. Smith kicked both goals without trouble. A third touchdown was made by Smith after running fifteen yards through the line. He kicked the goal. Freeman then dropped out and Louis Darling took his place. The first half ended with the score 18 to 0. The playing of all the Y.M.C.A. men was excellent. Waring put up a remarkable game at quarter and aided materially in breaking through the line and guarding the runner. Smith, Freeman and Cathcart made a splendid trio. Green played his usual excellent game and downed the runner many times far behind the line. Erickson's tackling was also very good. In the second half some of the other men were given a chance to play and Clarence Peck took Green's place. Chas. Dupee took Schoonmaker's place and finally E. L. Serrell took Cathcart's place. But before Cathcart left, he ran around left end and made another touchdown. Smith kicked the goal. Toward the close of the game Walz was pushed through the line for fifteen yards to the centre of the field and then handed the ball to Smith who ran to the goal and made a touchdown. He missed the goal.

The Harlem boys were lighter than the home team, and although there was some brilliant individual playing, team play was noticeably absent. Twenty minute halves were played. Had they wished it, the Y. M. C. A. team might have scored fifty points; the final score was 28 to 0.

Cigars Instead of Turkey.

Dr. Nelson, of New Market, was initiated in the junior and workmen's degrees at the meeting of Central Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., last evening. Owing to a misunderstanding between Past Master Workmen Brokaw and Randolph the turkey was not presentable and cigars were enjoyed instead.

A Family Gathering.

A family gathering of fifteen of the VanWinkle family was held at the home of John H. VanWinkle, of Duer street, yesterday.

Croup is a terror to young mothers. To post them concerning the first symptoms, and treatment is the object of this item. The first indication of croup is hoarseness. In a child who is subject to croup it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the rough cough has appeared it will prevent the attack. It has never been known to fail. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

OVER 13,000 KILLED

Authentic Account of the Massacres in Turkey.

A Region of 60,000 Square Miles Given Up to Murder and Pillage—More Than 200,000 People, Principally Women and Children, in Absolute Want.

Constantinople, Nov. 28.—The following matter has been handed to the European manager of the United Press, who is now in Constantinople. The latter, from full confidence in the American Christian men who present it and from careful personal observation, is able to forward it to the American press as an impartial statement of facts. This statement has the full endorsement of Minister Terrell: During the month of October a considerable part of the Armenian districts in the provinces of Trebizond, Erzeroum, Bitlis, Van, Harpout, Diarbekir and Sivas has been laid waste and a number, not yet fully known, of the Armenian inhabitants have been killed by men intent on crushing into impotence the Armenian race in Turkey. As the awful tidings have come in by driblets, the Turkish government has diligently telegraphed abroad in regard to each place, that Armenians had attacked Mussulmans (thus arousing a frenzy of indignation which could not easily be controlled) but that order had been restored after some loss of life. The effect of these telegrams has been to cultivate belief that there has been some general risings of Armenians and that we are in the presence of a calamity which is merely the result of lawless proceedings on the part of the Armenians themselves. Natural indignation with the Armenians for rising at the very moment when the reform scheme was about to be put in operation, may be moderated when it is known that up to this date the only authentic rising of Armenians has taken place at Zeitoun in the province of Aleppo, and far from the scene of the massacres.

60,000 Square Miles Devastated.

A region 60,000 square miles in area from Trebizond to Diarbekir and from the Russian frontier at Erzroum to Sivas, has been given up to massacre and pillage. Only those places, like Van, have so far been spared, in which the Armenians, being in a proportion of more than one to four or five Turks, might be expected to offer resistance to massacre. This region is full of crushed and ruined families on the one hand, and on the other of hordes of ribald plunderers dividing the spoil, unhindered by the law. Only meagre returns have as yet come in. But the following is a list of the losses of life so far as yet known: Trebizond, 1,100; Baiburt, 800; Gumush Hane, 650; Erzingan, 1,900; Bitlis, 1,200; Khnous, 300; Boulinak, 400; Harpout, 1,000; Sivas, 300; Palu, 650; Diarbekir, 3,000; Albistan, 400; Erzroum, 1,200; Ourfa, 400. Total, 13,200.

200,000 Reduced to Want.

It is not within the purpose of this paper to enter upon the question of the responsibility of these massacres mainly confined to the six provinces specially mentioned in the reform scheme, so empty and so painfully wrung from the porte. But if the object of the originators of this massacre was sensibly to diminish the Armenian population of these provinces, the main object of the men who did the work was plunder. But the very fact that plunder was the chief interest with the men engaged in this crime makes the position of the survivors most precarious. If we estimate that 15,000 persons were killed by the Turks in these provinces, mostly men, their surviving widows, orphan children and other dependents must number at least 50,000 who are entirely destitute. But every account shows that the pillage involved five times as many of the breadwinners as fell in the massacre. Of a great number of these the destitution is described as something fearful to contemplate. A very low estimate of the number thus reduced to absolute want by the loss of all their moveable property is 200,000 souls, of whom three-fourths are the wives and children of the ruined traders or farmers.

REV. O. B. FROTHINGHAM DEAD.

A Leader in the Movement To Promote Rationalist Ideas in Theology.

Boston, Nov. 28.—The Rev. Octavius Brooks Frothingham died at his residence in Marlboro street in this city yesterday at the age of 73. He was a son of Nathaniel Langdon Frothingham and was born in Boston on Nov. 26, 1832. He was graduated from Harvard college in 1843, and after three years in the divinity school was ordained pastor of the North church, Unitarian, at Salem, Mass., on March 10, 1847. He preached in Jersey City in 1855-'59; then removed to New York and became pastor of a congregation that in 1860 was organized as the "Third Unitarian Congregational church," and represented the most radical branch of his denomination. He dissolved this society in 1879 and went to Europe, and on his return in 1881 formally withdrew from specific connection with any church and devoted himself to literature in Boston. He had been a leader in the movement that has for its object the promotion of rationalist ideas in theology and had contributed largely to various journals and reviews. In 1867 he became the first president of the Free Religious society. Mr. Frothingham had published more than 150 sermons, and was the author of many religious and biographical works.

GEN. JORDAN DEAD.

The Famous Old Soldier Receives His Last Command.

New York, Nov. 28.—Brig.-Gen. Thomas Jordan, who had been at death's door for some time, died at his home, 124 East 25th street, last night. Brig.-Gen. Thomas Jordan was born at Luray, Va., Sept. 30, 1819, both parents being of old revolutionary stock. He was graduated at West Point in 1840. In May, 1861, he resigned his commission in the United States army to offer his sword and life to his native state, Virginia. Col. Jordan accompanied Gen. Beauregard, thence upon his assignment to command in the west, to foil the suspected undertakings of Halleck and Grant. During the Shiloh and Corinth campaigns he was the adjutant-general of the confederate army. In 1869 Gen. Jordan consented to direct the revolutionary forces in Cuba, and was commissioned by the Cuban government commander-in-chief. Spain valued his services against her at a reward of $100,000, which she placed upon his head.

STRUCK BY A TRAIN.

One Man Killed, a Woman Fatally Hurt and Others Injured.

Philipsburg, Pa., Nov. 28.—As the Altoona & Pittsburg passenger train due here at 6:30 last evening emerged from Steinerts cut, one mile from this place, it struck and completely wrecked a handcar containing five persons. The occupants of the car were T. J. McDermott and wife and John Richmond, wife and daughter. McDermott was instantly killed and Mrs. McDermott slightly injured about the head and shoulders. Richmond was injured about the head, as was his daughter, and Mrs. Richmond received fatal injuries about the head. The occupants of the handcar were residents of Dunbar. No blame is attached to anyone. The passenger train was running on schedule time. McDermott and Richmond were both railroad men.

The reports from London that Lord Salisbury has completed his answer to Mr. Bayard are regarded in diplomatic circles here as having a favorable significance.

WEARY OF OFFICIAL LIFE

President Cleveland Wants No Third Term.

E. C. Benedict, His Intimate Friend, Believes His Desire Is To Lay Aside the Cares of Office—Has Had "Enough of Victory and Defeat"—Cleveland Not Well.

New York, Nov. 28.—C. E. Benedict, one of Mr. Cleveland's most intimate friends, who yesterday was quoted as saying that the president was not a candidate for another term, now says: "In part, my statement is true, but in certain places it was made too strong. I am not positive that Mr. Cleveland would not consent to run for a third term. I am positive of nothing save death and taxes. To set the matter forever right, I will write what I have to say." Mr. Benedict then penned the following and handed it to the reporter: "All that I have said or can say in reference to President Cleveland's views as to a third term is inferential. I infer from what he has repeatedly said that he is impatient to be rid of all official cares and unwilling to have them prolonged under any circumstances." Continuing, Mr. Benedict said: "It is no secret to anybody who knows Mr. Cleveland well as to his views on this subject. He has been counting the months until he can be free from the trammels of public affairs. He feels, and he told me so—in fact, he has told many of his friends so—that he was a great fool to accept the presidency the second time.

"Enough of Victory and Defeat."

"He said: 'I have had enough of victory and defeat'—and that is all a man can have in this world. He has been like this ever since he entered upon his second term." Here Mr. Benedict clenched his fists and shook them over his temples, relaxing his fingers to tell off the months, in pantomime of the president, of the months he had yet to serve. Mr. Benedict then said: "He was foolish—he knows it—in accepting a second term, for he often complained that his health was shattered until he was hardly able to stand it longer. Of course, everybody who knows him knows this, so it is no secret. I once said to him: 'I am spoiling your chances for a third term. I am telling people that you will not accept.' He did not seem much interested, and said, 'Go ahead.'" "Have you ever questioned the president directly upon the third term question?" was asked. "No," answered Mr. Benedict, "but you don't have to ask questions to get an answer. Acts, words and sentiments on collateral matters will sometimes answer." Mr. Benedict, in conclusion, said: "As to being positive that Mr. Cleveland would not accept a fourth nomination I am not; I do not think that he will do so."

MANY TOWNS AFFECTED.

Municipal Governments Invalidated by a Supreme Court Decision.

Asbury Park, N. J., Nov. 28.—A decision which has been handed down by the supreme court declaring the borough law of 1891 unconstitutional invalidates the municipal governments of Asbury Park, Bradley Beach, Spring Lake, North Spring Lake, Point Pleasant and scores of other towns in the state. The ground taken by the supreme court is that it is contrary to the constitution to vest the formation of governments in the people and the county court. This power, the supreme court declares, belonges to the legislature.

There was a strong demand for apples at the sale which took place in London.

STRIKERS IN THE LEAD

New York Housesmiths Win the First Battle.

Accidents to Green Hands Materially Aid Them in Their Struggle with the Iron League—Employers' Futile Efforts To Obtain New Men—Leaders Firm.

New York, Nov. 28.—For the first time since the dispute between the Iron league and the Housesmiths' union began, yesterday afforded both parties an opportunity to test their strength one against the other. It was a splendid day for working, the combatants were fully prepared for the struggle, the strife lasted all day and in the evening it was found that the Housesmiths' union had won the first battle of the campaign. The colossal Siegel-Cooper building was the storm centre, with the new structure going up at Broadway and Prince street as an outpost. On the former building 150 men used to work; yesterday there were only thirty-seven and they were mostly laborers engaged in placing girders and other iron material with the derrick. The result was discouraging to the Iron league, for between 7 a. m. and 1 p. m. three of the new hands had been injured and taken to the New York hospital, while two others less seriously injured were sent to their homes, refusing to give their names.

Could Not Procure New Men.

All this time the struggle between the league and the strikers for supremacy was continued on other fields. Agents of the league were engaged scouring the city for men to set their machinery in motion and break the force of President Lary's assertion that the bosses could not hire men to take the places of the strikers. Advertisements in the daily papers drew a large number of men, chiefly outsiders, to a saloon at No. 371 East 62d street, but the walking delegates were also there, and those men who did not melt away under their persuasive eloquence, were encountered by President Lary and Delegate Lenaghan near the approaches to the big buildings and persuaded to keep away. In fine, the effort to procure men was a failure, and at 2 o'clock in the afternoon hardly a tap could be heard on either of the structures of which a test had been made. It was pretty nearly the same on the other sixteen buildings, and so yesterday counted a big one for the strikers.

CUNNINGHAM'S CASE.

The Notorious Crook Remanded To Serve Out His Sentence.

Boston, Nov. 28.—William Cunningham, the notorious "crook," who for more than a month, over in New York, has been denying his identity and fighting extradition, when arraigned in the superior court yesterday on an indictment and warrant charging him with being an escaped prisoner, changed his tactics completely and pleaded guilty. It had been generally expected that he would receive an additional sentence of from one to three years for escaping but on recommendation of the warden of the prison the present indictment against him was placed on file and the prisoner remanded to state prison to serve on the remainder of his unexpired term, which will amount to something over six years. This arrangement was made with the understanding that if Cunningham failed to behave himself the present indictment would be taken up against him.

SUSPENDED FOR LIFE.

L. A. W. Racing Board Decides the Cases of Cabanne, Titus and Murphy

Philadelphia, Nov. 28.—Chairman Gideon of the racing board of the League of American Wheelmen says that definite action has been taken by the racing board in the cases of Cabanne, Titus and Murphy, the cyclists, who were temporarily suspended for alleged crooked racing in class "B" events at St. Louis, Aug. 17. The decision of the board, Mr. Gideon said, is that the men are suspended for life.

The guests were entirely relatives of the bride and bridegroom.

Charles S. Witham Dead.

Boothbay Harbor, Me., Nov. 28.—Charles S. Witham, who was under indictment and $5,000 bail for the killing of Dr. Farnsworth of Malden, Mass., is dead at his father's house in Southport of consumption. He was 35 years old. The shooting was caused by the attitude of Dr. Farnsworth toward Mrs. Witham, who claimed that she was persecuted.

EAGAN ARRIVES.

He Comes Here To Excite Sympathy for Irish Political Prisoners.

New York, Nov. 28.—James F. Eagan, the Irish political prisoner, arrived from Liverpool on the White Star liner Teutonic. He was accompanied by his wife. He received an enthusiastic welcome at the pier by many members of the Limerick Men's association. He was arrested in Birmingham, Eng., in 1882 with John Daly for alleged complicity in the dynamite programme of that time. In the garden attached to his residence dynamite bombs were found buried, placed there, it was afterward admitted, by a police inspector at the instigation of the Castle authorities in London, and Daly and Eagan were convicted and sentenced to prison for life. Public opinion in England, it is said, was so strong in condemnation of their sentences that Eagan was pardoned two years ago and Daly, although found guilty on the same evidence, is still in prison. Rumor has it that he is bereft of reason because of cruelties to which he has been subjected. Eagan comes here to excite public sympathy and raise funds looking to the release of all the Irish political prisoners now held in English prisons. He will speak in all the principal cities in the country.

TORNADO IN NEW JERSEY.

Considerable Damage Done at Ringoes—No One Injured.

Flemington, N. J., Nov. 28.—A tornado passed over Ringoes, Hunterdon county, shortly after 6 p. m. and caused considerable damage. Trees were uprooted and carried for quite a distance. Richard Williamson's unoccupied house was blown over and a portion of the roof of the Kirkpatrick Memorial church was torn off but the parsonage was only slightly damaged. Samuel Summers' out-buildings were also nearly all wrecked. The old stone Amswell academy building, which was used as a dwelling by Mrs. Dr. Robbins, probably received the most damage. The roof was torn off and the chimney fell through the ceiling and down on the bed, breaking everything in the room. Large stones were carried fifty feet by the force of the wind. The roof of Mrs. K. B. Lerison's dwelling was torn off, and nine large grain stacks on the farm of William Brewer were lifted into the air and spread on the ground. Fortunately no one was injured. The tornado passed over an area about a mile long and a quarter of a mile wide.

SMUGGLERS EXULT.

Pay Their Fine, Are Released and Obtain Renewal of Licenses.

St. Johns, N. F., Nov. 28.—As predicted, the smuggling publicans paid their fines to the board of revenue and obtained renewals of their licenses last evening. They are in great exultation over their success and it is rumored that they intend to celebrate the event with a big dinner and invite the crown lawyers, through whose mistake they escaped imprisonment. The executive council met again yesterday afternoon to consider the release of the smugglers in the penitentiary. Weeks, the first convicted, paid $280 and was released last night, while others are dickering with the government, professing inability to pay a heavy fine. All will probably be released to-day, because Sir Herbert Murray, the new governor, is expected to arrive to-morrow.

UNITED STATES WINS.

A Verdict of $13,000 Obtained To Offset a Shortage.

Philadelphia, Nov. 28.—The trial of the civil suit before Judge Butler in the United States district court brought by the United States against ex-superintendent of the mint Oliver C. Bosbyshell and the sureties on his $100,000 bond to recover the remaining shortage caused by the defalcation of ex-chief weigher Henry S. Cochran, and a small shortage in silver dollars, resulted in a verdict for $13,231.02 in favor of the United States. The amount represents the remaining shortage in the gold bullion, $12,819.82 and 410.20 interest. There was no recovery for the alleged shortage of $762 in silver dollars, as there was testimony that it arose from error in the counting of a lot of 50,000,000 silver dollars.

REED A VERY BUSY MAN

Visitors Besiege the ex-Speaker's Apartments.

So Far as Learned He Has Made No Promises Concerning Chairmanships or Committee Assignments—Appointments Will Be Delayed Several Weeks.

Washington, Nov. 28.—A continuous stream of callers has constantly ascended to Mr. Reed's apartments at the Shoreham since his arrival here, and as the days go by it shows no sign of diminishing, but rather is on the increase. They not only call in large numbers to see him personally, but many of the number place their wishes in writing and leave them with Mr. Reed's private secretary. It is for this reason that three clerks are kept busy in one of Mr. Reed's apartments briefing letters and writing out the replies which the congressman has found time to dictate. So far as can be learned Mr. Reed made no promises with respect to chairmanships or committee assignments. Those who are sufficiently in his confidence to speak with intelligence regarding his views ridicule the report that when he arrived in Washington on Saturday last he brought with him a complete list of the committees. More than half of the next house is composed of new members, who are not only untrained in methods of national legislation, but of whose capacities Mr. Reed has no knowledge. It is necessary that he should meet these gentlemen, talk with them, learn their wishes and acquaint himself with their abilities. Obviously this could not be done until after his arrival at the capital. As it is he has met only a part of the new men, and it is not improbable that he will wait until the older members of their delegations are in town and learn from them something with reference to their new colleagues before completing his work. Then there are other considerations. Men who are in line of promotion expect chairmanships without regard to the fact that in several notable cases this would give to a few states the control of nearly all the more important committees.

Appointment of Committees Delayed

There are other considerations which must enter into the framing of the committees which will delay their completion several weeks. It is true that the ways and means committee was announced almost immediately after Mr. Reed's election as speaker in the fifty-first congress, but that arose from the necessity of getting speedily at work on the proposed new tariff bill. This necessity does not exist at the present time, and it is believed for this reason that no one committee, except the committee on rules, will be announced in advance of the others. Mr. Reed is reported to be well satisfied with the new members who will form a large part of the republican majority in the next house. He finds that they "size up" well; that they are, so far as he can see, fully up to the usual standard of congressmen generally, and this fact will, it is thought, simplify his work greatly.

Candidates for Chairmanships.

The principal gossip about the hotels where the politicians mainly congregate, is over the ways and means, and appropriations committees As the ways and means committee now stands Sereno E. Payne of New York is first on the list of republican members, with John Dalzell of Pennsylvania second. Both gentlemen desire the chairmanship and the friends of each are making strenuous efforts in their behalf. On the appropriations committee, David B. Henderson of Iowa, a veteran member of the late house, is the leading republican member. Under the unwritten law of the house, which, as a rule, advances the member first on the list to the chairmanship, Mr. Henderson would be selected for this place. His claim is antagonized by Mr. Cannon of Illinois, another veteran representative, who was chairman of the committee in the fifty-first congress, but who, failing to secure a re-election to the fifty-second congress, was placed at the foot of the list when his constituents returned him to the fifty-third, which was the congress that expired on the fourth of March last. It is expected that Speaker Reed will dispose of these chairmanships by conferring them upon the ranking member, which would give Mr. Payne of New York ways and means and Mr. Henderson of Iowa appropriations. Mr. Dalzell of Pennsylvania, it is suggested, will be transferred to the judiciary committee.

OVER 8,000 DERRICKS DOWN.

Great Damage Caused by Monday's Hurricane in Oil Fields.

Toledo, O., Nov. 28.—The hurricane of Monday night left a path of wreckage in the oil fields miles in length. Dispatches indicate tremendous losses everywhere. A conservative estimate places the number of derricks down in Ohio at 6,000, and in Indiana at 2,500. Experts who have figured on the loss say it will be anywhere from half a million to a million dollars.

There May Be Others.

Washington, Nov. 28.—Auditor Baldwin and Logan Carlisle, who are investigating the recent destruction of treasury records by a colored laborer, intimate that there are others connected with the matter, who are of more consequence than the colored laborer.

Ex-Mayor Charles Place, of North Plainfield, advocates the election of Senator Thompson, of Somerset county, to the presidency of the Senate.

It is a good thing to set a good example, as evidenced in the conduct of ex-Governor Flower, who turned in his small accumulations of gold to Uncle Sam, and now $15,000 has been added to the public exchequer by similar contributions.

It has been discovered that under the new appropriation law passed by the last Legislature there is no fund available from which to pay the mileage and per diem of the Senators who composed the Board. They have usually received from about $5 to $20, according to the distance traveled.

The absurdity of Editor Runyon publishing the communication of the "Dunellen authority" on the sewage beds is apparent when it is known that the extracts from the book of F. H. Mills, which were reproduced, are the compilation of Allen Hazen, the expert who advised the construction of sewage beds in this city.

The election of Elias H. Bird to the office of City Collector will ensure a careful administration of that office. Mr. Bird has gained the confidence of Plainfield people during the time he has been a member of the Common Council by close attention to the interests of the section of the city which he represents and to the committee work to which he has been assigned. His well-known business capacity and experience are qualifications that fit him admirably for the office of City Collector.

Treatment of Eczema and Salt Rheum.

These complaints are so tenacious that the readers of The Daily Press should know of the success obtained by using Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. Where all other treatments failed, it has made a complete cure.

Perhaps no more horrible case of Salt Rheum was ever reported than that of Wilbur L. Hale, quartermaster, Pratt Post, G. A. R., Rondout, N. Y. Several physicians utterly failed to render him any relief; finally one of the physicians suggested that Dr. Kennedy's Favorate Remedy be tried and steady improvement followed its use, and a permanent cure resulted.

It is used with similiar success in cases of scrofula, nervousness, kidney and liver complaints, and in all diseases brought about by bad blood and shattered nerves.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

In what was meant to be a football field, but what was really a sea of slippery mud, the eleven of the Spartan L. and A. S., of the borough, met the cracks of Dunellen, Bound Brook and Somerville in a game yesterday morning at Dunellen. Despite their best endeavors the players of neither could stand up while the slippery ball caused fumbles and mistakes innumerable. Neither side scored, but the Spartans kept the ball in their opponents' territory almost the entire game and, had their backs been able to keep their feet, would have scored at least one touchdown. Captain Dan Richardson, of the Dunellens, and Negus, did the star work for their team, Richardson being especially good in breaking up the little interference that there was. Most of the Spartan's gains were made through the centre and between guard and tackle where Serrell did some excellent work, gaining several yards at each attempt. Buell put up a lively game at guard and got in almost every play. Owing to the condition of the field, any brilliant playing was impossible. Quite a number of both sexes witnessed the game. The two teams lined up as follows:

SPARTANS.		DUNELLEN.
Jeffrey	left end	Henry
E. Loizeaux	left tackle	Hardingham
W. Loizeaux	left guard	Kershew
Schenck	centre	McNabb
Buell	right guard	Beekman
Craig	right tackle	Coriell
Stout	right end	D. Richardson
Perrin	quarter back	Auten
H. Richardson	left half back	J. Thomas
Carroll	right half back	G. Rich'd'n
E. I. Serrell	full back	Negus

Thomas N. Smith, of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., acted as referee, and Louis Thomas, of Princeton, as umpire. Brereton Platt and Albert Woltmann were linesmen.

The gross receipts of the Princeton-Yale game were $42,000. The expenses were about $14,000, leaving $28,000 to be divided between the college athletic associations.

The Watchung Park boys played the second Dunellen eleven on the latter's grounds yesterday morning after the Spartan-Dunellen game was over. The score was 0 to 0.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The first cross-country run of the season was enjoyed by the Y. M. C. A. boys Thanksgiving Day. The hares, C. Thorn, W. E. Probasco, G. Pike, B. Rockwell, H. Martin and A. B. Crane, were let loose at five minutes of ten, and twenty-one hounds, led by Thomas A. Cuming, started five minutes later. After a fourteen-mile run, the hares finished three minutes ahead. The only hounds to cover the complete course were T. A. Cuming, Chas. Dodd, S. C. Crane and Ernest Suffren.

BASKET BALL.

The High School boys in the Y. M. C. A. are forming a team.

The next game in the Y. M. C. A. championship will be played Tuesday evening between the Leal's School team and the borough boys. B. Rockwell is captain of the former while Charles Dupee captains the team from over the brook.

"Sam" Tucker, the professional golfer in charge of the St. Andrew's links, expects to visit Scotland in the near future. He will return in the early spring.

Golf was the order of the day with Plainfield society people yesterday and fully 160 people were on the course yesterday morning making the grounds almost too crowded for comfortable and safe play. The heavy white frost of Wednesday night made parts of the course very muddy early in the day but by afternoon the mud had dried off and the ground was sufficiently hard for comfortable play, and the caddies reaped a silver harvest of dimes.

The only occurrence that marred the day's sport was a painful and serious accident to one of the players, A. D. Shepard, Jr., whose finger was broken by a ball played from behind. The ball struck his hand while he was grasping his club for a stroke, and it is feared he will not be able to play again this season. Accidents of this kind are almost unknown and are quite impossible where the proper etiquette of the game is observed in allowing the party ahead sufficient distance.

The season is drawing to a close and everyone will take advantage of the few weeks remaining. Then the green will be covered up for the winter and it is safe to say that the grounds will be in the best of condition for a long and prosperous season of 1896.

DEATH IN ITS SECRET.

Awful Destructiveness of Fulminate of Mercury, the Powerful Explosive.

Fulminate of mercury, which is used by European anarchists in the manufacture of their bombs, is one of the most treacherous and powerful explosives known to science. Heretofore it has been employed in percussion caps and as a detonator for nitroglycerin preparations. It explodes when subjected to a slight shock or to heat, and not a few expert chemists since its English inventor, Howard, have been seriously injured or killed while preparing or experimenting with it.

In France some years ago the celebrated chemist Barruel was manipulating this dangerous product in a heavy agate mortar when his attention was suddenly distracted and he let the pestle down with a little less care than ordinary. The explosion which followed almost literally blew the mortar to dust, and it tore Barruel's hand from his wrist. Another distinguished chemist, Bellot, was blinded and had both hands torn off while experimenting with fulminate of mercury. Justin Leroy, a French expert in the manufacture of explosives, was one day engaged in experimenting with this compound in a damp state, in which condition it was supposed to be harmless. It exploded with such force, however, that nothing of M. Leroy that was recognizable could afterward be found.

An English chemist named Hennell, while manufacturing a shell for military use, into the composition of which fulminate of mercury entered, was also blown literally to atoms, and the fragments of the building were scattered for hundreds of feet in every direction.—New York World.

Where Gotham Newsboys Scrap.

Theater alley—known to its frequenters, the newsboys, as "Te-ayter alley," with the accent strong on the second syllable—is the recognized place for pulling off fights among the street urchins. If Mickey the Kid gets into an altercation with Beef'n-beans Murphy over the right to a certain location in the "evenin pape" trade, he does not attempt to fight it out there on the street, where at any moment a copper is likely to appear and "fan" both contestants before lugging them off to the station house. Instead he says:

"I'll see youse in Te-ayter alley after me pape's is sold."

Quickly the news spreads abroad, and 100 or more urchins gather to see the scrap. It is carried on with considerable punctiliousness. Both youngsters strip off their coats, bare their arms, square off in the ring improvised by their adherents, and, after much feinting, pitch in, clinch, maul, push, jab and wrestle. Kicking is barred. Every now and then they go down and roll over each other on the pavement. When both are breathless some one calls, "Time," and their supporters fan them, giving them good advice meantime. These youngsters are so tough that the fights are always harmless, and the instant one of them cries, "I got enough!" the fight is ended. Next day the two are as likely as not to meet in perfect amity. When the fights are at noontime, as sometimes occurs, quite a crowd of men often gather to watch the scrap. Policemen seldom intrude in Theater alley to interrupt these performances.—New York Sun.

As to Fingers.

There is a wonderful amount of character in the finger and thumbs. In general usefulness the thumb is quite the equal of the four fingers. It backs them up on all occasions. The shape of the thumb tells all we want to know of a man's character. The index or forefinger tells a man's occupation in life. The big middle finger indicates a man's habits. The third finger is the most sensitive of all, and is generally used when delicacy of touch is necessary. The little finger is simply a rest for the hand, a sort of spring upon which it may fall at any time without a jar or shock. We could get along very well without our little fingers. Women like them because they can use them to show off a pretty hand. They are really worthless to women except for ornament. They are always up in the air when the rest of the hand is in

THEATRICAL.

Brothers Byrne, the inimitable pantomimic performers, will produce the remarkable, successful comedy, "Eight Bells," at Music Hall on Tuesday evening, Dec. 3. The production of "Eight Bells" this season is a superior one, as the Brothers Byrne have spared no money to make it perfect in detail. Over $15,000 has been spent on scenery, new tricks, etc. The paper is new and very attractive. An entire new last act has been arranged, which will be a revelation in pantomimic comedy. The Brothers Byrne are so well known by our theatrical patrons that they hardly need an introduction; suffice it to say that they are the same painstaking artists as ever, and are well worthy of confidence, for they present exactly what they promise in their advertisements.

It would take volumes to tell all that befell Mrs. Paillard and Mr. Pinglet in "The Gay Parisians." The whole story is presented in the most successful farce ever produced in New York city, which has just celebrated its fiftieth performance at Hoyt's Theatre, and which is playing to the greatest business ever done by a work of this character anywhere. It is a French farce of the liveliest kind and everybody knows that a good French farce is a perfect whirl of fun. It is likely that the metropolis will not get through laughing at it for many a month to come. The Mrs. Pallard of the farce is handsome Odette Tyler. W. J. Ferguson, the noted character actor, is the Mr. Pinglet. Charles Frohman, under whose direction the farce is presented, has put a thoroughly clever cast into it and the performance is as perfect as the scenes are meatty and comical. A visit to "The Gay Parisians" is a cure for the bluest case of blues that was ever brewed.

—The supporters of the Citizens' ticket have entered into the campaign with earnestness. One of their first acts was to issue large posters advertising the ticket and put them in prominent places about the city.

ODD ORIGIN OF WORDS

SOME THAT ARE NOW FAMILIAR DUE TO ACCIDENT.

The Superstition of a Skipper Gave Us "Schooner"—Where "Silhouette" Came From—How "Quiz" Was Made—"Lullaby" Originated With Arabian Mothers.

There are words all frequently use whose histories and derivations are quaint and peculiar. The schooner is comparatively a modern craft and is a product of Yankee ingenuity. A bluff old New England skipper, Captain Andrew Robinson, who probably brought more slaves to the colonies than molasses and other common importations, one day came to the conclusion that he could rig a boat that would be an improvement on the craft then in use for coastwise shipping. Being superstitious, as most seafaring people are, he determined to let chance name his new boat. There were many spectators at the launching, some shaking their heads dubiously, others ridiculing and then others believing in the invention of the old captain. As the boat left the stays she plunged her nose into the water, came up again like a cork and skimmed over the water like a bird. A burst of admiration broke from the crowd, and one of the onlookers exclaimed, "See how she scoons!" Captain Robinson reverently taking the cue said, "Then scooner let her be," and "scooner" she has been ever since, with the exception of the letter "h," which generally manages somehow to get into words where it is not needed.

Another curious word, which has a significant and historical origin, is silhouette. Although this word is somewhat un-English, still it comes under the general appropriation which the English speaking people made of everything that would serve them. One Silhouette was minister of state of France in 1859, a critical period with that country financially, which came near culminating in national bankruptcy. Silhouette is represented as being a very wise and sagacious man, and in politics he would now be termed a "reformer."

Silhouette and his doctrines became the butt of all the wits of Paris, and many a jest was perpetrated on the minister of state under the very nose of Silhouette. With serious faces but laughing inwardly persons wore short coats without sleeves, and many other extravagances of a like nature were committed, among which was one of particular note which created a great deal of merriment at the time—in fact, so much so that it has been handed down to us together with the name of the great reformer as being the climax of the pranks of the Parisian wits. All of the portraits were made in black to represent a profile of the face and bust similar to a shadow cast upon a white paper by the aid of a strong light, thus economizing colored paints and other expensive materials, and this is our present Silhouette and all that is left of him.

The youth speaks of going to his "haberdasher." This word is among that class that owe their origin to one of the most common of sources—viz, corruption. The small shopkeepers of Germany had a custom in past ages of standing in the doors of their shops and inviting an inspection of their wares. Their common salutation to every passerby who had the appearance of being in the least susceptible was, "Habt ihr dass, herr?" ("Have you this, sir?") which was, one may readily imagine, corrupted into "haberdasher" by rapid and constant repetition.

Another word, "exchequer," has a peculiar derivation. In the time of the old Normans there was established a court of equity, or claims, before which was settled the claims of the king upon the people, the claims of the people upon the king and the claims of the people upon the people. Before the judge or presiding officer of this court was a table, upon which was a checkered cloth similar to a chessboard, which was used as an assistant in counting, and to observe this court in session it had the appearance of a game of checkers, and so by common usage it became the court of exchequer, from which comes the word as it is most commonly used now, meaning principally a treasury.

The word "quiz" is purely an accident, or, more properly speaking, the result of an Irishman's joke, and in reality has no meaning. A wager was made between some students of an old university that one of them could not invent a new word which in 24 hours would be the talk of all Dublin. There was much laughter at the expense of the would be coiner of the new word, but next morning upon rising the new word was at the expense of the scoffers, for the letters q u i z were posted on every wall and available space in Dublin, and thus the word became the talk of the town and has since remained exactly what it was when it was invented—a riddle.

There is a word in our language which, correctly speaking, means nothing whatever, although its relative meaning is familiar and dear to all. Who is there in whom the word "lullaby" does not stir some of the tenderest and dearest recollections? This word "lullaby" comes to us in sweet contrast as a myth from the starry plains of Arabia, polished and rounded by the roll of the eternal ages. As a consequence of Lilith, Adam's consort, forming an alliance with the evil spirit, and thus falling from grace, in the course of time the name Lilith became dreaded, and many fearful deeds were attributed to her, so much so the Arabian mother never dare leave her slumbering child without commanding Lilith to be gone and to do the little one no harm. The Arabic phrase invariably used had the sound of 'Lilith a by." As time progressed this was taken up and made the burden of the crooning, drowsy hummings of a mother singing her baby to sleep and has finally come down to us as the sweet, soft "lullaby."—New York Herald.

His Notes.

It was said of Vice Chancellor Bacon that he never troubled to take a note of the proceedings before him, for his memory was so wonderful that without assistance it could retain all the material facts of a case. Sometimes he might be seen putting pen to paper, and then it was supposed that he was making rough sketches of counsel or the witnesses. One amusing story about him was to the effect that, on the hearing of an appeal from one of his judgments, the lords' justices sent for his notes. These proved to consist of a single sheet of paper, on which was drawn a caricature portrait of the appellant, with the words "This man is a liar!" written under it.—London Standard.

Great Reduction in Time to California.

Once more the Northwestern Line has reduced the time of its trans-continental trains, and the journey from Chicago to California via this popular route is now made in the marvelously short time of three days. Palace drawing-room sleeping cars leave Chicago daily, and run through to San Francisco and Los Angeles, without change, and all meals en route are served in dining cars. Daily tourist sleeping car service is also maintained by this line between Chicago and San Francisco and Los Angeles, completely equipped berths in upholstered tourist sleepers being furnished at a cost of only $6 each from Chicago to the Pacific Coast. Through trains leave Chicago for California at six p. m. and 10.45 p. m. daily, after arrival of trains of connecting lines from the east and south. For detailed information concerning rates, routes, etc., apply to ticket agents of connecting lines or address: H. A. Gross, G. E. P. A., 423 Broadway, New York, or T. P. Vaille, S. E. P. A., 112 South Fourth street, Philadelphia, Pa. tf.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

"MY FOOD DOES ME NO GOOD."

In any city there are many possible ways to travel from one point to another. But between the food on your table and its destination in the body there is only one road,—directly through the stomach. There is no going around the stomach or forcing a passage through it. Here the food is detained a while for better or for worse. Here it must be digested,—that is to say, changed, liquefied and assorted for assimilation;—or, failing that, it must lie and rot, generating poisonous principles which enter the blood and set up a diseased action throughout the system. This is indigestion or dyspepsia,—the condition that exist when a person says, "My food does me no good."

Certainly not. How can it? The more he eats the more he suffers. The road is blocked. No use putting more grain in the hopper when the mill can not grind. Here are some of nature's protests: Loss of appetite; distress after eating; heartburn; palpitation; flashes of heat and cold; the rising of nauseous acids and gases into the throat; furred tongue; dull and aching head; pains in the chest and back; weariness, fatigue and worry; loss of sleep; cold hands and feet; yellowish eyes and skin; weakness and trembling; constipation; failure of nervous force and courage, etc., etc. Out of this seething blockade in the stomach may come any of a dozen local complaints,—a common form of pseudo-consumption among them. Yet you must eat or starve. Miserable dilemma.

Drastic measure won't do. Take a very little light nourishment at first and immediately after it a dose of the Shaker Digestive Cordial, the only radically effective remedy for indigestion or dyspepsia,—prepared by the Shaker community of Mount Lebanon, N. Y. It will relieve at once and cure quickly. Made from cultivated medicinal herbs and plants grown by the Shakers. Pleasant to the taste, painless and harmless.

Trial bottles ten cents. For sale by nearly all druggists.

THE SABBATH BREAKER

By I. ZANGWILL.

[Copyright, 1895, by the Author.]

The moment came near for the Polish centenarian grandmother to die. From the doctor's statement it appeared she had only a bad quarter of an hour to live. Her attack had been sudden, and the grandchildren she loved to scold could not be present.

She had already battled through the great wave of pain and was drifting beyond the boundaries of her earthly refuge. The nurses, forgetting the trouble her querulousness and overweening dietary scruples had cost them, hung over the bed in which the shriveled entity lay. They did not know that she was living again through the one great episode of her life.

Nearly 40 years back, when, though already hard upon 70, and a widow, a Polish village was all her horizon, she received a letter. It arrived on the eve of Sabbath, on a day of rainy summer. It was from her little boy—her only boy—who kept a country inn 37 miles away and had a family. She opened the letter with feverish anxiety. Her son—her kaddish—was the apple of her eye. The grandmother eagerly perused the Hebrew script, from right to left. Then weakness overcame her, and she nearly fell.

Embedded casually enough in the four pages was a passage that stood out for her in letters of blood: "I am not feeling very well lately. The weather is so oppressive, and the nights are misty. But it is nothing serious. My digestion is a little out of order, that's all." There were rubles for her in the letter, but she let them fall to the floor unheeded. Panic, fear, traveling quicker than the tardy post of those days, had brought rumor of a sudden outbreak of cholera in her son's district. Already alarm for her boy had surged about her heart all day. The letter confirmed her worst apprehensions. Even if the first touch of the cholera fiend was not actually on him when he wrote, still he was, by his own confession, in that condition in which the disease takes easiest grip. By this time he was on a bed of sickness—nay, perhaps on his deathbed, if not dead. Even in those days the little grandmother had lived beyond the common span. She had seen many people die, and knew that the angel of death does not go about his work leisurely. In an epidemic his hands are too full to enable him to devote much attention to each case. Maternal instinct tugged at her heartstrings, drawing her toward her boy. The end of the letter seemed impregnated with special omen: "Come and see me soon, dear little mother. I shall be unable to get to you for some time." Yes, she must go at once. Who knew but that it would be the last time she would look upon his face?

But then came a terrible thought to give her pause. The Sabbath was just "in" a moment ago. Driving, riding, or any manner of journeying was prohibited during the next 24 hours. Frantically she reviewed the situation. Religion permitted the violation of the Sabbath on one condition—if life was to be saved. By no stretch of logic could she delude herself into the belief that her son's recovery hinged upon her presence. Nay, analyzing the case with the cruel remorselessness of a scrupulous conscience, she saw his very illness was only a plausible hypothesis. No. To go to him now were beyond question to profane the Sabbath.

And yet, beneath all the reasoning, her conviction that he was sick unto death, her resolve to set out at once never wavered. After an agonizing struggle she compromised. She could not go by cart. That would be to make others work into the bargain, and would, moreover, involve a financial transaction. She must walk! Sinful as it was to transgress the limit of 2,000 yards beyond her village, the distance fixed by rabbinical law, there was no help for it. And of all the forms of traveling walking was surely the least sinful. The Holy One, blessed be he, would know she did not mean to work. Perhaps in his mercy he would make allowance for an old woman who had never profaned his rest day before.

"The little mother is on the way."

And so that very evening, having made a hasty meal and lodged the precious letter in her bosom, the little grandmother girded up her loins to walk the seven and thirty miles. No staff took she with her, for to carry such came under the Talmudical definition of "work." Neither could she carry an umbrella, though it was a season of rain. Mile after mile she strode briskly toward the pallid face which lay so far beyond the horizon and yet ever shone before her eyes like a guiding star. "I am coming, my lamb," she muttered. "The little mother is on the way."

It was a muggy night. The sky, flushed with a weird hectic glamour, seemed to hang over the earth like a pall. The trees that lined the roadway were shrouded in a draggling vapor. At midnight the mist blotted out the stars. But the little grandmother knew the road ran straight. All night she walked through the forest, fearless as Una, meeting neither man nor beast, though the wolf and the bear haunted its recesses and snakes lurked in the bushes. But only the innocent squirrels darted across her path. The morning found her spent and almost lame. But she walked on. Almost half the journey was yet to do.

She had nothing with her to eat. Food, too, was an illegal burden, nor could she buy any on the holy day. She said her Sabbath morning prayer walking, hoping God would forgive the disrespect. The recital gave her partial oblivion of her pains. As she passed through a village the dreadful rumor of cholera was confirmed. It gave wings to her feet for ten minutes. Then bodily weakness was stronger than everything else, and she had to lean against the bushes on the outskirts of the village. It was nearly noon. A passing beggar gave her a piece of bread. Fortunately it was unbuttered, so she could eat it with only minor qualms, lest it had touched any unclean thing. She resumed her journey, but the rest had only made her feet move painfully and reluctantly. She would have liked to bathe them in a brook, but that, too, was forbidden. She took the letter from her bosom and reperused it and whipped up her flagging strength with a cry of, "Courage, my lamb; the little mother is on the way." Then the leaden clouds melted into sharp lines of rain, which beat into her face, refreshing her for the first few minutes, but soon wetting her to the skin, making her sopped garments a heavier burden, and reducing the pathway to mud that clogged still further her feeble footsteps. In the teeth of the wind and the driving shower she limped on. A fresh anxiety consumed her now—would she have strength to hold out? Every moment her pace lessened. She was moving like a snail. And the slower she went the more vivid grew her prescience of what awaited her at the journey's end. Would she even hear his dying word? Perhaps — terrible thought—she would only be in time to look upon his dead face! Perhaps that was how God would punish her for her desecration of the holy day. "Take heart, my lamb," she wailed. "Do not die yet. The little mother comes."

The rain stopped. The sun came out hot and fierce and dried her hands and face, then made them stream again with perspiration. Every inch won was torture now, but the brave feet toiled on. Bruised and swollen and crippled, they toiled on. There was a dying voice—very far off yet, alas—that called to her, and as she dragged herself along she cried: "I am coming, my lamb. Take heart! The little mother is on the way. Courage! I shall look upon thy face. I shall find thee alive!"

Once a wagoner observed her plight and offered her a lift, but she shook her head steadfastly. The endless afternoon wore on. She crawled along the forest way, stumbling every now and then from sheer faintness and tearing her hands and face in the brambles of the roadside. At last the cruel sun waned, and reeking mists rose from the forest pools. And still the long miles stretched away, and still she plodded on, torpid from overexertion, scarcely conscious, taking each step only because she had taken the preceding. From time to time her lips mumbled, "Take heart, my lamb; I am coming." The Sabbath was "out" ere, broken and bleeding, and all but swooning, the little grandmother crawled up to her son's inn, on the border of the forest. Her heart was cold with fatal forebodings. There was none of the usual Saturday night litter of Polish peasantry about the door. The sound of many voices, weirdly intonating a Hebrew hymn, floated out into the night. A man in a caftan opened the door and mysteriously raised his forefinger to bid her enter without noise. The little grandmother saw into the room behind. Her daughter-in-law and her grandchildren were seated on the floor—the seat of mourners.

"Blessed be the true Judge," she said, and rent the skirt of her dress. "When did he die?"

"Yesterday. We had to bury him hastily ere the Sabbath came in."

The little grandmother lifted up her quavering voice and joined the hymn: "I will sing a new song unto thee, O God! Upon a harp of ten strings will I sing praises unto thee."

* * * * * *

The nurses could not understand what sudden inflow of strength and impulse raised the mummified figure into a sitting posture. The little grandmother thrust a shriveled claw into her peaked, shrunken bosom and drew out a paper, crumpled and yellow as herself, covered with strange, crabbed hieroglyphics, whose hue had long since faded. She held it close to her bleared eyes. A beautiful light came into them and illumined the million puckered face. The lips moved faintly. "I am coming, my lamb," she mumbled. "Courage! The little mother is on the way. I shall look on thy face. I shall find thee alive."

THE END.

"Mamma Is Here Now."

It was in the Pennsylvania station the other morning. In one of the waiting room seats there sat a tired, worn looking man with a little boy of perhaps 3 in his arms. The little fellow's shoes were only half buttoned, his hair was awkwardly combed, and his stockings were awry. At the man's side sat two little girls of perhaps 5 and 7. Their frocks were buttoned crooked, but the younger had her hair combed in a pitiful attempt at curls. The man kept glancing at the clock. By and by the elder little girl spoke.

"Is mamma here yet?" she asked.

"Let us see," the man said.

The forlorn looking quartet rose and straggled out to the platform. There some men were just lifting a long pine box from a wagon. The man looked at it a moment.

"Come," he said, "let's go back. Mamma is here now."—Washington Post.

A TABBY'S BLIND RAGE.

Attacked a Woman's Mink Boa, Which She Mistook For an Enemy.

A woman and man were sitting in the waiting room of the Staten Island ferry waiting for the gates to open to admit the passengers for the next boat across. The woman had a mink boa laid carelessly in her lap. The snarling face of the stuffed mink with its vicious little glass eyes looked defiantly over the edge of her lap into the room. At a little distance the station cat was contentedly making her toilet by alternately licking her paws and giving her face a vigorous rubbing. So absorbed was the cat in her ablutions that she was not aware of a pair of bright little yellow eyes fixed intently upon her.

After a minute or two, however, tabby seemed satisfied that her appearance was as it should be. Then she deigned to take a look around the room to see what was going on. Suddenly her eyes ceased their aimless wandering and became riveted on a spot in the direction of the lady with the boa. This was followed by a nervous twitching in the end of the cat's tail. There was evidently something interesting there, and all indications pointed toward trouble of some kind.

The cat stared at the gleaming little eyes, while her tail increased the violence of its twitchings. The mink, when it came to staring, was more than able to hold its own against the cat. The latter seemed to realize this. She slowly rose from her haunches and began to steal out of the line of vision of the little eyes, meantime keeping her own fixed steadily on the snarling face in the lap. The cat circled slowly out of the mink's range of view, quickened her pace for a few yards and then suddenly crouched down and began to creep along the floor. The prospects of trouble were becoming promising.

Nearer and nearer crept the cat. She was evidently going to attack the mink on its left wing. The woman and man were engaged in conversation, unaware of the designing cat. The woman began tapping her foot on the floor, which gave the mink's head a bobbing motion. This show of independence and bravado seemed to aggravate the cat beyond feline endurance.

There was a sudden spring, and almost simultaneously the cat landed a swift short arm blow on the mink's left jaw. With a little screech of terror the woman jumped up, dropping the mink to the floor, where the cat promptly seized it. For a few seconds there was an interesting intermingling of fur: then the man succeeded in rescuing the boa. The cat strolled off with the air of one who had vindicated herself, and the trouble was over.—New York Sun.

SALUTING THE KEYS.

An Ancient Midnight Ceremony at the Tower of London.

A custom continued down into Victoria's reign is described as follows:

A few minutes before the clock strikes the hour of 12 the head warder (yeoman porter), clothed in a long red cloak, bearing a large bunch of keys and attended by a brother warder carrying a lantern, appears in front of the guardhouse and loudly calls out, "Escort keys!" The sergeant of the guard, with five or six men, then turns out, following him to the "spur," or outer gate, each sentry challenging as they pass his post, "Who goes there?" "Keys!" The gates being carefully locked and barred, the procession returns, the sentries exacting the same explanation and receiving the same answer as before. Arrived once more in front of the main guardhouse, the sentry there gives a loud stamp with his foot and asks:

"Who goes there?"

"Keys!"

"Whose keys?"

"Queen Victoria's keys, and all's well!"

The yeoman porter then exclaims, "God bless Queen Victoria!"

The man with the lantern then says, "Amen!" The officer on duty gives the word "Present arms!" the firelocks rattle, the officer kisses the hilt of the sword, the escort fall in among their companions, and the yeoman porter marches across the parade alone to deposit the keys in the lieutenant's lodgings.

The ceremony over, not only are all egress and ingress totally precluded, but even within the walls no one can stir without being furnished with the countersign.—Providence Journal.

Fondness of Mice For Music.

A nice little animal story is given in Nature Notes, which raises the interesting question whether mice have a fondness for music. It is contributed by a musician, who says: "One evening I was somewhat startled at hearing my piano suddenly giving forth sweet sounds, apparently of its own accord. A mouse, so it proved, had got inside the instrument, and was making music on the wires. Whether this was intentional on mousie's part or not I cannot say. Perhaps he was trying to make a nest for himself there. Some years ago, however, while a piano was being played in the dining room of my old home, several mice came out upon the hearth rug and began to jump about, apparently with delight at the sound of the music, and one was either so absorbed or overcome by it that he allowed himself to be carried away in a tongs by the housemaid." After this, ladies ought to lose their antipathy to mice—indeed we may soon expect some humanitarian dame to commence musical parties for their delectation. It would be amusing to see them dance and would form a really humane method of catching them.—London News.

"For years I had suffered from falling of the womb, inflammation of the stomach, and weakness of the female organs. "I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and found a perfect cure in it for these troubles." MRS. LIZZIE DECLINE, 224 Grand Street, Jersey City, New Jersey.

ALWAYS CRIMINAL.

BLACK RECORD FOR CENTURIES OF A ROMAN VILLAGE.

Artena Infamous For the Crimes of Its Inhabitants Seven Centuries Ago and Outlawed by a Pope—Crime Hereditary In Some of the Families.

"A Country of Born Criminals" is what Professor Sichele of the University of Pisa entitles his article on Artena, an Italian village, in a recent issue of Archives d'Anthropologie. The province of Rome has long been famous for crime, and Artena, a Roman village of about 4,000 inhabitants, is the most strongly criminal community in the province. That has been its reputation since the middle of the twelfth century.

Artena, or Montefortino, as it was anciently called, stands on a hill 400 feet above sea level and is on the edge of a mountain range. The inhabitants are mostly farmers, and they till a rich soil, so that there is no deep poverty in the region. The conditions and surroundings are such as to encourage the rugged virtues. The place has, from a military point of view, an almost impregnable site, and its earlier name commemorated this fact. Perhaps the earliest mention of the place in Italian history occurs in 1155, when the frequency of crime is noted. Pope Paul IV issued an edict against the place in 1557, describing its inhabitants as of notoriously evil life. He ordered that the castle, "a nest of robbers," be destroyed and that all the male inhabitants be banished, and decreed that any man who met them might kill them. The edict was, in fact, one of outlawry against the male population. His holiness named among the crimes of Montefortino not only robbery, but also murder and assaults upon the papal soldiery.

The pope's tremendous edict did not depopulate the place or greatly change the character of its inhabitants for any long period, for the crimes of Montefortino appear and reappear in Italian history from that day to this. Professor Sichele sketches the criminal history of Montefortino for the last half century. During that period the vendetta has reigned there unchecked. From 1851 to 1868 the courts were powerless to deal with the accused, because it was impossible to obtain evidence to convict. An official report in 1872 described the place as a stronghold of murderers, assassins, extortioners and incendiaries, active night and day. It was declared that the criminals of that day were the children of criminals who had perished in the galleys or on the scaffold, and that they had organized a monopoly of the profitable industry of crime. It was about this time that the village, as if anxious to forget its past, changed its name to Artena. But crime has since increased rather than diminished, and the criminals of today bear the same names as the hereditary criminals of more than 20 years ago. The assizes of 1879, 1881 and 1883 were fruitless, as no one was convicted of serious crime, though there were many indictments. Between 1879 and 1886 Artena had four mayors, and the life of each was attempted. One was actually assassinated, and the other three were wounded. One was shot in broad daylight in the market place, but the would be assassin was not punished.

Between 1853 and 1872 there were 42 murders and assassinations at Artena. This would be at a mean annual rate of 52.5 per 100,000. The rate throughout Italy has varied in recent years from 7.73 to 16.80 per 100,000, and the mean annual rate throughout Italy is 9.38 per 100,000. The number of murders and assassinations at Artena between 1873 and 1888 was 37, or at the rate of 61.50 per 100,000. The mean annual number of such crimes per 100,000 throughout the whole province of Rome is 25.40. In other words, the rate at Artena during the last period named is more than double that of the province. The rate for various European countries is 0.94 to 12.67.

Artena is equally notorious for lighter crimes. Between 1853 and 1872 there were 164 assaults with attendant wounds. This would be at the rate of 205 per 100,000. In the same period there were 66 highway robberies, or at the annual rate of 85 per 100,000. The annual rate for assaults throughout all Italy is 34.17 per 100,000, and for highway robbery 3.67 per 100,000. Artena had between 1853 and 1872 116 thefts, or at the rate of 145.5 annually per 100,000 and between 1873 and 1888 127, at the rate of 211.5 per 100,000. The rate for all Italy between 1879 and 1887 was 47.36 per 100,000.

At the recent assizes at Artena 32 persons were accused of crime. There were 8 charges of highway robbery, 3 of murder and 1 of assassination. There were more than 40 persons strongly suspected of crime, but the number of accusations was reduced in order that fewer persons in the community might be interested against the administration of justice. The old names again appeared among the accused. It seems that crime is hereditary in comparatively few families. One of these families is the Pomponi. They have been famous for generations. The father has served a long term in jail; the mother was imprisoned for 30 years; three of the sons have been sentenced to long terms, and the fourth, a lad of 13, escaped conviction because of his youth. Pasquale Villani, a famous rogue, called himself the "mirror of the country," meaning that he was a model of virtue. Francisco Bucci, on being reminded from the bench by the presiding judge that he had sought to draw an acquaintance into a criminal affair, proudly replied:

"What need have I to ask aid in committing a crime? I am equal to pillaging a whole village single handed."

The prisoners had no shame in their career, and there was great competition as to which of them should have his picture made for an illustrated paper of Rome.

The characteristic of these people under accusation is usually an absolute silence. Witnesses are reticent and timid. One unwilling witness, however, let drop the incriminating word paranza. The usual meaning of paranza is a subgroup of the Italian criminal society called camorra. This last has a great chief, while the paranza is a group under a small chief, with treasurer, secretary and other officers. It is supposed that the camorra does not exist as such at Artena, but that the paranza is a small, independent organization of local criminals. The law of the paranza at Artena, as of the camorra elsewhere, is silence, reciprocal false testimony in court, defense of the accused with the aid of a common fund, and death to informers. Pasquale Villani was at once chief and treasurer of the Artena paranza. He furnished false witnesses, paid the attorneys and watched the trial with the utmost care.

Said a little 6-year-old, "Mamma, how does God make us without any seams showing?"

PRUSSIAN HORSES.

The Famous Stud Farm That Supplies the German Army With Animals.

In the easternmost corner of Prussia, near the village of Trakehnen, is a famous horse breeding establishment which was started by the father of Frederick the Great. This great stud farm is still carried on with characteristic energy, and not only provides the German army with the hundred thousand horses which it requires in times of peace, but does much toward keeping up a high general standard among the horses of the country. Nearly every farm in east Prussia is devoted to this one occupation, and the German army gets many more horses from this little corner than from anywhere else in the kingdom. The author of "The Borderland of Czar and Kaiser" gives an admirable picture of the gentleness and docility of the Trakehnen thoroughbreds:

We pulled up in a field where were 100 3-year-old stallions running free, and watched by two herders, each bearing a long whip, which he cracked now and then as a warning that some one of the herd was straying.

The herd appeared very quiet, and paid little attention to our carriage as it drove up close to them on the grass. The major said they were as gentle as sheep and not half as shy, and at his invitation I jumped from my seat and walked up to them, into the very midst of them, strolling in and out among them, patting them on the nose or flank, wherever I happened to be nearest them.

To secure this result a prize is offered to those herders whose horses show the most confiding disposition at the approach of man.

One evening we went to see the horses called home from the pasture. They came in troops of hundreds, and gathered in large inclosures facing the stables. The main body divided itself according to color, the blacks going to one corner, the browns to another, the bays to a third; of whites or grays I saw no specimens.

Here and there would be one that had mistaken his corner, or was seeking forbidden company out of mischief. The keeper had no difficulty in bringing him to his right senses, however, by simply calling his name and waving his hand in the direction of the corner to which he belonged. The colt thus addressed invariably leaped out from the corner to which he was an intruder and galloped straight to the corner whose color matched his. This we saw done many times over, and it never failed.

The Two Matches.

One day there was a traveler in the woods in California in the dry season, when the trade winds were blowing strong. He had ridden a long way, and he was tired and hungry and dismounted from his horse to smoke a pipe. But when he felt in his pocket he found but two matches. He struck the first, and it would not ignite.

"Here is a pretty state o' things," said the traveler. "Dying for a smoke. Only one match left, and that certain to miss fire. Was there ever a creature so unfortunate? And yet," thought the traveler, "suppose I light this match and smoke my pipe and shake out the dottle here in the grass. The grass might catch on fire, for it is dry like tinder, and while I snatch out the flames in front they might evade and run behind me and seize upon yon bush of poison oak. Before I could reach it that would have blazed up. Over the bush I see a pine tree hung with moss. That, too, would fly in fire upon the instant to its topmost bough, and the flame of that long torch, how would the trade wind take and brandish that through the inflammable forest? I hear this dell roar in a moment with the joint voice of wind and fire. I see myself gallop for my soul, and the flying conflagration chase and outflank me through the hills. I see this pleasant forest burn for days, and the cattle roasted, and the springs dried up, and the farmer ruined, and his children cast upon the world. What a world hangs upon this moment!"

With that he struck the match, and it missed fire.

"Thank God," said the traveler, and he put his pipe in his pocket.—The Late R. L. Stevenson in Longman's Magazine.

Victoria's Coronation Ordeal.

Victoria's coronation ceremonies, according to The Woman at Home, lasted more than four hours, and throughout the queen played her part with wonderful composure. Care, says the same writer, had been taken to provide a crown suitable for her small head, but no one had thought about reducing the size of the orb which she was required to carry in her tiny hand. "What am I to do with it?" she asked in concern. "Carry it, your majesty," replied Lord John Thynne. "Must I? It is very heavy," the queen answered in a tone of amazement. However, it was too late to protest, and she obeyed the exigencies of the situation. A worse mistake had been made with regard to the ruby coronation ring. The jeweler had made it to fit her majesty's little finger, whereas the archbishop declared that according to the rubric it must be put upon the larger finger, and accordingly forced it into that position. The queen bore her painfully swelling finger with the same heroism that she carried the weighty orb. Afterward the finger was so much swollen that it had to be bathed in ice water before the ring could be drawn off.

Animal Superstitions.

In the east it is commonly said that ten animals were admitted to paradise. (1) The dog Kratin of the seven sleepers of Ephesus; (2) Balaam's ass, which reproved the disobedient prophet; (3) Solomon's ant, which reproved the sluggard; (4) Jonah's whale; (5) the ram of Ishmael, caught by the horns, and offered in sacrifice instead of Isaac; (7) the camel of Saleb; (8) the cuckoo of Belkis; (9) the ox of Moses; (10) the animal called Al Borak, which conveyed Mohammed to heaven. The following are sometimes added or substituted: The ass on which our Saviour rode into Jerusalem; the ass on which the queen of Sheba rode when she visited Solomon.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Frank and Explicit.

A city visitor in a country town had a tea party given in her honor, where she says she watched the country folk spoil their pleasant customs by imitating city artificiality. One old maiden, however, relieved unconsciously the boredom of the afternoon. "Will you have milk and sugar in your tea?" she was asked. "Sugar, if lump; if not, no. Milk, if cream; if not, no."—Boston Transcript.

Good manners is the art of making those people easy with whom we converse; whoever makes the fewest persons uneasy is the best bred man in company.—Swift.

The "Pilgrim's Progress" was first published on the 31st of August, 1678, and on the same date ten years later its great author passed to his rest.

LARGELY ATTENDED FUNERAL.

Many Young Friends of Wm. Winckler Attend His Obsequies.

The funeral services of the late William C. Winckler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus J. Winckler, were held from his parent's home at 32 Park place yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and were particularly impressive. The desolate home was filled with relatives and friends of the decedent, which bore rich testimony to his estimable qualities and the esteem in which he was held, while outside were 76 members of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. M., of which the departed was a member.

A touching selection, "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me," was rendered by Msss Whiting, soprano; Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, alto; E. E. Runyon, tenor; and Horace J. Martin, bass. Rev. Mr. Goodrich then took charge of the service and read the scripture selection after which he spoke in part as follows:

There are times when we can do nothing but look to God. He is our refuge and strength, as thousands of afflicted ones can testify. He is a present help. There is no long journey to be traveled in reaching him, for he is very near us, especially in trouble, when death is in our minds so painfully as it is today. Our times are in God's hands, not in man's, satin's or chance.

This death is not an untimely cutting off, but a removal to a better sphere. We ought to know God better and then we would know his plans better. He gives his children life eternal and no accident can pluck it out of the Father's hands, and death cannot. We must look away from this sad event to Jesus Christ. Today we are reminded of the brevity of life, and may God teach us to so number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church and a member of the J. O. U. A. M., then offered a deeply spiritual prayer that spoke for each heart present.

The quartette then sang tenderly "Sometime We'll Understand," after which Rev. Mr. Goodrich pronounced the benediction.

It was an occasion of regret that the circumstances would not permit the opening of the casket

The floral tributes were beautiful and consisted of three large pillows of roses, ferns and calla lillies, one from Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., bearing the inscription "Our Brother in V. L and P., another from the decedent's employer and shopmates and another from the sisters and brother of the departed, bearing the word "Brother." An affecting tribute was an exquisite bunch of white chrysanthemums from the bereaved parents. Another was a wreath of roses, ferns and calla lillies from former employers, Neuman Brothers. The rest consisted of bouquets of cut roses tied with satin ribbon. They all were neatly arranged upon the casket, upon which was spread the American flag and the regalia of the order.

L. M. Dunavan, W. C. Force, John V. Beekman, Theodore A. Kurzhals, Jr., J. W. Poole and F. Merton Lunger, members of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., as bearers, then escorted the remains to the hearse, while the brothers stood facing each other with uncovered heads.

At Hillside cemetery Rev. Mr. Goodrich read a short Scripture selection, after which Past Councilor David Bodine took charge and conducted the service of the order. At the conclusion "Farewell Dear Brother" was sung by the members and Rev. J. W. Richardson pronounced the benediction.

Broke Three Ribs.

Jacob Yakes, of Union Village, was visited by a tramp a few days ago who made a demand that he be allowed to sleep in his barn. Mr. Yakes refused and the tramp became insolent. This somewhat aggravated the Union Village agriculturist and he essayed to eject the wanderer from his premises. During the process of the ejectment proceedings Mr. Yakes fell from a small foot bridge and broke three of his ribs. He is now confined to his home while the tromp moves on in an unknown section of the country.

Yates, of Maine, on the subject "Fashionable Thinking." The committee in charge consists of Mrs. M. I. Cooley, chairman, Mrs. J. M. McNaughton, Mrs. J. Middledith, Mrs. D. E. Titsworth and Mrs. T. H. THE BATTLE FOR SUFFRAGE.

NEW JERSEY WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE ADVOCATES CONFER AND ELECT.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall Elected President—Papers Read by Plainfielders—Confidence That They Will Win.

The New Jersey Woman's Suffrage Association held its annual meeting yesterday afterday afternoon in Trinity church chapel, Elizabeth. Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Plainfield, presided, and there were thirty persons present. Dr. Mary D. Hussey, of East Orange, was secretary. The reports were all read. They included:

"Distribution of Literature," Mrs. D. W. Pond, Plainfield.

"Suffrage Work in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union," Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of Plainfield.

During the past year only one county union was organized. This was at Plainfield. It was reported that twelve women had been elected school trustees by men's votes.

Mrs. J. D. DeWitt, President of the Essex County Suffrage Association, read a report that showed that many effective meetings had been held. Mrs. DeWitt was warmly applauded when she finished reading her report.

The New Jersey Association was reported as being the first one to put itself on record last year as demanding from the Legislature the restoration of full suffrage, which woman enjoyed prior to 1807.

Mrs. Philbrook, the woman lawyer, reported that through the efforts of the association four important laws had been enacted in favor of women by the last Legislature. One of these was giving women power to act as Commissioners of Deeds and another was giving women privilege to practice law in New Jersey. Another was holding married women's property liable for debts.

A resolution was passed giving the executive committee power to add to its number in order to prepare petitions to be presented to the next Legislature for the restoration of school suffrage to women and to take such other steps as may be necessary to accomplish this.

The points which the association will work for the ensuing year are to organize in every county in the State to gain school suffrage for women, and to study up so as to be able to vote intelligently when this is obtained.

Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, the first woman minister in New Jersey, was present.

The following were chosen: President, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Plainfield; Vice President, Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, of Elizabeth; Recording-Secretary, Mrs. Irving Angel, of Passaic; Corresponding-Secretary, Dr. Mary D. Hussey, East Orange; Treasurer, Mrs. S. R. Krom, of Plainfield; Auditor, Mrs. Susan W. Lippencott, of Cinnamensen, Burlington county.

Those present expressed confidence in being able to win next year the battle for school suffrage.

Will Sing the "Harvest Cantata."

There will be special music at the First Baptist church tomorrow evening. The choir will sing the entire "Harvest Cantata" by Garrett, a work especially appropriate for the Thanksgiving season. Mr. Fitzhugh will preside at the organ.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. SOCIETY PEOPLE QUARREL.

Ignoring a Bound Brook Young Man Leads to Words.

The season's festivities opened in Bound Brook with an assembly, says the New York World this morning. A number of the borough Four Hundred were absent. When the committee having the assembly in charge made up its lists of invitations it decided to omit some names which were on the old list. No reason was given, but the committee had that discretion.

Among the snubbed was Horatio Negus, son of William Negus. The three daughters received their cards, but when they found that their brother was left out they indignantly returned them. There was a loud protest from friends of the family and from others who had been turned down.

Edward French, who lives in Plainfield, is an intimate friend of the Negus family. He had subscribed to help the assembly along and intended to participate in it. When he heard of the way young Negus was treated he took it as a personal affront. Wednesday morning, when he boarded the train for New York at Plainfield, he saw Harry Baily, a member of the assembly committee. He immediately demanded his $2, and when it had been paid over there were some hot words. French said he considered that he had been insulted, and demanded an apology. He is a big fellow, and Baily is slight, but the latter replied that he had no reason to apologize.

French slapped Baily's face. Edward Powlson, a Bound Brook young man, came to Baily's rescue and struck French. A Plainfield friend of the latter stepped up, and there was a general scrimmage in the car, which continued until ther trainmen separated the combatants. It was feared that there would be trouble tonight.

HIT THE MARSHAL ON THE NOSE.

Then He Gave Leg Bail, But Was Finally Captured.

For being drunk and disorderly in the borough last night a laboring man named Kiely was arrested by Marshals Doud and Lines. This morning Justice Crosley fined him $10, which he paid.

Patrick Boyle also visited the borough last night and imbibed too freely, which resulted in his being disorderly. Marshal Lines questioned him and he made an insulting reply, whereupon the officer attempted to arrest him. Boyle became infuriated and struck the Marshal on the nose. He then got away. Marshal Doud gave chase, caught him, and he again got away. Officer Frederickson arrested him as he was going through Park avenue and placed him in the lockup.

This morning he was taken to the Borough court on a complaint made by Marshal Lines. Lawyer George W. DeMeza appeared for Boyle and asked that the court be lienent with him. Borough Counsel Reed said he thought it was about time that the practice on the part of young men in coming to the borough and making a disturbance was stopped. He considered the charge a serious one, and if the man was let off with a light fine, it would establish no precedent in the future.

Justice Crosley then imposed a fine of $20 and costs, which amounted to about $27 in ill. The fine was paid and the man released.

Addressing Prisoners.

Rev. T. Logan Murphy led the services at the Union county jail at Elizabeth yesterday. T. Marion McAllister, of Elizabeth, who died a short time ago, has led the services there for the last fifteen years, and it was by the request of his wife that Rev. Mr. Murphy took charge of the services. At the conclusion of the services yesterday the prisoners were given a Thanksgiving dinner.

Her Fourteenth Birthday.

A very enjoyable birthday party was given last evening in honor of the fourteenth birthday of Miss Lizzie Sheldon, of West Second street. About twenty-five were present. The evening passed very pleasantly with dancing and games, while refreshments were served during the evening. The gathering broke up at about one o'clock. Prof. Hewitt furnished the music.

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

YOUNG ENTERTAIN OLD.

Monroe Avenue Chapel Members Know How to Get Enjoyment.

The Junior Epworth Leaguers of the Monroe Avenue chapel, under the direction of Rev. Mr. O'Donnell, pastor, Miss Mattie Aldrich, Miss Leland and Miss Brower, gave their older friends an entertainment last night that was excellent in every particular. Rev. Mr. O'Donnell presided and after making a few remarks along the line of Junior work, offered prayer.

The Junior hymn "Who will follow Jesus?" was heartily rendered by the members, after which the president of the league, Daisy Bronard, rendered a piano solo. A recitation, "The Transformed Pie," by Belle VanNest won applause as did also a piano solo by Edna Phillips. "The Tramp," a recitation by Lulu Randolph, received notable recognition. A pleasing number was a vocal solo, "Tom and Tim," by Sadie Elliott, which preceeded a recitation, "The Ship's Colors" by George Whitley. This was followed with a pretty and amusing exercise by Edna Scribner, Lillie Cockley, Florence Phillips, Carrie Brower, Sadie Brower, and Nellie Thompson. Recitations by Minneola Dodds and Stella Anderson, and a piano solo by Etta Randolph were all heartily appreciated.

The last number on the programme was the "Gypsy Festival," a cantata. Its rendition was fine and very amusing. The following participated in the cantata: Queen, Daisy Bronard, Fortune teller, Lulu Randolph; Peddler, Aaron Brower; Gypsy chorus, May Brower, Ada Van Dorn, Sophie Saums, Bessie Walls, Nellie Whitley, Ruth Thompson, Sadie Elliott, Gracie Corvan, Jessie Burt, Lulu Hayes, Clara Scribner, Margie Phillips, Abie Irene Aldrich, Minnie Gurzelman and Lulu Beekman. Miss Mattie Aldrich was the accompanist. Coffee and cake was served in abundance by the Juniors to their friends which brought to a close a pleasant event.

CAUSE OF THE EXPLOSION.

Gas Leaked Into the Sewer From a Broken Main.

The source from which the gas that caused the explosions on Thanksgiving Day has been found after several days of incessant work by the employes of the Gas Company. The four-inch gas main in Richmond street was found broken near Watchung avenue and the work of repairing was begun at once.

Yesterday and today a more careful examination has been made of the sewers in the vicinity of the explosions. The manholes at the corner of Franklin place and La Grande avenue were cracked, as told in yesterday's issue of The Daily Press. But the investigation of Chief Engineer Gavett and his assistants showed that the lamphole on Putnam avenue, just above Richmond street, had been shattered and the pipe, for one or two lengths on either side of it, was wrecked. The engineers entered the manholes, but there was no odor of gas in any of them, the way in which they had been ventilated having accomplished its object.

Litigants Come to Blows.

The case of Bird against Smalley, for nonpayment of rent, was tried in Somerville yesterday and resulted in a decision in favor of the plaintiff. While at the depot, preparatory to their return to this city, the two principals in the case became involved in an altercation concerning their previous records. The lie was given and blows exchanged before the combatants could be separated by their friends.

To Institute a New Lodge.

Past Master Workman N. C. Mague, of Central Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., will institute a similar lodge at Basking Ridge next Tuesday evening. The new lodge will start off with a charter list of forty-two. A stageload of members from Central and Columbia lodges of this city will be present, as will also the grand lodge officers of the State. A supper will be served in Hotel Washington after the business is transacted.

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhœa of long standing in six hours, with one small bottle of Chambertain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief. It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. R. Armstrong, Manager.

THE SOCIAL SEASON OPENED.

FIGURES BOTH GROTESQUE AND PRETTY AT THE GERMAN.

The Event Attended by a Number of Leading Society People—Description of Some of the Most Novel Figures.

The social season of Plainfield opened auspiciously last evening at the Casino with a subscription German, which was largely attended. The affair was a complete success, from first to last, and devolved much credit on the leaders, Louis G. Timpson and Fred. W. Walz, who originated the novel but very pleasing figures, and who managed the entire affair so well. The music was furnished by Elliott, of New York. In one of the side rooms, refreshments were served by Steward Peterson, of the Union County Club.

The figures were all entirely new and very pretty, most of them being appropriate to Thanksgiving. The pumpkin figure was something on a new line. The lights in the hall were all turned out and the gentleman entered with large lighted jack lanterns, made of pumpkins in front of their faces. Then the ladies choose partners from among the hideous and grotesque faces and danced with the one who was behind the jacks' lantern.

Another Thanksgiving figure was the wishbone, in which four men grasped each side of a gigantic wooden wish bone. There was a joint in some unknown place in it and those getting the long end took the four ladies who awaited there while the other four went back to their seats.

The football figure was a lively one as the name suggested and was the cause of much amusement. A certain number of ladies were grouped at one end of the hall and twice that number of gentlemen gathered at the other end. One of the ladies kicked a football down the hall and the gentleman that secured it had the privilege of dancing with her. There was plenty of fun when the slippery football went bounding along and the gentlemen indulged in genuine football practice in attempting to capture it. Tumbles were many.

The Trilby figure was one of the most novel and, as might be expected, the gentlemen chose their partners by their feet which were visible beneath a sheet that hid their owners. A pair of stuffed feet and shoes were placed in position and several of the men chose this inanimate figure.

The Billiard figure was another very pretty one and was especially graceful. There were a number of figures and it was not until almost two o'clock that the gathering broke up and the last figure had been danced. The handsome favors were given out by Mrs. J. T. Reinhart, Mrs. O. T. Waring and Mrs. L. E. Walz.

There were about forty couple who took part in the German, among whom were the Misses Shepard, Waring, Florence Waring, Lockwood, Reinhart, Van Boskerck, Dumont, May Holly, Margaret Holly, Cooley, Abbott, Baker, Whiton, Sprague and Frost, Mrs. L. G. Timpson, Mrs. Marion Ackerman, Mrs. Evarts Tracy, Mrs. Edward Van Buren and Messrs. Beebe, Lowe, O. G. Waring, L. E. Waring, Finch, Huntington, Irving West, Harry West, Edward Van Buren, Laurens Van Buren, Van Boskerck, Shepard, Foster, of New York, Tyler, Frost, Opdyke, Murphy and Reinhart.

The next large social event will be the first assembly on December 16th.

The Yale Dinner.

The annual dinner of the Yale Club will be held at the Casino on Thursday next. President Dwight will respond on behalf of the University; President Austin Scott, of Rutgers, on behalf of the State of New Jersey; Dr. B. Van D. Hedges for Princeton alumni, and Mr. Jose A. Machado, for those of Harvard.

The present indications are that about fifty persons will be present, including several from Westfield and Elizabeth. Any members of the club not yet supplied with tickets should apply at once to the chairman of the committee, Mr. Albert H. Atterbury, 214 East Ninth street.

Orient Degree Worked.

Seven candidates received the grand orient degree at the meeting of Oriental Council, K. of P., last evening. The committee reported on the costumes for the new work, giving styles, prices, etc., and the council thought that $400 would secure the costumes. The matter will be brought up again next week and decided upon. The balance of the evening was devoted to routine business.

Practical Christmas Presents.

The Ladies' Auxiliary Society of Holy Cross church today despatched a large barrel of clothes and Christmas presents to a western Indian mission.

INSPECTED THE CORPS.

After the Inspection Social Intercourse Reigned.

Inspecting Officer Mrs. Hill, accompanied by Past Department President Mrs. Jennie B. Atwood and Mrs. Fitzpatrick, of Trenton, visited the Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, in this city last evening, when Mrs. Hill inspected the Corps.

After the transaction of business the women adjourned to the banquet room where they met members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and John Hand Camp, No. 18, S. of V., as their guests. All sat down to the table and partook of an excellent supper prepared by the women.

Speeches were made by Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Atwood and Mrs. Fitzpatrick, of Trenton, Mrs. Angleman, of Bayonne, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, Mrs. Corwin, Mrs. W. C. Smith, V. W. Nash, W. W. Coriell, Joseph Bogert, E. P. T. Smith, H. C. McVoy, Charles Stephens, M. C. Dobbins, Robert Walker, and recitations by W. R. Mattox and H. S. Thatcher. The affair was a most pleasant one and will long be remembered. In conclusion "America" was sung by all present.

A Big Purchase.

Edward White received on Wednesday forty cases of fine china, consisting of cups and saucers, vases, bread and cake plates, pickle dishes, sugar and creamers, fancy plates, nut and fruit dishes, celery trays, etc. These goods were sold at auction by order of George Borgfeldt & Co., one of the largest importing houses in New York, and were imported by them for a prominent house in New York, but not delivered on account of financial embarassment. These goods are very fine and well worth seeing as the prices are less than half of their real value.

Croup is a terror to young mothers To post them concerning the first symptoms, and treatment is the object of this item. The first indication of croup is hoarseness. In a child who is subject to croup it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the rough cough has appeared it will prevent the attack. It has never been known to fail. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE WAR DEPARTMENT

Annual Report of the Hon. Daniel S. Lamont.

Insufficient Congressional Appropriations — Full Strength of the Army — General Condition and Health of Enlisted Men—$82,000,000 Required for Coast Defenses.

Washington, Nov. 30.—The report of Hon. Daniel S. Lamont, secretary of war, opens with a suggestive tabular statement of insufficient congressional appropriations. The full strength of the enlisted men in the army is stated at 25,705. The secretary claims credit for having during the past two years "steadily pursued the policy of restoring officers to their commands and reducing wherever possible the number of those on detached duty." Officers assigned to duty at Washington and at department headquarters have been reduced from 67 to 65, and the officers on recruiting service have been reduced from 98 to 35. Those assigned as military instructors of the national guard of the states and at military schools have been increased from 92 to 128, and those acting as Indian agents from five to 19. He considers that the most essential need of the army to-day is the adoption of the "three battalion" formation as recommended in his report of 1894.

Our Coast Defenses.

Secretary Lamont recommends that the act of Oct. 1, 1890, providing for an examination of certain army officers prior to promotion, be extended to include field officers. He says the "policy of concentrating the army and abandoning unnecessary posts has not only won the approval of all those acquainted with the lines of progress which conditions have marked out for our army, but is approved by all thoughtful citizens." Secretary Lamont quotes President Cleveland's message of 1886 in regard to our defenseless sea coasts, and says: "The various factors in the scheme of defense have now been so accurately determined that for the first time it is possible to forecast from what has been accomplished the time and expense required to complete the project with existing facilities. We have established and equipped a gun factory able to turn out yearly thirty-five guns of the type required, or enough to arm the eighteen ports enumerated within ten years. We have established a plant for the manufacture of gun carriages which, with the aid of private establishments, can supply the carriages required as rapidly as emplacements for guns and mortars are completed. The developments of a satisfactory type of 12-inch disappearing gun carriages is alone lacking in the mechanism of coast defense, and without doubt American ingenuity will soon supply that desired feature.

$82,000,000 Required.

"But at only three of the eighteen ports under consideration have completed features of defense been established. New York has two 12-inch guns and sixteen 12-inch mortars, San Francisco has one 12-inch gun and sixteen 12-inch mortars, and Boston has sixteen 12-inch mortars in position. It rests with congress to determine by its appropriations the period which shall elapse before our coasts shall be put in a satisfactory condition of defense. The amount required for the eighteen ports is about $82,000,000, and the entire work can be completed within ten years.

Condition and Health of the Army.

An interesting feature of the report is the statement of the secretary that never in its history has the present condition of the army been surpassed. It is better fed, clothed and housed and the policy of promoting the personal comfort of the officers and men has resulted in a devotion that is everywhere apparent. The health record of the army for the year is the best annual statement ever consolidated from the returns of the medical officers and a significant decrease shown in the number of court-martials for the year corroborates the reports from all officers of a noteworthy improvement in the morals and discipline of the army.

London, Nov. 30.—Advices from Constantinople say that the situation in Turkey has reached a critical point. Within the next few hours either the sultan or the united powers whose warships are awaiting a permit for entrance through the Dardanelles must give way from the positions they have maintained since the ships reached the Mediterranean. The united powers have practically agreed that if the sultan does not issue the firmans allowing entrance through the straits of the extra guardships within twenty-four hours they will sail through without such permission. The British ambassador, Sir Philiip Currie, has so notified the sultan.

Turkey Renounces Responsibility.

In reply, Halil Rifat Pasha, the Turkish grand vizier, declares that if the united fleets of the powers shall make a demonstration at Constantinople, the porte will inform the powers that the Turkish government renounces all responsibility for the consequences, especially as regards the matter of protection to foreigners. This may either be taken as a threat on the part of Turkey that she will open fire on the warships, or that her murderous subjects will be turned loose with full instructions to continue the massacre not only of Armenians, but all foreign residents. The sultan asks for the withdrawal of the warships upon the plea that their presence before Constantinople would create rioting and bloodshed in that place.

Tired of Being Trifled With.

To this, however, Sir Philip Currie replied that he was tired of being trifled with and that Great Britain was acting entirely within her treaty rights and upon the assurance of a responsible member of the Turkish government that the porte had decided to grant permission for the extra guard boats to pass the Dardanelles. The sultan is said to be in a state of the greatest agitation at the intelligence that Sir Philip has telegraphed to Admiral Seymour, commanding the British Mediterranean squadron, requesting him to dispatch the gunboat Dryad to the Bosphorus at once. Sir Philip Currie is now awaiting instructions from Lord Salisbury, and the other foreign diplomats have in the meantime asked their respective governments for instructions.

Sultan Drinking Heavily.

London, Nov. 30.—The Constantinople correspondent of the Chronicle telegraphs that he learns from a palace friend that the sultan has been drinking heavily for days.

DUMAS' FUNERAL.

It Will Be Private—Family Will Pay All Expenses.

Paris, Nov. 30.—It is announced today that the funeral of M. Dumas will be private and that his family will meet all the expenses. This will be in accordance with the wishes of the deceased, who desired that his funeral should be a quiet one with no military honors, and with no speeches at the grave. Notwithstanding his wish that there be no flowers sent, his friends and admirers are sending great quantities of them to his residence.

BLEW OUT HIS BRAINS.

Robinson Could Not Legally Marry the Girl of His Choice.

Batavia, N. Y., Nov. 30.—R. W. Robinson, aged 28, a marble cutter, residing in Bergen, blew out his brains yesterday because he could not legally marry a young woman named Irene Davis, who lives in Akron, as a divorce secured from his wife some time ago in Dakota did not allow his marriage in this state.

Two Negroes Lynched.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 30.—Joe Robertson and Ozias McGaha, negroes, who were yesterday sentenced to twenty years each for assault in the circuit court at Lewisburg, were taken from the jail at Fayetteville last night by a mob of 300 men and hanged in the court house yard.

Admiral Carpenter Returns.

San Francisco, Nov. 30.—Rear Admiral Charles G. Carpenter of the United States navy, who for the last three years has been stationed in the Orient, arrived in San Francisco yesterday on the Gaelic. He returns upon orders from Washington to be soon retired.

AWFUL MINE DISASTER

Twelve Men Killed and Nine Hurt at Brewsters, N. Y.

Over One Hundred Tons of Rock Fall Into the Pit, Carrying Death and Destruction—The Work of Rescue—Hundreds Surround the Scene—Great Excitement.

Brewsters, N. Y., Nov. 30.—By a cave-in at the Tilly Foster iron mine yesterday afternoon twelve men were killed and nine others were seriously injured. There is great excitement in the vicinity, and hundreds of people surround the scene of the disaster. All the dead are horribly mangled. This is the second awful accident in this mine in twenty years. Yesterday afternoon about thirty men were at work loading the cars sent down by cable. While they were at work, the entire northeast wall, apparently containing over 100 tons of rock, fell into the pit. Immediately shrieks and groans showed the fearful nature of the accident. Of the thirty men, only ten escaped either death or horrible injury.

Taking Out the Dead.

William Aspell and four others ran, they know not whither, and escaped. Five Italians also got out alive. The cable and its car was not injured. Aspell and his companions, as soon as the boulders stopped rolling down the slope, looked over the wreck. They saw Patrick H. Murtha struggling to get up. He was pinned fast by a rock. They assisted him. The cable car brought down three Italians who rendered further assistance. Murtha was placed on the car, hoisted to the surface and taken home, where he died thirty minutes later. Just as the rescuing car started on the return trip, more rock fell and one of the three Italians mentioned above was killed. The second downward trip brought Patrick H. Kelley and James McGinn. They organized the miners left in the pit, secured tools and began to take out the bodies. The rocks were thrown off the bodies of the dead, all of whom were horribly mangled.

Viewed by the Coroner.

Superintendent Tompkins and Foreman Lynch received the bodies upon the surface and submitted them to the view of Coroner Penny and a jury, and then undertakers Knox and Smith cared for them as the relatives and friends directed. Darkness came on rapidly and the falling rocks continued to threated the rescuing party, when Mr. Tompkins ordered all hands to the surface. The work of taking out the bodies was resumed at daylight this morning.

The Previous Accident.

Nineteen years ago fifty tons of rock fell into the open pit at the Tilly Foster mine, killing six miners and maiming three others for life. The six who met death were so horribly crushed that their bodies were taken up in shovels, thrown into canvas sacks and hoisted to the surface. From that time until to-day the hanging walls, which rise 400 feet above the working level of the pit, have undergone daily inspection. If this inspection revealed any crevice or other sign of danger work below was abandoned until the threatening overhang had been dislodged. The extreme caution exercised prevented many accidents.

WILL FIGHT A DUEL.

Herr Andreansky's Challenge Accepted by Minister Perczel.

Budapest, Nov. 30.—In the lower house of the Hungarian diet yesterday Herr Andreansky reproached Herr von Perczel, minister of the interior, for assisting in electoral abuses. In replying to the charge made against him the minister said that the accusation was insolent, and used language that was offensive to Herr Andreansky and the house. After the sitting Herr Andreansky sent to Herr von Perczel a challenge to fight a duel, which was accepted. Herr von Perczel temporarily resigning his ministerial post, in order to be able to meet his adversary on the field of honor.

SCION OF AN ANCIENT HOUSE.

A Descendant of the Livingstones Dies in an Insane Asylum.

New York, Nov. 30.—Ancram Livingstone, 71 years old, a descendant of the Livingstones of Livingstone Manor, died in the Long Island State hospital, a hopeless lunatic. His body has been shipped to the family residence at Claverack, N. Y., where he will be buried. Mr. Livingstone was the son of Henry Livingstone, who was said at one time to be the richest man in New York, and he was a grandson to Gov. Van Ness. He came into possession of a large portion of his father's estate. He was careless and reckless in money matters, however, and piece by piece the vast estate dwindled away. More money came to him by the death of other prominent Livingstones, but this went as fast as the rest. Three successive fortunes were squandered. He married and had a large family. Six of his children survive him. After his money was gone he was compelled to look for work and at his advanced age this was difficult to find. An attack of the grip, it is said, affected his memory very much, and soon his condition was such that constant watch and care was necessary. He was taken to his son's house in Flatbush early last summer, and there he began to imagine that some one wanted to kill him. Acting under this delusion, it is said, he armed himself with a huge knife and chased the inmates of his house into the street. On August 13 last he was committed to the insane asylum, where he died of Bright's disease.

LOSS, $50,000.

500,000 Bushels of Coal Sunk in the Ohio River.

Pittsburg, Nov. 30.—Reports reaching this city are that the coal fleets now en route for southern markets on the Ohio river have again been attended with disaster. The latest accident reported occurred at Glass House riffle and was caused by the steamer Dauntless colliding with the towboat Onward. No satisfactory explanation has been received aside from the statement that the accident occurred in the fog. Several coal boats were sunk and a number of others set adrift. The Onward, it is said, lost her wheel. It is estimated that 250,000 bushels of coal were sunk at Dead Man's riffle Wednesday night and another 250,000 bushels were lost in the later accident, making a total loss close to $50,000.

UNITED STATES VS. CONDOR.

The Government Brings a Libel Suit for Injury to the Alert.

New York, Nov. 30.—An action for libel on the part of the United States government against the steam vessel Condor, of which William R. Grace & Co. are the agents, has been begun in the United States district court by United States District Attorney Macfarlane. The suit arises out of the collision of the Condor and the United States cruiser Alert at Guayaquil, Ecuador, on September 23, 1895. The Alert was damaged to the extent of about $6,000. Negligence and unskillful management on the part of the Condor are alleged.

BECAME SUDDENLY INSANE.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 30.—Mrs. J. R. Vodre, of Champlain, N. Y., became suddenly insane on a Chicago & Northwestern train near Janesville yesterday and leaped from the train when it was going at full speed. She was instantly killed. The woman was about 50 years of age and was on her way to Springfield, Minn., to live with her relatives. Accompanying her was her 10-year-old grandson, Frank Peters, who is now here. He appears dazed and will say but little in regard to the affair.

MANY ARRESTS MADE.

Colon, Colombia, Nov. 30.—A report is current here that the newly arrived laborers engaged to work upon the Panama canal at Culebra have become riotous, claiming that they ought to receive $1.50 per day instead of a smaller sum. One hundred soldiers were ordered to Culebra to quell the disturbance and preserve peace. Many arrests are said to have been made.

THE GRANT MADE BY THE
United States Government

Proving to Be a Boon to Suffering Humanity.

Tens of thousands of invalids have visited Hot Springs, Arkansas, almost despairing of recovery, but have been surprised at the wonderful cures effected, and have returned to their homes sound in mind and body. These celebrated waters, in curing physical ills, necessarily heal mental maladies, which arise from morbid conditions of the body or overwrought nervous forces. Too much cannot be said to induce those suffering with diseases that can be cured to try the efficacy of "Pura Blood." Under grant from the United States Government, the famous waters of Hot Springs, Arkansas, are used in its preparation. Try it, for it will cure you. "Pura Blood" is sold by all druggists at one dollar per bottle. Billups & Co., of 26 Cortlandt street, New York, are sole agents, and will send descriptive book free to any address.

Great Reduction in Time to California.

Once more the Northwestern Line has reduced the time of its trans-continental trains, and the journey from Chicago to California via this popular route is now made in the marvelously short time of three days. Palace drawing-room sleeping cars leave Chicago daily, and run through to San Francisco and Los Angeles, without change, and all meals en route are served in dining cars. Daily tourist sleeping car service is also maintained by this line between Chicago and San Francisco and Los Angeles, completely equipped berths in upholstered tourist sleepers being furnished at a cost of only $6 each from Chicago to the Pacific Coast. Through trains leave Chicago for California at six p. m. and 10.45 p. m. daily, after arrival of trains of connecting lines from the east and south. For detailed information concerning rates, routes, etc., apply to ticket agents of connecting lines or address: H. A. Gross, G. E. P. A., 423 Broadway, New York, or T. P. Vaille, S. E. P. A., 112 South Fourth street, Philadelphia, Pa. tf.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

The Supreme Court has decided that the borough act of 1891 is unconstitutional. Boroughs formed under that act are wiped out therefore, their organization being invalidated. This is a highly important decision, although lawyers who have given the case some study say that the decision affects only the boroughs of Asbury Park, Bradley Beach, Spring Lake, Point Pleasant and a few others along the coast. It does not, they also say, affect the boroughs of Roselle, Fanwood and others of Union county, since these were formed under the provisions of the law of 1878 and not under those of the law of 1891. At the same time it is not yet known just how far the principle laid down by the court with reference to the law of 1891 affects all the other borough acts on the statute book, and in consequence those banks and capitalists that have loaned money to boroughs for public improvements are very anxious to know whether their security is as good now as it was prior to this decision.—Elizabeth Journal.

THEATRICAL.

Minnie Lester and her famous band and orchestra will play an engagement of six nights and four matinees next week at Music Hall, opening in the funny comedy, Madge. Seats will be on sale on Friday morning at Leggett's drug store. The evening prices are 10, 20 and 30 cents, and the matinees 10 cents to all parts of the house for everybody. Ladies' tickets have been issued for Monday evening and will be distributed in all the houses throughout the city. Miss Lester's plays are Madge, The Danites, Ragged Jack, Danger's Friend, Little Counterfeiter, Molly Bawn, Little Bright Light, Mugg's Landing, and The Devil's Mine. All who hold ladies' tickets will do well to exchange them early.

There are at least a dozen laughs to the minute in "Eight Bells," as given by the Brothers Byrne, which will be presented at the Music Hall, Tuesday evening, December 3rd. The brothers are acrobats of considerable skill and pantomimists of unlimited resources. The surprises in the way of unexpected disappearances, somersaults into third story windows, vaulting over walls and through walls where there is apparently no opening, and innumerable other tricks of the nimble performers keep the audience wondering and laughing without cessation.

THE HOUR GLASS.

Time Honored Reverence in Which It Is Held.

Something of Its Mysterious Origin and Associations.

Lessons Which May Be Drawn From Its Infallibility.

Old Father Time displays the hour glass as an emblem of the speedy flight of years. It teaches none the less the brevity of human life. How quickly its atoms fall; how rapidly the period of our mortal existence hastens to its close. Brain throb and heart beat are but ticks which count the minutes as they go.

The pages of the daily press are filled with announcements of deaths, sudden and inexplicable; deaths of men cut down in their prime, of men we thought perfect pictures of health as we passed them on the street. Hurrying past on their missions of pleasure or profit; always in a rush they never stop or rest, they at length die in the harness. They illustrate this "age of progress"—progress toward the grave. Why did they die? Why were these men taken and others left who seem so inferior to them in physical strength? Because they did not take care of themselves. They did not heed that silent monitor, the hour glass of their physical constitution. They did not listen to the sound of its falling sand, nor heed the measure of its flow.

The merchant, the clerk, the bookkeeper, the professional man, the mechanic, the toiler at loom and spindle, the busy housewife and mother hurrying through the bustle of business, or work, never reflects how much vital energy they constantly use up. Each and all keep delving, toiling, buying, selling, struggling,—and the sands in the glass keep falling.

At length there is an end. The limit is reached; the sands are exhausted; "time is up;"—a mournful procession and a new-made grave.

It is the old, old story. They did not heed the lesson human experience has been teaching these many centuries.

Watch the hour-glass of your breath; heed its falling sands and count them as they go. Be wise in season; gird up that weakened spot; strengthen that tired nerve; put new vigor into weary brain, heart and muscle. How can it be done? By taking the remedy nature has provided, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It is surely king among blood and nerve remedies. It is best fitted to stay the hand of the destroyer. It does not hesitate but acts at once. It gives you health, keeps you strong and well. It cured Mr. Louis H. Moreau, who was formerly a faithful member of the police force of Fall River Mass., but who resigned his position to enter the livery stable business. He has taken five or six bottles of Dr. Greene's blood and nerve remedy for nervousness and weakness and found it invigorating and rejuvenating. He says that the effects were of much benefit to him when he was on the police force, and he believes they would have been more prompt for good, had he taken the medicine regularly instead of intermittently. Mr. Moreau's health is now good, but he says that in case of a return of nervousness or weakness he shall recommence taking the Nervura. His place of business is at 57 and 59 Flint Street, Fall River.

Try it if you are nervous, weak, tired and run down; if you pass restless or sleepless nights and wake with dull head, feeling tired, languid, without energy or ambition to take hold of your day's work. Take it for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, kidney or liver complaints, for rheumatism or neuralgia, indeed for any of the manifest evils which result from weaknesses and impure blood. Remember that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy never fails to cure.

This medicine is recommended by doctors, indeed, it is the discovery and prescription of a well-known physician. Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th st., New York City, the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. The Doctor can be consulted in regard to any and all cases, free of charge, personally or by letter.

A public meeting of the primary teachers union is being arranged to be held at an early date, at which time several promint speakers will take part.

A number of the local members of the T. A. B. society attended a dance Thursday evening given by the Father Matthew T. A. B. society at Junction. O'Reilly, of this city, furnished the music.

At the start in the contest between the Park Club team and the Cranford's last night the Plainfielders seemed to have glass arms, but in the second game they limbered up a little and broke even. The scores follow:

PUNTS AND KICKS.

W. H. Bannard, one of the half backs on the Princeton eleven, visited friends in Plainfield Thursday.

An entertainment is being planned by the Y. M. C. A. football eleven for this winter to raise funds for the fitting out of the team for the next season.

The Alis football team will meet an eleven at Scotch Plains this afternoon averaging about 128 pounds. The Alis team will be somewhat strengthened.

While the football game at Cranford was in progress Thursday afternoon, Captain McAdams, of the Battin High School eleven, received an injury that will incapacitate him for several weeks.

Auguste L. Saltzman, Jr., better known among his college friends at Lehigh University as "Bud," is home on his Thanksgiving vacation. Saltzman is the assistant manager of the Lehigh football team.

The Y. M. C. A. football eleven has played it last game this year. The season, as far as it went, was a very successful one, but even now greater plans are being laid for next year. It is to be hoped that the men from Plainfield, who have been playing on the Elizabeth A. C. team, can be persuaded to play with the Y. M. C. A's instead. There is plenty of other good material besides and Plainfield will have a team eminently able to hold its own against the surrounding clubs.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company has received a sample of the Cleveland Special for 1896.

Among the men that will take to regular track riding next year will be George Babcock, Patrick Marron, John Keefe and Mulford Giles.

While out riding yesterday Mr. Leeds, one of Plainfield's most enthusiastic wheelmen, had the frame of his wheel smashed. He escaped serious injury.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

While practicing the high jump in the University of New York gymnasium this week, Ralph Campbell, of Netherwood avenue, cleared the bar at five feet, five inches. It was his first attempt this winter.

Died at the Hospital.

Adam Utzinger, of McDowell street, died at the Muhlenberg hospital this morning at 10:30 o'clock from the effects of a fall received three weeks ago. He leaves a wife and three children. His funeral will be held Monday afternoon at two o'clock at the house and at three o'clock at the German Reformed church.

Received With Favor.

Arrangements are now being completed for the recital to be given by George Riddle in the Y. M. C. A. Hall December 6th. Mr. Riddle will present a varied programme which was received with marked favor by audiences in New York and Brooklyn last season.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

It will surely do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. Carrying Money.

You can judge well any man's character by the way he carries his money. He who has it rammed into any and every pocket, carelessly crumpled, and has difficulty in finding a note of any required denomination, is sure to be a spendthrift, and is a candidate for the poorhouse. He who carefully folds his notes, placing the different denominations together, and folds them in a pocketbook, from which he can at a moment's notice select any sum wanted, is quite as sure to be a close, successful man. His supreme thought—if such a person can have a supreme thought—is for himself. He is not a man to make sacrifices for any one but his royal self.—New York Press.

AN EXTRAORDINARY DIVORCE.

Both Parties In Interest Swore They Had Never Met Before.

"The annals of the divorce courts contain many curious histories," said an old lawyer, "but to me the most remarkable case I ever heard of was tried in Kings county, N. Y., a dozen years ago. Both parties were prominent in society, and for some time the matter was kept a secret. Mrs. Martin was a young wife and mother of one child when, in 1862, her husband enlisted in the Union army. She heard from him at intervals for more than a year, and then followed a long period of silence. Next she received intelligence of his death. Mrs. Martin donned widow's weeds, and while mourning her husband's death her child died. She then took up her residence with friends, until 1873, when she received the attentions of a Mr. Hyde, a well known business man and a widower with seven children. The courtship extended over a period of 11 months, during which time Mr. Hyde was informed of Mrs. Martin's former marriage, and 11 years after Martin's reported death they were married. Nothing happened to disturb their happiness until about ten years later, when Mr. Hyde informed her that Martin was living in the suburbs of Brooklyn with a wife and children. Investigations proved that the man did live in Brooklyn, as stated, and also that he had left the city in 1862 and entered the army.

"The case came up before the referee, and there Martin swore that he had never seen Mrs. Hyde; that he was a single man when he joined the army; that he married on his return for the first time and had since been a resident of Brooklyn and made no concealment of his marriage. When Mrs. Hyde was sworn, she called on God in the most solemn manner to witness that she had never seen Mr. Martin, and when the two were confronted with each other neither was in the slightest manner disconcerted and repeated their former denials of ever having met before.

"Former friends and acquaintances of both, however, swore that they had been married and were positive of their identity. After a careful investigation and long consideration the referee decided the preponderance of testimony to be against the defendant and passed an order, which was approved by the Brooklyn city court, annulling the marriage. Mrs. Hyde had no children by her second marriage. Friends volunteered assistance to enable her to carry her case to the superior court, but she concluded to abide by the decision of the referee."—Washington Post.

GOT THINGS MIXED.

Dr. Holmes and the Woman Who Had Not Read the Autocrat.

"I remember once in my experience," remarked a literary young woman, "of taking several ladies to call on the late Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes when I was in school in Boston. I had known the Holmeses since childhood and went there pretty much as I pleased and often took friends of mine with me to see the good doctor. On this occasion one of the ladies was a young married woman who had never read any of Dr. Holmes' books, and she insisted that I coach her a bit, so that she would not make any mistakes. I told her several titles and dwelt especially upon the 'Autocrat of the Breakfast Table,' because that was my favorite. She was an intelligent person and was a rapid learner, so that when we started out I felt perfectly sure that she would do me credit. Well, everything went swimmingly along, and she wisely kept silent on the book question, except to second the compliments of those of us who were conversant with the doctor's books—that is, swimmingly until just as we were leaving. Then she seemed to think she ought to say something, and she did. I was listening, as it happened, for I had grown a little careless and had thought she wasn't going to try herself.

"'Oh, doctor,' she said in a little burst of enthusiasm, 'I want to tell you how much I have enjoyed your books, and particularly the "Autograph of the Breakfast Table."'

"Well, I thought I should drop right through the floor, and I kind of gasped and waited to see what the doctor would do, but my alarm was needless. He simply smiled into her face and in his kindliest manner thanked her and said that many people thought the 'Autograph' was the best thing he had ever done. Think of that," concluded the young woman. "He even said 'Autograph' as she had said it, and she never knew the difference until we got outside, and then if she didn't know the difference I don't think I ever showed anybody there was any difference in anything."—Washington Star.

Oiled Brick and Sandstone.

Experiments made to ascertain the length of time that brick and sandstone are rendered waterproof or protected by oiling show some valuable results. The oils used were linseed oil, boiled linseed and the crude mineral oil known as "blue oil," and the exposure was on a roof fairly exposed to the sun and weather, the bricks being good, sound, machine made. It is stated that the amount of oil and water taken up by the sandstone was very much less than that absorbed by the bricks, although the area of the sandstone cubes was much the greater. Equal amounts of the raw and boiled oils were absorbed. The blue oil, however, was taken up in much greater quantity by both bricks and sandstone, but by the end of 12 months the whole of the 13½ ounces of blue oil had apparently evaporated, and the bricks had returned to their original state, but those treated with raw and boiled oils were unchanged. Finally it was seen that the sandstone cubes treated with raw and boiled oils returned to their original weights, but not appearing to have lost the good effects of the oils, being practically impervious.—New York Sun.

Willing to Do Business.

In these energetic, go ahead days we are continually hearing of some new and curious way of making money, but the following method is perhaps as ingenious as any previously devised.

A little boy entered a surgery the other day, when the village doctor was in attendance, and marching up to him whispered cautiously:

"Please, sir, mother sent me to say as how our Lizzie's got scarlatina awful bad, and, please, mother wants to know how much you'll give her to spread it all over the village."—London Tit-Bits.

—Notes and Queries

CONDITION OF BUSINESS

Volume of General Trade Shows a Falling Off.

Continued Reaction in Prices of Iron and Steel—Improved Demand for Boots and Shoes—Dry Goods Quieter—Higher Prices for Wool. Exports of Wheat.

New York, Nov. 30.—Bradstreet's today says: The volume of trade shows a falling off compared with the preceding week, largely owing to the intervention of the Thanksgiving holiday, but in part to the continued effect of mild weather east and south, storms in the central west, and the usual disinclination of buyers to add to stocks during the closing months of the year. There are 288 business failures reported throughout the United States this week, a noticeable falling off from the total one week before, 323, and even when compared with the total one year ago, 307. In the last week of November, 1893, there were 298 failures, and in the corresponding week of 1892 the total was 268. The most striking industrial feature is the continued reaction in prices of iron and steel, Bessemer pig being off 25c. and steel billets fractionally lower, with reactions in prices for wire, sheets and other forms. There is little likelihood of an increased demand or a reversal of the price movement prior to the middle of January. There is an improved demand for boots and shoes at Baltimore, Chicago and St. Louis, as well as some New England manufacturing centers, while at Philadelphia the demand is not so conspicuous as previously. The restriction of production by several tanneries tends to weaken the price of hides.

Stock Speculation.

Dry goods are quieter with the continued unseasonably mild weather and the revival of the holiday trade. The strength of cotton maintains the price of cotton goods. Higher prices for wool at London tend to revive interest here, and agents for dress woolens report new orders for spring delivery. Some New England woolen mills have contracted for about all they care to sell at present. Exports of wheat (flour included as wheat) from both coasts of the United States and from Montreal amount to 2,460,000 bushels, as compared with 2,916,000 bushels last week, 2,667,000 bushels in the week a year ago, 2,440,000 bushels two years ago, and 4,533,000 bushels in the week three years ago. Stock speculation at New York is waiting for the meeting of congress and for the beginning of the agitation over the currency, which is considered probable at this session. Prior to Thursday's holiday prices improved on short covering, induced by decline in exchange rates, the prospect of small gold exports, and the revival of speculative confidence in London. The leading industrial stocks, however, have been the objects of bear selling, based on reported attacks through the courts and unfavorable trade conditions. Railroad stocks are generally firm. The market as a whole is dull and narrow. Foreign exchange has declined on slack inquiry to 4.89 or a trifle lower. Engagements of specie for export this week were $2,900,000, of which $1,750,000 goes by to-day's steamer.

Bank Clearings.

Bank clearings throughout the United States amounted to $870,000,000 this week, and reflect rather more than the customary falling off incidental to Thanksgiving week, the decrease as compared with the preceding week amounting to 23 per cent. When compared with the total for the week one year ago the gain is only 8 per cent., and as compared with the week in 1893 the increase is only 10 per cent. At or about the close of 1892 there were reported some exceptionally large aggregates of bank clearings, so when we compare this week's total with that in the week three years ago the decrease is found to be 37 per cent. A comparison with the corresponding week in 1891 indicates a decrease this week of 13 per cent. The general tendency of prices of staples continues in line with that shown in two or three preceding weeks—a clear majority of those usually quoted showing decreases as compared with the week before, notably various forms of steel and iron, including wire; hides, live stock, wheat flour, indian corn, oats, pork, lard, coffee, petroleum and print cloths. Practically unchanged quotations are announced for lumber, coal, leather, naval stores, leaf tobacco, sugar and wool. The more conspicuous advances appear to be confined to wheat, ⅛c. a bushel; cotton, ⅛c. a pound and some of the cheaper grades of paper stock, fractionally.

If that is impossible, I give notice now that I shall not accept the office if elected, and I desire that you make this notice public in order that another name may be substituted if it is so desired, or, at any rate, in order that no one need vote for me with the expectation that I shall serve even if elected. BARBARY.

By Mrs. E. V. WILSON.

[Copyright, 1895, by the Author.]

"Yes, I was at his first wife's funeral, an if anybody hed told me that in a little more'n a year I'd 'a' ben his second I'd said they was crazy. You see, my third cousin, Marthy Jane Holly, she that was Marthy Jane Spaldin, lived in his neighborhood, an I was visitin o' her when his first died, an Marthy Jane tuk me along to the funeral. It was a dreadful dull day in February, an that muddy the team could hardly pull us. An when we druv up to the house I thought it was jist about the lonesomest place I hed ever seen. The house was a great, big, two story frame with nine winders an a big front door, an the yard hedn't a tree or bush in it. 'Law sakes, Marthy Jane!' says I. 'What a barn o' a house!'

"'Well,' says she, 'it's bran new. They jist moved in it this fall.'

"There was a sight o' folks in the house, an I got in somehow 'mong the women, an tried to look round some, but I got sort o' interested in the talk. One o' the women said, 'What a pity t'was Miss Hillyer hed to die jist as she got settled in the new house.' An another one said she'd noticed many a time when folks built fine houses one or t'other of 'em died. Then a right old woman spoke up, an says she: 'That's nonsense. Matildy Hillyer killed herself, so she did. Her an them two slips o' girls done all the work fer the men that built this yer house an fer the hands that worked the farm, an the las' time I see her she told me she made a hundred yards o' rag carpet, wove it an all.'

"'What made her?' interrupted another woman.

"'Nobody made her,' said the old woman. 'She's that bigoted. I tole her 'twouldn't pay, but she said squire was sot on hevin the biggest house on the prairie, an they got the work done cheaper by boardin o' the men, an she's boun to hev carpets'—

"'I don't care,' broke in my third cousin, Marthy Jane Holly. 'It's her own fault. If she'd managed the squire right, he'd never built sich a house. She tole me she wanted a littler one, handy an full o' closets, but the squire wanted the big one. Now I say if she'd managed'—

"'Oh, pshaw!' said the old woman. 'Miss Holly, you dunno what you's talkin 'bout. The woman that'll manage Sam Hillyer ain't born.'

"At this minit a man came to the door o' the kitchen where we was sittin an said, 'All as want to look at the corpse, please walk in.' I went in with the rest, an tuk a look at the pore critter, an went on through the room where she lay, across a great hall, into another big room, an I thought a hundred yards o' carpet wouldn't begin to cover all them floors. My, but they looked cold an dreary, an I said to Marthy Jane Holly, when we got back to their cozy little house, that it 'peared to me I'd freeze to death there.

"Well, when my visit was out, I went home, an I declare I never thought once of him, but along about Christmas what does Marthy Jane Holly's man do but come down to our house with him in a sleigh. You might 'a' upsot me with a feather when they walked in.

"You see, I was nigh on to 35, an not bein extra good lookin I'd 'bout concluded nobody'd ever want me fer a wife, but the long an short of it was, he had heard about me, an he said he was lonesome an his children needed lookin after, an I tell you he's a good talker, an Marthy Jane Holly came to see me an said all he needed was the right kind o' a woman to manage him; that he was a good provider, an had about as good a farm as there was in the county, an my brother Jim, as I was livin with, an Cynthy, his wife—she was Cynthy Smith, ole Tom Smith's daughter, you know—they said it was a splendid chance fer me. They knowed I could get along with him, an so I giv' in, but I sort o' mistrusted that air sot mouth o' his all the time. But, as I said, I 'greed to hev him at last, an we was married at brother Jim's early in March, an Jim an Cynthy giv' me a right nice weddin dinner. I will say that fer 'em, an, what's more, I allays will believe they thought it was a good thing fer a old maid like me to git to be Mrs. Squire Hillyer.

"I felt a little jubious about his children wantin a stepmother. You see, the oldest girl, Emly, was about 18, an I thought maybe she liked bein boss, but laws, she 'peared glad when I come, an had a real nice supper ready, an Barbary, the next girl, was a-smilin, too, an I heerd her tell the boys—there was three o' them, from 14 down to 10 years old—that she liked my looks.

"Well, I kin tell you, it wasn't long afore I found out that managin him was no easy matter, an Emly was his picter. When he wanted a thing done, it had to be done his way, an she was like him, an so they didn't agree very well, an he hevin the power she hed to giv' up, an so she was most allays in a bad humor. The boys, too, especially Steve, the oldest o' the three, was everlastin quarrelin. So I begun to think afore many weeks that I'd better staid single, even if it wasn't pleasant livin with sister-in-laws, an if it hedn't been fer Barbary I dunno what I'd 'a' done, but Barbary—dear, dear, I choke up yet when I think o' her. She was so pretty, with her big blue eyes an white skin an red mouth.

"I can't somehow help likin good lookin folks, an I do think it's a real misfortune fer a girl to be ugly. Mebbe I'm wrong, but I know I allays felt it was to me, an the minit I see Barbary I liked her, an the more I see her the more I liked her. She was that sweet in her ways, allays givin up to Emly, an a-callin o' me 'ma' from the start, which is more than Emly ever has to this day. An I soon see she was his favorite. Not as he said so, but I could see his eyes follerin her as she went singin round the house, an then she never said nothin back to him, no odds what he said, an Emly, pore thing, never could hold that sharp tongue o' hern. Not that she wasn't right often, an him wrong, but what's the use o' bangin your head agin a stone wall, I say?

"I couldn't help laughin to myself a little, fer all it hurt mighty bad, when I thought o' Marthy Jane Holly an Cynthy talkin o' managin him. I did try to better things at first. There was so much hard work. You see, there was nine in the family, countin the two hands, an allays eight or nine cows to milk, an chickens an the garden, an we women hed all them to 'tend to, an I says one day: 'If you'd let the girls hev part o' the butter money for theirselves, don't you think they'd like it? Girls wants a little money sometimes.' He jist gimme one look out o' them steely eyes o' his, an says he: 'The butter an eggs has allays bought the groceries. You better not be puttin fool notions in them children's heads,' an his mouth shet down like a rattrap, an you better know I hushed up, but I kep' a-thinkin. Wimmen will, you know, an I thought: 'He calls 'em children. Well, I ken tell him they're past that, an if I ain't fooled Emly'll show him pretty soon,' fer I'd see her an one o' the hands together a good deal. He was a nice enough young man, so I didn't meddle. What'd ben the use? Well, after awhile I found out that Barbary wanted a organ awful bad, an the school miss that taught the deestric school, where the three boys went to school all winter, hed got the spring term, an wanted to board at our house, an said if Barbary hed a organ she'd l'arn her to play fer her board. So I thought I'd tackle him agin, an I was as cunnin as I knowed how to be. I said how good Barbary was, an how she could sing like a bird, an how we'd all enjoy music, an it wouldn't cost much. But, laws, I might as well talked to the wind. He sot that mouth o' hisn an says, says he: 'My girls can play on the washboard. That's the insterment their mother hed, an I won't hev no finniky school misses boardin here, puttin things in their heads. There's a leetle more o' that now than I fancy.'

"He was a nice enough young man."

"That's a hit at me, you see; but, laws, I didn't care. I guess I was too old to be in love when I married, an somehow he didn't make me feel very sentimental, as they call it. I sot out to do my duty, though, an I tried to do it. I told Barbary it was no use talkin 'bout a organ, an she cried an said: 'If pap was a pore man, I wouldn't want it. But he's rich, an he might let us be a little like other folk, an ma,' she went on, 'if my mother hedn't hed sich a hard time I believe she'd ben a-livin yet, but I guess pap didn't mean it. I ought to be ashamed.' An she wiped her eyes an went up stairs. Well, things went on the same way, but I was gettin to think lots o' the children. The boys was rough sometimes, but I allays liked boys an never told tales, an when Steve wanted me to praise his colt—fer his pap hed giv' him a fine one—or Bob wanted me to giv' his calf more'n its share o' milk, or little Tom wanted anything I could get fer him, I allays humored 'em, an I knew they liked me if I wasn't their own mother.

"We hed an awful lot o' work the summer a year after I went there. He put in a big crop, fer he said he was bound to pay fer a 20 acre pasture he hed jest bought, an so we hed to be up airly an late. You see, he got two more cows an hired another hand, an I declare it was like a big hotel, only I believe it was harder. An I thought he'd work' hisself to death, too, fer there wasn't a lazy bone in his body, an the boys—I was sorry fer the little fellers. It seems to me folks thinks children never gets tired. Why, I've knowed Bob to be that wore out that he'd crawl up stairs at night on his hands an knees, but I couldn't do nothin only be good to 'em.

"Well, one day he fell out with the hand that I'd seen Emly liked, an turned him off—right in harvest time too. An that didn't help matters, fer Emly sulked, an the man was a good worker, an his place couldn't be filled. An so the squire was cross as a bear. An him an Emly had several fusses, an at last she told him she was goin to marry Sam White—that was the feller's name. My! I'll never ferget that time. But it's no use talkin it over. Emly faced her pap to the last, an me an Barbary cried. An it ended in Emly packin up her things an goin to one of the neighbors. An I must say I don't believe what came afterward would have happened if Emly hadn't aggervated him the way she did.

"Of course it wasn't any easier on me an Barbary after Emly was gone, though I do say the hired men was awful clever, helpin us whenever they could, an I says to Barbary one day, 'Don't you fall in love with any one o' them boys, fer I can't spare you.' An she laughed, an her face turned red. An you could 'a' upsot me with a feather when she says, cried like: 'I won't, ma. I'm engaged to Phil Thomas.' 'Barbary Hillyer,' says I, 'you ain't no such thing!' 'Yes, I am, ma,' she says, 'but we're goin to wait till he's o' age. He's only turned 20 now.' 'Dear me,' thinks I, 'what will the squire say?' You see, I never'd thought o' Barbary carin fer anybody.

RHEUMATISM POISON

The Only Cure for Rheumatism is to Get Rid of the Poison.

THE KIDNEYS FILTER IT OUT

Uric Acid in the Blood. Its Origin and Dangers.

FACTS ABOUT RHEUMATISM.

Well Kidneys Prevent Rheumatism—Sick Kidneys Make It.

REAL CURE FOR RHEUMATISM.

The reason why rheumatism is so hard to cure is because so few people understand it.

It is not a nerve or muscle disease. It's a blood disease.

What causes it is poison in the blood

The name of this poison is uric acid. It should be kept out by the kidneys.

The only cure for rheumatism is to get rid of this poison.

The only way to do this is to make the kidneys do it.

The only medicine specially prepared to make the kidneys do it, is Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

Uric acid comes from waste matter in the system. It is collected by the blood on its return trip to the heart. It is filtered out of the blood by the kidneys.

As long as this is done by your kidneys you can't have rheumatism, for there will be no uric acid to make it.

But as soon as the kidneys begin to neglect their duty, rheumatism sets in.

The exciting causes of rheumatism are cold, damp, chills, etc. This has a tendency to clog the kidneys; to prevent them from filtering out the uric acid.

Some people never have rheumatism all their lives. Their sick kidneys affect them in other ways. They get Bright's disease and other kidney troubles, sleeplessness, anæmia, chlorosis, nervous headache, neuralgia, etc.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills will cure them as well as the rheumatics.

Folks who are subject to rheumatism should take particular pains with themselves. Whenever they have been exposed to catching cold they should take a few doses of Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

This may not cure the cold, but it will probably prevent rheumatism. It will prevent clogged kidneys, and help them to filter the blood.

Pure blooded persons never have rheumatism because there is no uric acid in their blood to make it with.

Your rheumatism can be very easily cured if you will take Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills. They tone up your kidneys and make them filter the uric acid out of your blood.

This is not hard to understand when you come to think of it.

The wonder is that it was not generally understood before.

Physicians understand it and recommend Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills for rheumatism and for all disorders of the kidneys and blood.

They understand the immense importance of having pure blood. They know that the kidneys filter the blood when they are well. They know what wonderful curative effects Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills have on sick kidneys.

And they recommend Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

So do all who have used them.

The pills are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. They are pleasant to take and the good effects are almost immediate.

They give you a feeling of renewed brightness, frashness and strength, and causes pains, aches and sickness to vanish.

A few doses will relieve. A few boxes will cure.

Sold by all druggists or mailed prepaid for 50c a box.

Interesting pamphlet on rheumatism and kidney troubles, "A Filter for Your Blood," mailed free on request. Hobb's Medicine Co, Chicago or San Francisco.

MAKES PEOPLE WELL

Most Remarkable Remedy in the World.

One True Medicine for Lost Nervous Strength.

Cures Effected by Paine's Celery Compound.

What Scientific Research Has Accomplished.

Proved By Success Where All Else Has Failed.

There is one true specific for diseases arising from a debilitated nervous system, and that is the Paine's celery compound so generally prescribed by physicians. It is probably the most remarkable remedy that the scientific research of this country has produced. Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., of Dartmouth College, first prescribed what is now known the world over as Paine's celery compound, a positive cure for dyspepsia, biliousness, liver complaint, neuralgia, rheumatism and kidney troubles. For the latter Paine's celery compound has succeeded again and again where everything else has failed.

Washington correspondents have recently given it a great deal of attention since the most wonderful cure effected in the case of Commodore Howell.

The medical journals of the country have given more space in the last few years to the many remarkable cases where the use of Paine's celery compound has made people well than to any other one subject.
